What Private Maguire Says!

"Och! it is nate to be captain or colonel,
D—! a bit would I want to be higher.
But to rust as a private I think's an infernal Predicament surely," says Private Maguire.

"They can go spar'kin' and playin' at billiards,
With money to spend for their slightest desire,
Loafin' and aftin', and drinkin' at Willard's,
While we're on the pickets," says Private Maguire.

"Livin' in clover, they think it's a thrille
To stand out all night in the rain and the mire,
And a rebel hard by with a villainous rifle,
Just ready to pop ye," says Private Maguire.

"Faith, now, it's not that I'm after complainin', I'm spilin' to meet ye, Jeff Davis, Esquire!
Ye blaggard! it's only I'm weary of thrainin',
And thrainin', and thrainin'," says Private Maguire.

"O Lord, for a row! but Maguire, be aisy,
Keep yourself sweet for the enemy's fire,
McClellan's the saplin' that shortly will plaze ye
Be the holy St. Patrick!" says Private Maguire.

"And, lad, if ye're hit, (O, bedad, that infernal Jimmy O'Dowd would make up to Maria!)
Whether ye're captain or major or colonel,
Ye'll die with the best, then!" says Private Maguire—Faithy Fair!

Scraps.

"Well, George, how do you find your profession?" asked a friend of a young lawyer.
"Alas, sir, I find my profession better than my practice."

Josey, being rather remiss in his school
lessons, the teacher remarked, "Why Josey,
you have not a very good memory, have you?"
"No ma'am," said he, hesitating, "but I have got a first rate forgettery!"

them.

FLOWER GARDENS. Every place should have its flower gardens in front of the doors.
The character and respectability of people is easily discerned by this feature.

As the snow melts upon the mountains
from the rain that trickles down their sides,
even so is beauty washed from off the cheeks
by tears; and neither the one nor the other restores itself again forever.

The difference (according to the Boston Transcript) between a taxidermist and a tax-gatherer, is this, saith the philosopher: the former stuffs the skin, the latter skins the stuff.

The lays of the nightingale may be very delightful to a well-fed man, but the "lays"
of a hen are liked better by a hungry one.

It is a truth not often realized, that men
must be already wise in order to love wis-

The disposition to give a cup of cold wa-

the finest intellect. Stanan has a fine intellect
but not the image of God.

"Good morning, Smith, you look sleepy."
"Yes," replied Smith, "I was up all night."
"Up where?"
"Up stairs in bed."

The habit of taking things good-naturedly
is not so difficult to acquire. A little patience,
a little self-control, a little generous feeling,
and the work is done. But how much that is truly blessed springs from it! Flowers seem to grow spontaneously on the path of the cheerful.

ROLL OF HONOR.

Quincy Soldiers in Uncle Sam's Service.

Once more we present our readers with the list of the Quincy soldiers. Since we published it, one fortnight ago, we have added many names and made several corrections. The list now contains the names of two hundred and fifty-three different persons who have enlisted in the government service
since the rebellion, and we believe it to be very correct.

Eyes

(all the last week's butter came to,) and, as they walked out of the shop, it is hard to say which looked the most delighted with the bargain. "Ah," thought I, "a little child shall lead them." Ah, these children!—little witches!—pretty even in all their thoughts and absurdities!—winning even in their sins and iniquities! See, for example, yonder little fellow in a naughty fit; he has shaken his long curls over his deep blue eyes, the fair brow is bent in a frown, the rose-leaf is pushed up in infinite defiance, and the white shoulder thrust naughtily forward. Can any but a child look so pretty even in its naughtiness? Then comes the instant change; flashing tears and smiles—as the good comes back all in a rush, and you are overwhelmed with protestations, promises and kisses. They are irresistible, too, these little ones. They pull away the scholar's pen; tumble about his papers; make comers out of his books; and what can he do? They tear up newspapers; litter the carpets; break, pull, and upset, and then jabber their unintelligible English in self defence; and what can you do for yourself?

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, April 5th, 1862.

BORN TO MASTER, OR NOBLESSE.

EXHIBITIONS. Our citizens have enjoyed one excellent entertainment, given by the Sabbath School connected with the Universalist Society, and we are now promised another by the Adams Literary Association, a notice of which is given in another column.

The Sabbath School Exhibition, on the evening of Fast Day, was a perfect success; everybody was delighted with it. Of course everybody will go next Friday evening, to see if the Adams Literary Association can beat the Universalists, as those Societies are famous for the excellence of their entertainments.

DIVIDENDS. The Quincy Stone and Mt. Vesta Banks, have declared semi-annual dividends of 3 per cent, payable on Monday next.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE. At a convention of the School Committee and Selectmen, held March 22d, Rev. J. D. Wells was elected to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. James A. Stetson.

FALL RIVER LINE TO NEW YORK. Gotham city may be reached by various routes; but commend us to that over the Fall River road; it is safe, pleasant and expeditious. The cars on this route leave Boston at 5 o'clock, p. m. every day, (Sundays excepted) and reach Fall River at 7, where the passengers take the boats, and if so inclined, may partake of a substantial supper before retiring to their berths, from which they are not disturbed until they arrive in New York—a journey of about twelve hours. Every arrangement of this Company is under the best of management. The boats are floating palaces—affording all the conveniences and comforts to be found in our first class hotels; and the Commanders are gentlemen, in every sense of the word—kind, and attentive to the wants of those who have placed themselves under their care. Captain Brown, of the Bay State, especially enjoys this reputation in an eminent degree; there is no navigator on the Sound, in whom the travelling community have greater confidence; prudent, watchful, nothing escapes his vigilant eye, that will in any way contribute to the safety and comfort of his passengers; his boat is a perfect model of neatness and order. Our friends journeying thitherward, we would advise to try this line, and the hospitalities of Captain Brown are sure they will bear us testimony in all that we have said.

DEATH OF A QUINCY VOLUNTEER. A few weeks since we stated through the columns of our paper that there were only two Quincy men hurt in the battle at Newburn, (N. C.) and those only slightly wounded; but it now becomes our painful duty to record something more serious. James Ryan, an intelligent and enterprising youth of seventeen years, a private in Co. H 23d Reg., while nobly defending the flag of liberty and fighting for the common good of his country, was instantly killed by being shot through the forehead. May he rest in peace. He was evidently shot in the commencement of the fight, as upon examining his cartridge-box it was found minus only three rounds. Upon the reception of this sad news flags were hoisted at half-mast. His parents have sent for his remains, which upon their arrival will be duly interred. A large number of friends and relatives mourn his loss; yet while they mourn they are comforted with the thought that he died a noble death, and a firm and true friend to the cause of freedom.

EXAMINATION OF RECRUITS. The medical examination of recruits for the army is performed with amazing rapidity by surgeons, who understand the business, as follows:

The recruit is denuded of all clothing but trousers. Now stand on tip-toe—raise both hands above your head, close together, palms outward—stretch to full height—now sink upon your haunches—keeping on tip-toe, now at a spring stretch at full length. No man who is defective in point of muscle can go through with these postures without showing his weakness. The doctor then traces gently the chest, and by a peculiar method of touch ascertains the presence or absence of any aneurisms of the larger veins or arteries, and a thump on either lung reveals the condition of these organs. In half a minute the question is settled, and the man is accepted or rejected.

Army Correspondence.

NEWBURN, (N. C.) March 18, 1862.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

In my last I promised to give you some idea of Roanoke Island, but we were ordered off so soon that I did not get a chance to look round much.

Monday, March 9th—we received orders to start and sail out of Croton Sound, and anchor in Pamlico Sound for the night. It was rather a raw day, wind blowing hard, and rather a difficult Sound to sail through, but yet we went safely through without getting aground. We finally came to anchor with three heavy schooners attached, when a heavy squall took us, and before we could get our light anchor out to help us, our cable parted, and away went our heaviest anchor. We cast off the three schooners we had in tow, and soon got our anchor out and rested safely through the night.

The next morning the whole fleet started, and arrived off Hatteras just as the sun was setting; and it was as calm and warm as a June day in Massachusetts. We lay at anchor that night, and the next morning, bright and early, we started for Newburn. It was a splendid sail up the Sound and also through the Neuse river, and that night we anchored within about five miles of Newburn. The next morning preparations were made for landing troops, although not until we had given the rebels a few feelers from our gunboats. We were towed towards the shore in our surf boats by the pilot boy; and soon we were cast off and ordered to pull our boats as near as we could and then wade ashore. We soon ran on the flats and such a time to see who should plant the first colors was really amusing. Our Colonel jumped overboard, (where the water was up to his waist,) with the colors following, and paddled for the shore as fast as possible. We were a little late to get the first but at any rate we got the second.

We were soon formed into regimental line, and away we moved although very slow. It now commenced raining and by the looks bid fair to be a rainy day, but yet, nothing daunted, we moved on through the mud and thick forest, but soon we came to a camp that had been deserted, and from appearances in great haste, for everything was lying scattered to the winds. This camp had been a rendezvous for the cavalry, some two hundred, as near as we could judge. We started on again and traveled some three or four miles when we came to a breastwork, which, if the rebels had held the position, would have given us a good cutting up before we could have taken it. We marched a little to the rear and rested and took some dinner. After about an hour's rest we were again started; it still kept on raining a little and we were wet through, sore-footed and weary; but yet we were all willing to follow our officers; we kept moving slowly and that night we encamped in the woods and got what rest we could, although it rained considerably hard at intervals. Our regiment had the post of honor for that day, being the advance guard, and therefore a body guard for our noble General Borside.

The next morning we were up bright and early and soon we emerged from the woods and took up our line of march, but we had not gone a great way when we came to an obstruction in the road by the felling of a lot of trees that had been cut down by the rebels the night before; we now formed a line of battle deploying to the right and left, and soon the battle was commenced by a shell from the rebel battery, and then we gave them one in return which made them stick their eyes out. We were soon ordered to move forward in the line and we did it with the same coolness as though it was a battalion drill. We were soon halted and the balls came whistling over our heads like a lot of double-bees. The first man wounded was in our company, a private belonging to Taunton, he was wounded in the shoulder. We then got the order to lay down, but in a few minutes we got the order to raise up and move forward, and when we halted we were in full view of the entrenchments; we were then ordered to halt, lay down and commence firing. We were under fire about two hours and only had three wounded in our company, two Quincy men. The rebels raised the white flag just before retreating, and then fired one volley at us after that, and away they scampered and we followed. The report is that we took some four hundred prisoners. After resting a short time in the entrenchments, we pushed onward and early in the afternoon we came in sight of Newburn; but to our sorrow they had set fire to the railroad bridge so as to make good their escape, but our boats came up and carried us across, and we are now encamped in the same tents that a few days before the enemy thought would be an impossibility for the Yankees to take.

The weather is very warm and pleasant. As for our total loss it is impossible for me to tell, but our own regiment lost nine killed and about thirty wounded. More anon.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, APRIL 30, 1862.

Two important matters are before Congress, growing out of the war—Taxation and Emancipation. That we are to have a direct tax is conceded as a necessity; and one on an ad valorem principle would seem the fairest. The abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia is one of the great events that there, and slavery emancipation around the portals of the National Capital will be a popular measure with the loyal people of our country. It is admitted as our victorious arms advance in rebel territory, commenced should follow the flag—but if the war is protracted, then, as a military necessity, confiscation and emancipation will also follow as a sequence. No matter what party we belong, the rebellion must be subdued; and if the negroes are made free, the Southern people must thank themselves for it. At the same time the rights of all Union men in the rebel States should be respected. These are difficult matters to settle, and they require wise heads to do it. We cannot look to adjustment from the ultra leading men of either party. It must be done by liberal and conservative legislation; and that is the only way we can win the war.

But little has been heard of late from General McClellan, who has been compared without any justice, to Washington. The comparison cannot hold good, for his position is the reverse of Washington. The army of the Freedom of his Country was contending for freedom—badly clothed and paid. He was always moving from place to place, and had superior numbers to contend with. Washington struck effective blows, gaining victory after retreating foe. McClellan with forty times Washington's means has made no such movement; and when he does, the country will do him the justice, and not till then.

The backwardness of spring puts somewhat a damper on business operations, which have been quiet the past week. Money is too plenty and is obtained at low rates. The payment of bank dividends on and after Monday, will make the financial market more easy for a season.

Many matters of interest are before the Legislature. A bill is travelling rapidly through its stages in relation to banks, legalizing the suspension of specie payments until Feb. 1st, 1863. The subject of Horse Railroads is a rich theme for State legislation this winter. As the acts of Horse Railroad Corporations are now formed, the Selectmen of towns have too much power. The proper way is to erect a Board of Commissioners, authorized to settle in their own way, all matters in dispute. As the law works now, it is like the handle of a jug, all on one side of municipal officers. The Hingham and Quincy Turnpike and Bridge Bill is recommended to ascertain if there is any law in force by which the Corporation named in the Bill, can recover of the Counties therein named any different amount as damages than the Bill provides for.

MISSING VESSELS.—Probable loss of 120 Lives. The Gloucester Telegraph says the gale of the 24th and 25th of February last has proved most disastrous to the Gloucester fishing fleet, and from present advices the loss of life will be very great, largely exceeding that of any previous season.

There are now thirteen vessels which have not been heard from since the storm, and we fear, never will be. The probability is that most of the vessels, if not all, came in contact with one another in the blow, and were at once sunk together on the bank. The hair breadth escapes of others from collision, leads every one to suppose that this was the manner of their destruction, although none may live to tell the story.

The vessels now missing were some of the finest and strongest of our fleet, and were manned by one hundred and fifteen to one hundred and twenty men, among which were some of the best fishermen in the place. A large portion of them leave families, and it has been estimated that as many as two hundred children will be made orphans by this disaster.

A NEW CANDIDATE FOR PUBLIC FAVOR.—"The National Flag." We have received No. 1, volume I, of a paper bearing the above title, published at Norwich, (Ct.) It is handsomely got up—the mechanical execution is in good taste, and the columns well filled with choice reading matter—original and selected—which places it among the best of that class of papers, intended for the family circle; we like its appearance much. It professes to be neutral in its character; free to discuss all public questions of importance. We hope the publishers will stick to that text; for we should like to see, before we leave this vale of tears—an independent newspaper. Hurrah for the "National Flag!" may it float triumphantly over the whole people; a symbol of our union and strength, and a terror to sectional agitators, and all evil workers against our glorious Union.

THE "OLDEST INHABITANT."—The New York Courier des Etats Unis contains the following:

"There is living in Oswego, New York, a man named Peter Roszell, who is not less than one hundred and eighty years old. He was born in Brooklyn in 1743. He lives with his second wife, who is only sixty-three years old, and consequently fifty-five years younger than himself. He had from his first marriage fifteen children and ten from his second, a grand total of twenty-five, all of whom are now living. The eldest is ninety-two years of age, the youngest forty-two. He was the father of the age of seventy, his wife being then thirty-one. The said Peter is in the enjoyment of good health, and visits his neighbors, and his sight and hearing are not the least impaired. He has smoked for the last hundred years, and it may be calculated he has consumed more than a thousand pounds of tobacco during his lifetime."

Lines

SUGGESTED BY THE DEATH OF MRS. LOUISA M. JEWETT:
Who died at Worcester, March 14, aged 44, years, 5 months and 14 days.

Hopes bright, and aspirations beautiful were thine! And though blasted by the rough hand of time and disease, yet thy soul, noble and good, has lost none of its intrinsic value. We recall those happy days, when buoyant and free, we planned life's golden future; dear in anticipation—which ever beckons on the youthful and inexperienced—the full realization of which is seldom obtained.

But when health fails and reason at intervals deserts its throne, losing power of control;—then—Oh! then, from the dearest hearthstone and the most sacred and fragrant flowers of friendship and love, will go forth as a reality to the afflicted one, the odor of distrust, discontent and unhappiness.

And didst thou dream in thy wanderings, my dear, childhood friend, that the future would be more happy for thee? That there thou couldst more freely drink in the sunlight of God's Eternal Love?

Time and custom have told forth thy departure, and the sad announcement has stirred deep the fountains of many hearts; the sincerity and appreciation of thy virtues will ever be fondly cherished: A strange power comes over us! we must now look heavenward for thee! The vacant seat—the firm grasp of affection—the expressive countenance—ALL, all, reminds us of thy absence; we shall miss thee—Oh! so much.

But we will not wish thee back again in thy diseased earthly garments; but will weave around thy memory fresh laurels of love and ever think of thee, as the true-hearted and sincere friend.

In her childhood's sunny hours,
In her girlhood's golden prime;
Never bird among sweet flowers,
Better loved a genial clime.

And again when loved had bound her,
By its deathless tie to earth;
Still shadowless around her,
Clung the same glad guileless mirth.

Then alas! life's fitful changings,
Sway'd the fine elastic mind;
And gloomy thoughts were ranging,
Indistinct and undefined.

The harp strings thrill'd and quiver'd,
Their vibrations soft and low;
And now fate's hand has shiver'd
The fair structure at a blow.

Out of suffering cometh mercy—
And our Father knoweth best
How to draw the best out of us;
From each throbbing, bleeding breast.

To the loved one rest is given,
In a happier, lovelier clime;
You will meet again in heaven,
In his own appointed time.

Parents with footsteps tending,
Downwards toward the tomb;
Brothers and sisters blending,
Your tears midst the gloom.

Fond husband and sweet daughters,
Bow'd down 'neath this sad blow;
You are drinking Marah's waters,
And the draught is bitter now.

But there cometh a bright morrow,
Ever after darkest night;
Trust God in thy deep sorrow,
Strong in His sacred might.

He will heal the broken hearted!
Lead the travellers safely home;
Never more to be parted,
Where death may never come.

CAROLINE A. HAYDEN, Boston.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT. A letter has been received by the subscriber, from Dr. Howe, expressing warm feelings of gratitude to the ladies of Quincy, for their donations to the Sanitary Commission, of bedding, clothing, &c., for the use of the Army Hospitals, sent October, 1861.

He also states that in his opinion the time of "dire necessity" for such contributions has passed, yet there is a real need of cash, to pay those employed as inspectors, to insure the right and prudent distributions of such means, as are already at their disposal, and to prevent any gross abuse or waste of what has been so freely given.

If there are any ladies, or gentlemen, who feel disposed to respond to this appeal, for this important object, I will gladly receive and forward, any sums, however small, that may be contributed, at my store, Washington street.

QUEEN VICTORIA. The London Spectator says: "The Queen's grief is inconsolable, and her depression is said to be regarded by the court with the deepest sympathy, not now unmingled with some anxiety. All the official allusions confirm this rumor."

PETITIONS have been presented to Congress from shipowners and builders, requesting the passage of an act prohibiting the export of ship timber. The petitioners state that such timber is becoming scarce and high in price, owing to large orders received for it from abroad.

SUBTERRANEAN DISTURBANCE. One of the most singular abnormal occurrences of the earthquake order which has recently occurred in this vicinity, has just been related to us by Mr. John E. Parry, who lives in Lakeville, four miles east of Myricks' station. Soon after leaving his house last Sunday afternoon, and at about three o'clock, he heard an unusual noise, which at first sounded like the hurried rattling of a carriage over a pavement.

After continuing for a moment or two, it ended in a heavy report like the toppling over of a chimney stack. On returning to his house in the early part of the evening, his two children, who were alone, a daughter of 14 years and a little child, were in a great fright, fearful that the knell of time had been sounded, and that the day of doom was about to wind up all terrestrial affairs. The daughter stated that when she heard the rumbling sound, she went to the window, and on looking out saw four rods from the window the earth undulate like waves of the sea, and as it fell, fire issued from several crevices. On examining the ground, Mr. Parry discovered a large hole with ragged edges, which had the appearance of having been scathed with fire. Other persons living in the vicinity were startled by the sound. Domestic animals showed evident signs of fear and trembling. The quiet community living in the vicinity have been greatly disturbed in consequence of this portentous occurrence.—Fall River News.

GOOD NEWS

Poetry.

Sallie and I

BY ANNIE M. DUGANNE.

We're in the market—Sallie and I—
Are there no bachelors wanting to buy?
None who have courage enough to propose;
None who have wisdom enough to disclose
That they've shirts without buttons, and pants
without straps,
They have vests with fringed edges, and coats
with iron flaps,
And their last winter's hose are minus of toes,
And their uncovered heels are like to get froze,
For lack of such bachelors as Sallie and I
To attend to the wants and the woes we espay?

We are no coquettes—Sallie and I—
So free loving dandies need not apply—
Beauty's admirers or Wit's devotees
Need not approach, for we never shall please;
But we know of a circle whose names are untold
In Fame's shining temples or mansions of gold,
Whose lives without spot, or blemish or blot,
Have won them the honor the world gives not;
For such, worthy bachelors, Sallie and I Still wait in the market—will ye not buy?

Unusd Virtue, Sallie and I—
Only can offer to those who apply—
Hearts warm and loving we've striven to blend
With hand ever ready in need to befriend;
And our lips seldom gossip, our feet rarely roam
Beyond the charmed precincts of childhood's
sweet home,
For to wash, brew and bake, small splutter we make,
And "Quint and Thirt" is the motto we take;
Oh, rare are such housewives as Sallie and I;
Lonely old bachelors will ye not buy?

We're in the market—Sallie and I—Shall we be left in the market to die?
Swiftly youth's fleeting years over us go,
Dimmer the rays from Hope's beaming light glow,
And the dimples where Cupid hath chosen his bed,
Too long left unskissed, will be wrinkles instead;
And our hearts, like the May, will forget to be gay,
If Love's fragrant blossoms ne'er dawn on our way;
Such is the petition Sallie and I
Offer to bachelors—pray will ye buy?

Cur Flag

BY EMILIE LAWSON.

Is White was made of Northern snows
Where first the English Pilgrims trod;
That ice-girt Rock, from whence arose
Their grateful hearts to God.

Then in a fair and sunny land,
Freedom's inspiring spirit glowed,
And from the South's oppressed heart
The crimson life-stream flowed.

God saw "twas good, and o'er its folds
A veil of heavenly azure threw;
Bright angels came, and wondering,
With stary eyes looked through.

Charmed was the young world of the free,
O'er palm grove, o'er mountain wild,
They bore the Flag of Liberty,
White new-born angels smiled.

Its stripes can never fade or die;
By shining forms 'tis guarded yet;
And never from its holy sky
One radiant star shall set.

Kind Words

The sun may warm the grass to life,
The dew the drooping flower,
The eyes grow bright and watch the light
Of Autumn's opening hour,
But words that breathe of tenderness,
And smiles we know are true,
Are warmer than the summer time,
And brighter than the dew.

It is not much the world can give,
With all its subtle art,
And gold and gems are not the things
To satisfy the heart;
But oh, if those who cluster round
The altar and the hearth,
Have gentle words and loving smiles,
How beautiful is earth.

Anecdotes.

The following anecdote, which has been told of many learned men, originated with the painter Barrett. His only pets were a cat and a kitten, its progeny. A friend, seeing two holes in the bottom of his floor, asked him for what purpose he made them there.
Barrett said it was for his cats to go in and out.

Why, replied his friend, would not one do
for both?

You silly man, answered the painter, how could the big cat get into the little hole?
But, said his friend, could not the little one go through the big hole?
Egad, said Barrett, so she could, but I never thought of that.

Is it a hard bottom at the foot of the hill?
Inquired a traveller on horseback of an Irishman coming up.

Hard as a rock! says Pat.
The traveler whips up his steed, and presently plunges into a quagmire.
You villain, why did you tell me it was a hard bottom here? shrieks the traveler.
I told the truth, said Pat, you'll find it hard enough when you reach the bottom—you ain't half way to it yet!

O, mother! do send for the doctor! exclaimed a little boy of three years.

Why, for my dear?

What, there's a gentleman in the parlor
who says he'll die if Jane don't marry him—
and Jane says she won't!

A fellow, who had been famous as a liar,
once got religion, joined the Baptists, and was dipped in the river on a cold morning, the ice being broken for that purpose. As he was coming out of the water, one of his old cronies asked:

Is it cold, Jim?

No, not at all! was the reply.

Dip him again, minister, said his friend,
for he lies still!

Useful to ladies learning to skate—Strapping fellows.

HAS on hand and is constantly receiving Goods adapted to his trade. All who wish first class Custom Made Garments, for a fair price, are respectfully invited to call.
N. B. It would be well to remember, that Cheapness and Dearnness are relative attributes;
they have a relation to the QUALITY of the article
we buy, and that which does not answer well
the purpose for which it was intended, is DEAR
at any price.

PURE LIQUORS
AND WINES
FOR PRIVATE USE
AND MEDICAL PURPOSES.
WE offer to the country trade and consumers,
a complete assortment of every variety of LIQUORS, WINES, &c., and would say
that our experience of more than FORTY years
as Importers is not only a sufficient guarantee for
the Purity of our Goods, but that it enables us
to offer advantages to buyers that can not be excelled by any house in Boston. Owing to the difficulty of procuring, in many towns, a strictly
pure and reliable article of Liquors and Wines
for medicinal and other purposes, we have for many years given particular attention to filling
orders for PRIVATE USE, and consumers will find it greatly to their advantage to send their orders to us direct, as we employ no travelling other agents whatever. Persons who require Pure Liquors or Wines, in large or small quan-
ties, may rest assured that all orders will receive
our best personal attention, and that every article
sent from our house will be satisfactory in every respect. Communications by mail will receive prompt attention, with full and complete catalogue
of goods, prices, &c.

Great Spring and Summer Medicine,
DR. L. LANGLEY'S
Root and Herb Bitters,
Composed of Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Yellow
Dock, Prickly Ash, Thoroughwort, Rhubarb, Man-
drake, Dandelion, &c., all of which are so compounded
as to inconvert, and assist Nature in eradicating diseases.
The effect of this medicine is most wonderful—
it acts directly upon the bowels and blood, by removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating them into healthy action, renewing the fountains of life, purifying the blood,
cleansing it from all humors, and causing it to
course anew through every part of the body; restoring the invalid to health and usefulness.
They cure and eradicate from the system, Liver Complaint, that min-wheel of so many diseases; Jaundice in its worst forms, all Bilious Diseases and foul stomach, dyspepsia, consti-

THE SPECIFIC PILL
A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness,
and Genital Irritability in either sex.
This Malady, the terrible consequences of
which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious and dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of Life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and
sinks the unhappy victim into imbecility and a permanent grave. From one to six boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the Most Aggravated Cases,
whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse
or Excess.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Sperm-
atorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine
can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]
I have found them all that could be desired—
Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used
them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years.
I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E.
P. Dick, M. D.
This is not a Homoeopathic Remedy, nor
is there any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.

HEBARD'S
PATENT OIL!

No more accidents by Burning Fluid!
A safe substitute to burn in Fluid Lamps.
THIS Oil is prepared to burn in all kinds
of Lamps without chimneys, such as Fluid, Sperm or Lamp Oil Lamps, and will burn at half the cost of Fluid in all Lamps fixed with Green's Jet Burners, and is the greatest Artificial Light yet discovered. It gives a steady, clean and soft light, and does not
choke the Lungs with foreign matters, such
as results generally from using Rosin and Kerosene Oil, and will burn in Kerosene Lamps
free from Smoke and Smell by taking off the Cap and Chimney.

It is also a COMPLETE SUBSTITUTE for Sperm
and Lamp Oil, and is just as safe and harmless to burn, and may take the place of the Common Fluid and other dangerous compounds that have been thrown into the market
of late.

The above Oil is perfectly clean and free
from Grease and Smoke or unpleasant Odor,
and is now considered the SAFEST and BEST Oil ever offered to the public. It is a most desirable article, and what is more than ALL it is unexpensive.
Any person can have samples sent by express, if desired.

For the Patriot.
The Prairie Lark.

BY LINDA LINDAN.

The winds of March were wailing o'er
This land of prairie, broad and grand,
Where buds and blossoms once so fair
Had withered 'neath stern winter's hand.

While crossing one of these fair plains,
Reflecting on the withered flowers,
That once had bloomed in beauty there,
In summer's warm and sunny hours,—

A most enchanting sound I heard
Come softly floating o'er the glade,
So sweet, so heavenly it seemed,
I almost fancied there had strayed

Some angel from the spirit land,
Into my dream-rapt soul to pour,
A song of love, and peace, and joy,
Wafted from that celestial shore;

Where dwell the pure and holy ones,
Whom God hath called from earth away
To yonder radiant world of bliss,
With saints to live in endless day.

But nearer, and still nearer, came
Those notes of sweetest melody,
And soon my eyes were gazing on
The charmer who had sung to me.

A little warbler sat upon
A twig, whose slender stem did give Beneath its weight, creak as the oak
When with the storm-king it doth strive.

Its little bosom seemed so full
Of pleasure, as it still sung on,
That I in fancy heard its thoughts
Poured out in that wild gushing song.

It seemed to speak of zephyrs soft,
All laden with the breath of Spring,
And the lovely scenes the seasons
To our raptured senses bring.

Of the rich green sward that presses
As soft velvet 'neath our tread;
And the gorgeous robes God giveth
To the branches o'er our head:

Of the lovely flowers that blossom
O'er our fair earth everywhere,
And with low, sweet voices, whisper
Of the hand that placed them there.

Aye, to me that song was telling
Of the peace which God doth give,
To the meek, the pure, the sinless,
E'en while here on earth they live.

Sweet little lark! if unto thee,
Such wondrous powers of song are given,
What must that rapturous chorus be
Which echoes through the courts of heaven!

Loomis, Ill., March, 1862.

Scraps.

Wisdom is a nut, which, if not chosen with judgment, may cost you a tooth, and pay you with nothing but a worm.

Fifty years ago, not one girl in a thousand made a waiting-maid of a mother. Wonderful improvements in this age!

Experience is a torch lighted in the ashes
of our delusions.

WANTED. By a maiden lady, "a local habitation and name." The real estate she is not particular about, so that the title be good. The name she wishes to hand down to posterity.

He that is truly polite, knows how to contradict with respect, and to please without adulation; and is equally remote from an insidious complaisance, and a low familiarity.

The following is Aunt Betty's description of her milkman: "He is the meanest man in the world! He skims the milk on the top,
and then turns it over and skims the bottom,
and then he skims the sides, and then he divides it into ten parts, carefully skimming
each part."

As the shadow follows the body in the splendor of the fairest sunlight, so will the wrong done to another pursue the soul in the hour of prosperity.

People, says a spinster, express a great sympathy for women who are unhappily married; but how about those who are unhappy single?

Anacharsis, the sagacious Scythian, said:
"The vine produces three sorts of grapes;
the first of pleasure, the second of intoxication, the third of repentance."

Soft soap, in some shape, pleases all; and generally speaking, the more you put into it the better.

Miscellaneous.

Horse Bought and a Lawyer Sold.

BY A COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

I had a wife and three small children. My office was in Boston, and we lived in an adjoining town. I needed the exercise of riding, and a drive now and then, toward evening,
with my family, would be good for us all.
We had formerly lived in the country, where everybody keeps horses, and a horse seemed really necessary to our comfort, and so I determined to buy one. I had owned several horses in my day, and knew something of horse-flesh, and I had been engaged in several horse cases in court, and of course I knew,
as every man of observation knows, that horses are a dangerous commodity to deal in.
Being, however, forewarned, and being a lawyer, I felt no apprehension that I could not look pretty well after one side of a bargain.

Before trying to buy an article, I always make up my mind exactly what I want.
Then I am not mistaken by every foolish fancy, as one is liable to be who looks through the market for something that suits him.

The horse I would buy must be a good saddle horse, a pacer or ambler under the saddle, but of course a square trotter in harness. He must be young and sound, of handsome, sprightly figure, kind as a kitten, never needing the whip, but yet safe for my wife to drive, not afraid of the engine, fast or slow at the driver's election. To be sure, I had once heard our minister, when I lived in the country, tell the only horse jockey in the parish that he wanted just such a horse, and I had heard the jockey's irreverent reply, "Why,
you old fool, there ain't no such horse."

Yet I had heard of such animals, and seen them advertised, and if I had not happened
to see one that exactly answered the description, it was probably because I had not been looking particularly after him.

When it became known that I was in want of a horse, it was really amusing to see the attempts made to deceive me. They evidently thought I was a green hand at the business, and that I was a fit subject for any imposition.

One fine looking animal was brought me,
that, to a careless observer, would have seemed nearly perfect. He had a slight cough, but the owner assured me it was nothing; only a little cold the horse had taken
the day before, by standing in a draught.
He could not deceive me; I had owned a horse with the heaves, years ago, and advised him to take his worst beast to somebody who did not know so much about horses. Another would have suited me exactly,
but he had several scars on his legs, caused,
as the dealer said, by breaking through the stable floor. I inquired a little, and ascertained that he had taken fright, upset the carriage, and gone home, two miles, on the dead run, with the forward wheels, into his stall, carrying with him a hay cutter and a grindstone that stood in the floor, and so had cut himself to pieces trying to kick away the fragments.

Another had an interfering strap on his ankle, having lately been badly shod. I saw through that poor falsehood at once.

I think I should have bought one of a dealer whom I knew, and who assured me
he would not for the world deceive me, had not the singular animal exhibited the unfortunate eccentricity of standing on his fore legs exclusively at intervals, when I attempted to ride him outward from the stable, owing, probably, to a defective nervous organization.

I determined to have no more to do with dealers, but to keep a sharp look out for myself, and when I found the right kind of an animal to buy him, even if I had to pay a high price.

Walking one afternoon from Cambridge
to Somerville, I rested a moment at the hawthorn hedge, at the foot of Kirkland Street,
and looking back I observed a beautiful black horse, surmounted by an elderly cadaverous gentleman, who had somewhat the air of a clergyman. The horse was moving at an easy ambling pace, scarcely faster than
a walk, the rein hanging loosely on his neck,
while the rider was serenely reading a newspaper. In the language of the Free-love woman to Artemus "Ward at Berlin Hites," I mentally exclaimed, I have found him at last. I accosted the traveller, and passing by the details of our conversation, it is sufficient to say that the animal was every thing that could be desired, and although it would well nigh break the hearts of the owner's family to part with him, he could be bought for the moderate sum of two hundred and fifty dollars.

It may be interesting to the reader, although somewhat premature, to learn what I afterwards discovered, that the owner's "family"
consisted of one bull terrier pup which slept
with him in a stable loft every night.

I met the owner by appointment next day,
at my office in Boston. He had been employed, he said, as travelling agent of a Boston house, and had no further use for the horse: he would give me a written warranty
of the animal as perfectly sound and kind;
indeed, I might take him home a week, and try him, and see for myself. Nothing could be fairer than this. I took my prize to my own stable; I kept him a full week; I rode him and drove him; my man Barney rode him and drove him. My admiration of him increased. He was to all appearance sound and kind. He was fast or slow, as I chose to have him. He would face the cars without winking, and stand without tiring. In short, he was a perfect horse. At the end of the week I paid the price, took a written warranty of him, and went home rejoicing in my success. Every horse should have a name, and we concluded to call this one, on account of his many good qualities, Honesty.

For a few days I was engaged constantly in a long trial in court. The horse stood still in his stable, well fed and well groomed, so as to be in the best condition for use when my leisure day should come. Barney said one day that he had harnessed Honesty to the wagon to bring home some oats from the store, and that he refused for some time to start from the yard. However, Barney was no horseman, and I thought that the fault
was in his awkwardness in handling the reins.
A day or two later, my wife's brother took her with the children out for a drive with Honesty, in the carryall, and she reported that the animal insisted on going up Beacon Street instead of Tremont Street, where they wanted to go. This did not seem exactly right, but still I had full faith that Honesty would prove all right when I held the reins.

Finally, my trial in court was finished, and there was to be a picnic near Fresh Pond, where all my friends were going. I had bought a new light top buggy, and harness
to match, and wife and I drove up. Honesty was in high feather, and made the new carriage spin along like a linen wheel. We passed the afternoon in the woods, and when our team was brought up for our return
every body was attracted by our elegant turn-out. I confess I felt not a little pleased with this universal appreciation of my taste.

I don't know why it is, but every body considers
a compliment to his horse as fully equivalent to one to himself. We bade adieu to our adorning friends; I handed my wife into the carriage, gathered up the ribbons, and waved
my hand by way of parting salutation. Honesty pawed, but did not move forward, I chirruped and shook the reins. Honesty shook his head, and gave a significant snort.
A friend took him by the bit, when he stepped rapidly backward, till the new buggy brought up against a tree. I touched him with the whip, when he reared and snorted
and my wife screamed. Don't whip him, cried
a friend; whipping never does any good to a contrary horse. He is an old offender, I see by his actions, said another.

The details of the exhibition are not agreeable to dwell upon. Neither coaxing nor whipping, nor pushing, nor things present,
nor things to come, nor any other creature,
could induce that beast to even draw the empty carriage out of its tracks. I asked a friend to take my wife home, and leaving my elegant carriage, ignominiously led the obstinate brute to a stable near by, and left him for the night.

A sadder and a wiser man I woke the morrow morn. I persevered with Honesty yet awhile, but after being kept two hours by his stopping in a rainy night, on Cambridge bridge, on one occasion, and being obliged to leave him in the stable yard, when in great haste to meet an engagement at Lexington,
I reluctantly concluded that he was not perfectly kind. My wife had long since declined further experiment with him. I was puzzled whether to admit myself duped and cheated, or attempt to cure the defect. I rode the beast occasionally, and sometimes drove him, with various success. One day,
I had business at Concord, at the County Court, and with a friend drove into that beautiful village just at sunset. Court had just adjourned for the day, and my brother lawyers, and clients, and jurors, and witnesses,
were lounging about the hotel and the old elm on the common. Just as we came in front of the Middlesex Hotel, I observed my horse suddenly to falter; then he stopped,
throwing up his head, and jerking it sideways in a manner remarkable to see, seemed quite bewildered. He has a fit; jump out, you will get hurt, cried the multitude, which
at once surrounded us.

My friend obeyed the call, and I attempted to do so, just as the distracted beast called backward over the shaft, "and Mortham, steed and rider fell." Down we came in one miscellaneous heap, the carriage essentially smashed, and his owner vexed and discomfited. A few days proved that Honesty was subject to frequent attacks of this kind.

But had I not a warranty, and am I not a lawyer? Straightway I commenced an action for deceit. It is a proverb at the bar that a lawyer who tries his own case has a fool for his client. I retained and paid counsel. I summoned and paid witnesses; I consulted
and paid Doctor Dadd, and other experts.
The case was tried, and all Middlesex County was made to understand how a lawyer had been cheated by a jockey. The jury rendered a verdict in my favor for $125 damages; probably upon the idea that a lawyer ought not to recover more than half that he is cheated out of. I gave my execution to an officer, with orders to arrest the rascal—
and told my counsel to oppose him at every step, and follow him to the end of the law.

After a few months, my attorney sent for me, and gave me the result of following my directions. The defendant had been committed to jail where he had quietly remained several weeks, apparently happy in the consciousness that by the beneficent provisions of our laws, I, his creditor, was paying $175 per week for his board. Then he had given notice of his intention to avail himself of a further beneficent provision of our statutes
by taking the poor debtor's oath. My counsel had faithfully obeyed instructions, and opposed him there, paying for me according to law, two dollars per day, to the Commissioners while the examination was pending.
Finally, the vagabond had succeeded in swearing out, and my various bills amounted to about the amount I had first paid; two hundred and fifty dollars.

The enemy was free, but I was not. I still had that "dreadful horse," worse than Mr.
Pickwick's, that nobody would take away. A neighboring horse dealer offered me fifty dollars, and I sold him, and took his note for the amount. A few days after, I asked him what he had done with him. He said he had advertised him to sell at a horse sale in the city. I had a rational curiosity to see the advertisement, and asked him to show it to me, which he did, and it ran as follows:
"Black Saddle Horse. A particularly fine,
black saddle horse, perfectly sound and kind,
in all respects, and free from tricks."

I don't know how much he got for his fine saddle horse. I only know that I still hold his worthless note for fifty dollars.

Plant Peas Deep

The theory recently advocated of planting peas very deeply in the earth, in order to prolong the bearing capacity of the vines, has been well tested in Wilmamstown, and found to be correct. A farmer told me that he plowed a furrow beam deep, then scattered the seed peas at the bottom; after which he turned a deep furrow upon them with his plow, covering them, if possible, to the depth of twelve or fourteen inches. They pushed their way up through the thick mass of earth
very soon, and instead of turning yellow at the bottom and dying after the first gathering, they blossomed and bore until he was tired of picking the pods. If such a result will uniformly be realized from the plan, pea culture may be made more profitable than hitherto.—Exchange.

This mode of planting peas has been tried with favorable results in this town, and we recommend it to our readers.

For the Patriot

Laws in reference to our Schools Books.

We see by the Legislative reports that a part of the Committee on Education, have reported through the Hon. Wm. D. Swan, in favor of repealing that part of the law on School Books, in reference to frequent changes in said books. This has somewhat surprised the friends of education, from Mr.
Swan's heretofore apparent disinterested activity in advancing the cause of our common schools; and has led many to suspect his honesty by the action he has taken in reference to this bill; especially as he is connected with one of the great school book publishing houses of Boston—who publish a class of Text Books, in our humble opinion,
the driest and most stupid of any now before the public. The course Mr. Swan has taken in the matter, seems to corroborate
this statement, as he is not willing to allow his publications to stand upon their own merits as other publishing houses are; but must have the law repealed so that they can return to the old system of scheming and intrigue. If in the past, three years since the law was passed, the School Committees in the various towns and cities, have, in their calm and collected judgments, found other Text Books more worthy than his, and have introduced them in their place, without the interference of agents—he ought not to find fault, but rather to rejoice, (as he is a great friend of education) to know that our common schools are so rapidly advancing, and try to keep up with the times.

As the passage of this law originated with the people, we think the request for its repeal should come from the same source—not from interested parties like book publishers. Previous to the enactments of the present law, in 1850, the cost for supplying poor children with books in the several towns and cities of the State, for changes made in school books, amounted to over fifty thousand dollars, which had to be raised by taxation; surely the community do not want this law repealed, for the purpose of increasing our taxes, which are in ordinary times, as this is all the benefit they would derive in a change of the law. Neither do they wish to be visited by book agents with their carpet bags full of books; the success of these unwelcome visitors would too soon be made known to all those who would have to put their hands in their pocket,

and pay for the substituted book or books.
These agents on their introduction to the school committees and teachers, will pretend to have a great interest for the cause of education, and after learning the peculiar views and ideas of the committee, on what they think are the proper methods of instruction, will inform them that their books are just what they want, and is better suited to teach this system than any other; it will enable the student to master and swallow Euclid
at one gape, and solve the most intricate problems of La Place without winking. So these agents go the rounds, from one place to another, until it will be found that their magic book or books are able to teach as many methods and systems as old Robert B. Thomas' Almanac is adapted to the various seasons and climates, or patent medicines to cure all the ills the human race is heir to.

We think the present system of elucidating
the text and context of school books by well regulated diagrams and illustrations, are an improvement, which is corroborated by the large authorities of Webster and Worcester—
who in their large dictionaries, have adopted
this system for the benefit of advanced scholars and students; its importance has been found equally advantageous in the construction of the rudimentary Text Books; this is one reason why Sargent's Readers are so deservedly popular—especially the new series.
Still we are not one of those who believe that any Text Book can be invented that will put brains into children's heads; if a scholar
is backward, it will require something more than books to make him forward; and will tax the greatest patience and energy of the teacher to make the pupil passably advanced.

Then again, from the simplest Text Book,
even from no Text Book at all, children may be made to learn, as is fully exemplified by the old lame cobbler, John Pounds, one of Nature's true nobility, who, in his humble
shop, six feet by eighteen, taught a class of forty scholars to read from mere bits of paper picked up in the streets, and posters removed from the walls of buildings, from which school, these ragged children became useful
members of society; thus was John Pounds
a faithful prototype of Roger Ascham's schoolmaster.

A great disadvantage in a present change
of school books is in retarding the progress of the scholars; for instance, a class of Text Books are introduced on the subject of Grammar. After the teacher and pupils have become somewhat familiar with the author's method
of instruction, another set of books, by a different author, are substituted for the former books; then the scholar has to re-learn his or her grammar over again; and so it continues until the pupil becomes confused and discouraged; remarking that they have been studying grammar three or four years, and have made no progress or advancement on account of the repeated changes made in Text Books.

If this law is repealed, it will have a tendency to prevent many children from attending school—they not having the means to purchase such a multiplicity of books as must necessarily be the case if we return to the old system. We have known children who had become attached to their school
and teacher, who, with tears in their eyes,
informed their instructor they were obliged to leave school as they had not means sufficient to purchase the new books demanded by the change—although they had old ones enough to last them for years. They were asked by the teacher and committee to continue on in the school if they were disposed to take advantage of the State law, which provides that those who are not able to buy books can receive them at the town's expense. But they justly scorned a charity, which they say, is so unnecessarily forced upon them by this odious system of extortion.
Instead of throwing obstacles of this kind in the way, we ought to hold out every inducement to this large class of children in the State to attend these nurseries of virtue and knowledge, if we wish to prevent pauperism and crime.

The legislature in sustaining the law will be rendering a lasting benefit to education, and the two hundred and twenty thousand children of the Commonwealth who attend our common schools, by endeavoring to do all they can in carrying forward the great work of redeeming all from the bondage of ignorance and error, and enfranchising them into the light and freedom of knowledge and truth.

In conclusion, we hope for the perpetuity
and success of our common school system,
and for the old Commonwealth, which stands
foremost in the noble cause of education,
that the honorable legislature will give the petitioners leave to withdraw.

The Yankee Woman.

When a Yankee woman goes to ride with her children, she considers it necessary to keep them from falling out—puts one foot on one child and the other foot on another—holds baby in one hand and carpet bag in the other.

Rises—budget in hand and change in her mouth, two minutes before the cars come to a stop.

Give her a morning call—she will peep
through the side light, at the ring of the doorbell; if you are a pedlar she will make her appearance and give you an answer. If you are a minister she will slip on a pretty dress
and cordially receive you into the parlor.

The Yankee woman bakes, brews and fries,
in the forenoon; makes button-holes in the afternoon; snatches half an hour after supper
for practising on the piano; makes calls or attends lectures in the evening.

Does up the Summer sewing in the Winter for the chance of doing the Winter sewing in the Summer.

Spends a week in the mysteries of pastry,
sals and creams; and at the last moment makes curls, draws on gloves, and appears as hostess for a brilliant party. Never mind
these colored waltzers—they were only hired for show—like the chandeliers—they never performed a bit of hard labor for this party, it was all done by the Yankee lady.

In the midst of the multiplicity of roasting, baking, boiling, scrubbing and polishing, the Yankee woman always manages to send the children to school with clean faces and aprons.

When Tom rushes in, pantaloons torn, she puts him to bed till they are mended.

Makes her own bonnet, and leaves her neighbors to their conjecture whether it came from White's or Black's—also whether the cost was five dollars or fifteen.

Wears the last baby in season for the arrival of the next one.
If no Irishman be handy, or money be tight,
she digs out the cellar herself, and you will see the result of that economy next month, in the top of a new dress.

The Yankee woman can talk; let her little boy be accused of quarrelsomeness in the street, and won't she entertain you for one hour and a half? can you get ten words in edgewise?

The Yankee woman will have her poetry
in life; she will get it somewhere; if she cannot play on the piano, she will work points
on the neck of her little girl's frock, or at least,
have the brightest tins and whitest tables in the country; most likely she will command
piano, embroideries, and bright tins, all three.

The Yankee woman has her thoughts about her; the Yankee woman understands cost and income, too; don't the shopman have to take down every piece of goods from his shelves, before she will decide concerning half a yard of cambric?

Does she ever offer the baker a quarter
when the price is two shillings?

She never asks the milkman the amount of the quarterly bill—ten chances to one if there be any bill. The Yankee woman in good at cash; she hates bills of one kind or another kind she hugs and cherishes.

How do European ladies manage?

Don't know. I happen to be a Yankee.

An Esquimaux Rifleman

As we were in the open country, and there was no tangible object to shoot at, he made a circle in the snow of about two feet in diameter, then stepping in the centre, raised his gun perpendicular from the shoulder, and fired in the air. After firing he stepped out of the ring, and in a few seconds, to my astonishment, the bullet came down within the circle he had made. He coolly remarked,
"We want no target to fire at," and if a man can hold his musket with that precision as to cause the ball to return just where he stands,
what need has he of a butt? But the principal reason why they thus test their shooting is an economic one. Not always being able to get bullets, they are chary of firing them away, and I have no doubt it is for the same reason that so many savage people have the "boomerang," or return missile.—Recollections of Labrador Life by Lambert De Bolidieu.

BORN BY THE MASTER, OF NOSE TAKE WE.

ATTENTION READERS! We shall publish next week, for the last time, the list of Quincy soldiers in the field, and we would ask all those knowing of any person's name which we have omitted, or any errors in those already published, to make the corrections at once. Do not wait with the idea that some one else will bring the names in, but come yourself immediately. Every one making any corrections should do so as soon as Tuesday next or they will be too late. Remember this is positively the last chance.

WORSE THAN REPORTED. We learn that the wound received by George H. Lingham is more serious than was at first reported. He was shot through the arm near the shoulder causing a bad fracture, which is getting better very slowly, and we are sorry to say, it will be a long time before he will be able to use it.

QUINCY SAVINGS BANK. At the annual meeting of this Corporation, held on the 8th inst., the following persons were elected officers the ensuing year and have accepted the trust:

Joseph Brigham, President.
Daniel Baxter, Vice President.

TRUSTEES:

Henry Wood, Israel W. Munroe,
Whitcomb Porter, Noah Cummings,
Horatio N. Glover, John M. Gorges,
Charles Marsh, Horace B. Spear,
Lloyd G. Horton, Charles R. Mitchell.

Office at the Banking Room of the Quincy Stone Bank. Open every day (Sunday and Holidays excepted) from 8 to 12, a. m., and from 2 to 5, p. m.
Number of Depositors 1218. Amount on deposit $252,374.18. Amount loaned on mortgage $197,468.00.

JOHN C. RANDALL, Treasurer.

DEATH BY FRIGHT. Mrs. Mary A. Franklin, of Scituate, on the morning of April 1st, was awakened by some one knocking at the door, spoke once to her children, and in a few moments was a corpse. She had been laboring under a fear of being turned out of her tenement on that day, and it is presumed the knocking at the door frightened her to death. The husband is in the army.

The Old Colony Memorial, of Plymouth, changed publishers on the 1st inst.—Hon. John Morrissey sold out to Messrs. Thomas Prince and William T. Hollis.—The Memorial is in its forty-first year.

INSURANCE. We have been shown by Messrs. Hoyt and Scribner a list of some fifty insurance companies which have failed within a few years past. The teaching of this is that those obtaining policies should look well to the solvency of the companies in which they insure. And we may add, by the way, that agents who advertise their business give the best assurances that they deal with companies who may be safely trusted. We congratulate property owners here upon the facilities afforded them for home insurance.—Danbury (Ct) Times.

WINTER STILL LINGERS in the lap of spring. We have had no spring weather, as yet; so late, with cold, freezing nights, the buds are ready to burst with impatience. But we are only the servants of Nature, and must wait her time.

Washington, April 10th, 1862.

A PROCLAMATION. It has pleased the Almighty God to vouchsafe signal victories to the land and naval forces engaged in suppressing an internal rebellion, and at the same time to avert from our country the dangers of foreign intervention and invasion. It is therefore recommended to the people of the United States that, at their next weekly assemblages in their accustomed places of public worship, which shall occur after the notice of this proclamation shall have been received, they especially acknowledge and render thanks to our Heavenly Father for these inestimable blessings; that they then and there implore spiritual consolations in behalf of all those who have been brought into affliction by the casualties and calamities of sedition and civil war; and that they reverently invoke the Divine guidance for our national councils to the end that they may speedily result in the restoration of peace, harmony and unity throughout our borders, and hasten the establishment of fraternal relations among all the countries of the earth.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, April 9th, 1862.

Since my last, great deeds have been achieved by our armies in the South West. Island No. 10, situated in the north corner of Tennessee, on the Mississippi River, has been taken by the Union troops, including the rebel army of three generals, six thousand men and any quantity of war munitions. Close on the heels of this news, follows the defeat of Beauregard at Corinth, but as yet with no particulars, except the statement of immense loss of life on both sides. These victories will soon inaugurate greater events for the Union cause, and it will not be unexpected intelligence to hear before many days the fall of Richmond, Norfolk and New Orleans by the Federal army. They are among the possible events of the day. If so, the main arteries of the rebellion are severed, and the country will breathe free again. There are great rejoicings here and smiling faces, and infantine. Soon we shall have an account of these military movements in a more definite shape.

The Tax bill has passed the National House of Representatives by a large majority. As it exempts real estate from taxation and applies only to personal property, farmers in particular will feel the burden lightly. This will inflate the prices of buildings and land; more especially as United States currency of one hundred and fifty million dollars, will, within a month, be scattered broadcast throughout the country. Now, these United States Treasury bills, are legal tender notes, as they come forth from their hiding places, will be used by the banks to expand upon, precisely as if they held that additional amount in gold and silver, which no foreign bank can possibly take from them, whatever may be the course of exchange with other countries. Money then being plenty, prices will be on the ascending scale, and no person should sell anything now except from pure necessity.

The Bill concerning the Hingham and Quincy Turnpike and Bridge has been discussed so many times by our State Legislature the present session, that the question has assumed much importance. In the House on Monday last it was put in a course of new training—and a great debate was opened. Speeches were made by Mr. Torrey of Charlestown, Howe of Marshfield, Davis of Plymouth, and Stone of Dedham. The bill making the bridges free under certain restrictions, was finally ordered to a third reading by a vote of 88 to 22. As we have not seen the provisions of this bill, we can express no opinion, whether justice has been done to Quincy or not. A state tax is reported of one million seven hundred and ninety-seven thousand five hundred and six cents dollars—($1,797,516). Quincy pays as her share $8,016; the sixth largest sum of any city or town in Norfolk County. The apportionment to Boston is $567,450. The rate per cent in Quincy must exceed, we think, $10 per $1000.

That nasty case concerning the immoral conduct of the Police Judge of Taunton is disposed of in his favor. The State House needs fumigation.

For the Patriot.

To the Memory of William Walsh.

1ST REGIMENT, MASS. VOL'S.,
Bull's Point, (Md.), March 31st, 1862.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Learning last week of the death of an old shipmate, long a resident of your town, Mr. William Walsh, who departed this life after a long and severe sickness, on the 15th of this month, we feel in duty bound in behalf of his aged mother, who is left to cheer on four more sons now in the service of their Country, to offer this slight tribute of respect to the memory of our shipmate who was with us three years upon the sloop-of-war Cumberland, which he so often wrote about, and regretted that he could not be permitted to tread her decks during this struggle. We join with his mother, relatives and friends, in mourning his loss. He was a brave sailor, and his social and honest manner brings us now to mourn his loss. With the afflicted mother our hearts beat. JAMES McMANIS,

CROSBY & HARRIS' CLOTHES WRINGER. This is a new invention, in the art of clothes wringing, which comes strongly recommended to public favor, for its many good qualities.

It is a pretty thing, and in our judgment a great improvement, which should be in the hands of every housekeeper. Its operations are very simple; when required for use, it is secured to the tub containing the wet clothes, by a neat and handy contrivance, and then the clothes are passed through two cylinders, turned by a crank, which are regulated by a self-adjusting power, and dropped, admirably pressed, into a basket, on the outside. We have heard but one opinion expressed by those who have had them on trial—that it is a great saving of labor, does the work better, and with less injury to the clothes.

Where Shall we Insure?

For the benefit of those interested, we copy the following from the Annual Report of the Insurance Commissioners of this State, Jan. 1, 1862.

Hingham Mutual: Amount at risk—$7,883,784; assets of the Company other than deposit notes, $27,426.26.

Dorchester Mutual: At risk, $5,405,788; assets other than deposit notes, 44,211.86; liabilities 8,853.

Quincy Mutual: At risk, $13,757,344; assets other than deposit notes, 103,712.04; liabilities 5,400.

Plymouth Co. Mutual: At risk $623,225; assets other than deposit notes 1,610; liabilities 550.

Abington Mutual: At risk $350,529; assets other than deposit notes 984.62.

Weymouth & Braintree Mutual: $1,507,506; assets other than deposit notes 7,498.76; liabilities 2,000.

People's Equitable Mutual, Taunton: At risk $3,012,196; assets other than deposit notes 10,368.97; liabilities 6,574.50.

The assets of the People's Equitable consist of—loaned on notes not endorsed $2,841.31; uncollected assessments 5,582.50; due from agents 2,463.42; cash on hand 81.74; $3,012,196 at risk, they owe 6,574.50, and they have 81.74 in cash to pay it with.

The assets of the Plymouth County Mutual are—one iron safe $150; due on policies not delivered 514; due from agents 946. They owe $500, and have 633,225 at risk, and not one cent in the treasury.

The assets of the Abington Mutual are—office building $171.59; safe 50; parish note 120, cash on hand 179.64; due from agents and policies in office 163. With $329,529 at risk, they have 984.62 to pay it.

The above are plain statements, which every one can understand, and leaves no room for doubt at which of the above named offices, it is for the interest of the people to get insured.—North Bridgewater Gazette.

Choice Goods. The ladies of Quincy and vicinity are reminded that Messrs. Cushman & Brooks, 72 and 74 Tremont street, Boston, have opened a department in their store, for the exclusive sale of Straw Bonnets, Paris artificial Flowers, Ruches, Velvet Ribbons, Bonnet Ribbons, Lining Silks, Oiled Silks, Black English Crapes, Cape Collars and sets, Cape Laces, Tiaras, and every article for the trimming of fashionable Bonnets, at prices extremely low, to which their attention is especially invited. Also, an entire new stock of Embroideries, Lace Goods, White Goods, Gloves, Hosiery, Housekeeping Goods, Skirts and Corsets. See advertisement in another column.

LEGISLATIVE. In the business at the State House, a bill has been passed to be enacted, to aid the families of volunteers. The only essential difference between it and the law of 1861, is that aid is to be given to all those who before the passage of this act have enlisted in regiments out of the State. No aid is given to those in the naval service.

A bill reported by the Committee on Claims, providing for the reimbursement of towns for money expended in arming and equipping volunteers was lost. All petitions from towns for that purpose will probably be referred to the next legislature.

THE PEAK FAMILY—Vocalists, Harpists, and Bell Ringers.—Town Hall, Thursday, April 17th. The majority of our readers, doubtless, have heard of this Company, and some of them witnessed their performances in the past, yet but few know how really excellent and attractive is the entertainment offered by them now. Years of experience—earnest, enthusiastic labor—have given them a proficiency which tells in every matter they undertake. As Bell Ringers they excel. Every motion is executed with precision, and there is an air of confidence and self-reliance about the auditor that they do not undertake the task unprepared to execute its most exacting details. The younger members of the Troupe are prodigies. Lizette and Eddie—now yet in their teens—manipulate the bells equal to the original Swiss Campagnols of earlier times.

Mr. J. F. Spalding, Solo Violinist; Albert H. Fernald, Pianist and Balladist, and Wm. A. Field of Boston, is now connected with the Troupe.

A HANDSOME PICTURE. Benjamin R. Russell 515 Washington St. Boston, has just published a superior steel engraving which consists of an oval centre, representing Bunker Hill Monument, with accurate likenesses of the six Governors of New England, in oval form, around it. The portraits are excellent and were engraved by J. C. Butler, Esq., of New York, a very popular artist, and well known to many of our readers. It is neatly printed on proof paper, 11 by 14 inches. Price 25 cents. Sent by mail.

THE MYSTERY OUT. Residents in the vicinity of Caleb Packard's have been seriously puzzled for some weeks past to account for the great number of mysterious packages conveyed constantly away from that popular resort of the ladies. Round packages and square packages; packages in white paper, packages in brown paper, and packages unpapered; some whispered of treason, and some concluded that Packard was moving by packages, instead of the usual way; a committee of the curious was appointed to report to the community, and the secret at last is out! The mysterious packages, so rapidly vacating 77 Hancock street, contains elegant dress silks and paper hangings that Packard is selling at such low figures as to be perfectly irresistible.

Another good Free Lunch will be served up at Saville's Bowling and Oyster Saloon, this evening. Go everybody and try it!

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Within two or three weeks past tons of eels have been caught on the shores of Greenwich, (R. I.) Bay. They come on shore and so plentifully that some persons have caught hundreds of pounds in their hands. Many have come up to the margin of the shore at high water, and when the tide recedes they are left to die on the sand. The reason why they thus seek the land is a mystery to the oldest fishermen, they never having seen the like before. It is thought they may be diseased.

At a sale of rare coins in Philadelphia recently, an American cent of 1793 sold for $12.75; a silver dollar of 1794 for $18.25; a cent of 1796 for $15.75; and a half dollar 1796 for $28.

The New York Custom House is daily receiving in duties about $200,000. Business is apparently looking up in the metropolis.

All accounts from the West speak favorably of the appearance of the wheat crop. In Ohio, Illinois and Indiana it looks extremely promising.

A man 28 years old was married to a woman 63 years old, in Newburyport, the other day. The Herald says the man was apparently well pleased with his new relation and the woman was as "tickled as a child with a rattle."

The Richmond Whig thinks that such Generals as Floyd and Pillow "are sores upon the fair body of the Southern Confederacy." A loyal editor says, "Yes, running sores, no doubt."

The Exhibition of the Adams Literary Association at the Town Hall, last evening, attracted a large audience. The performances were excellent, and every thing passed off in fine style. We shall return to the subject again in our next.

Administrator's Sale

Real Estate, &c., in Quincy.

PURSUANT to a license from the Probate Court for the County of Norfolk, will be sold at Public Auction, on THURSDAY, the 17th day of April next, at 3 o'clock, in the afternoon, upon the premises, the Land and Buildings, formerly owned and occupied by

CHARLES A. CUMMINGS,

Florist, deceased, used as a Nursery and Greenhouse, situated on Sea street in Quincy, consisting of about one-half an acre of very superior land, with buildings thereon, viz:—

A Stable 36 by 18 feet, attached to which is an Office, 14 by 10 feet, with a basement under both.

Also, connected with the above is a lean to Greenhouse, the main part 30 by 16 feet with an addition 43 by 12 feet. The buildings were all built within three years, and are of a substantial kind.

The Land contains a good variety of dwarf and standard pear, peach, apple, cherry and ornamental trees, about 500 in all; also, over 250 choice flowering shrubs, 100 rose bushes; 100 grape vines, two and three years old; currant, blackberry and gooseberry bushes; also, choice hardy flowering plants.

The property is located in the business part of the town, within two minutes' walk of the railroad depot and post office. As there is no one engaged in the business within five miles, it offers a rare chance for any one wishing a permanent and profitable business.

Immediately after the above will be sold the Homestead of the late C. A. Cummings, situated on a few rods East of the Greenhouse, comprising one-third of an acre of land well stocked with choice apple and pear trees, grape vines, currant bushes, &c., &c.

The house is two-story, containing twelve rooms, and in good repair. Adjoining is a small barn and woodhouse.

Sale of the Homestead subject to the Widow's right of dower.

For further particulars apply at the premises or address

GEORGE H. CUMMINGS, Adm'r.

Quincy, March 29th, 1862. 3w

Assignees' Sale.

THE following property will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises, on FRIDAY the Eighteenth day of April next, commencing at 2 o'clock with the first of the following described lots, and continuing in the order of their arrangement in this advertisement.

The Dwellings House, and about one fourth of an acre of Land, on which are a number of thirty fruit trees, situated on Franklin street, being the same premises conveyed by Ebenezer Crane and others to Wm. P. Hardwick.

A parcel of Land containing 140 rods, situate on Penn's Hill, and adjoining the estates of Hosea B. Ellis, Joseph Ewell and Henry Hardwick. This lot contains a number of fruit trees.

One undivided half part of a parcel of Land, containing about ten acres, with two small Dwelling Houses and orchard, situate on Granite street, and commonly known as the "Scotell Pond Place."

One undivided fifth part of the three following described parcels of Land, situate in Quincy, subject to the life estate of the widow of Peter Hardwick deceased, the same being assigned to her in dower, viz: a parcel of Land containing one fourth of an acre more or less, with the buildings thereon, bounded North-easterly on Washington street, South-easterly on the lot next described; South-westerly on land of Nathaniel Glover, and North-westerly on land of Jeremiah Newcomb. Also, a parcel of Land bounded North-easterly on Washington street, South-easterly on land of C. H. Hardwick one rod; and North-westerly on land of Woodland containing three acres, more or less, bounded North-westerly on land of Susan Spear; North-easterly on land of Noah Cummings; South-easterly on land of Susanna Spear and John Nightingale; and South-westerly on land of John Newcomb.

The above interest will be sold at the Homestead of the late Peter Hardwick.

Also a parcel of Salt Marsh-land, containing two acres, more or less, situate at Broad Meadows in said Quincy, bounded Northerly on upland of John Q. Adams; Easterly on marsh formerly of Jonathan Adams; Southerly on marsh of the heirs of Jonathan Baxter; and Westerly on marsh of Brackett and Mann.

Immediately after the sale of the Salt Marsh will be sold an undivided half-part of fifty acres of Land, of lot Number Sixty-one in the Third Division in the Town of Peacham, Caledonia County, State of Vermont.

The above described property will be sold without reserve, and free from all encumbrances except as stated above. Terms at sale. Should the day be stormy the sale will be postponed one week.

Sons of Liberty to the Tools of Slavery.
BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

We are coming by the thousands, by the thousands, many score—
If half a million's not enough we'll bring a million more,
And on your heads, you traitor knaves, a nation's vengeance pour.
Think not to win the battle, tho' you fight like bloodhounds train'd,
We have a cause will crush you down, a cause your chiefs disdain'd.
Tis Justice, Truth and Liberty, by heav'n's own pow'r sustain'd.
You are the priests of Baal and the fire of heav'n you call,
To test the justness of your cause, when to your altars fall,
And fire is threaten'g o'er your heads to overwhelm you all.
The sentence written on the wall is glaring in your eyes:
T'kel—'you are in the balance weigh'd'—yet still the truth despise,
And dare t'insult the truth of heav'n, ye wolves in thin disguise.
The gather'g vengeance circles round, the cordon closer draws;
The spirit of the North and West is rogu'd and will not pause,
Til Freedom firmly fix her seat, sustain'd by righteous laws.
Woe! woe, to Carolina, to Columbia's petted child,
The Benjamin of Freedom's land—the faithless and def'd!
Where Justice never had a home and Freedom never smil'd.
Woe! woe, to East Virginia—degenerates from a race
Where Freedom once had set her seal, no relics now we trace;
Slavery has ground the heart away, and all that's left is base.
Woe! woe, to every traitor let the sword of vengeance wave,
Til Freedom finds her true desert—a halter and a grave,
And Justice sounds the jubilee of Freedom to the slave,
Then, not 'til then, will virtue dwell where demons revel now;
When equal laws protect alike the lofty and the low,
Then smiling Peace may fix her head and wave her olive bough.

The Existence of God.

We need not soar above the skies,
Leave suns and stars below,
And seek Thee with unclouded eyes
In all that angels know.
The very breath we here inhale,
The pulse in every heart,
Attest with force that cannot fail,
Thou art, O God, Thou art!
If, midst the ever-during songs
Of universal joy,
The chime of worlds and chime of tongues,
The praise that we employ
May breathe its music in Thine ear,
Its meaning in Thy heart,
Our glad confession deign to hear,
Thou art, O God, Thou art!

Anecdotes.

A rough individual, whose knowledge of classical language was not quite complete, had been sick, and on recovering was told by his doctor that he might take a little animal food.
No, sir, said he, I took your gruel easy enough, but hang me if I can go your hay and oats.
Snobs, why did you dance with every lady in the hall last night before you noticed me?
said Mrs. Snobs to her husband, the day after the ball.
Why my dear, said the devoted Snobs, I was only practising what we do at the table—reserving the best for the last.
A tall fellow persisted in standing during the performance, much to the annoyance of an audience, and was repeatedly requested to sit down, but would not; when a voice from the upper gallery called out:
Let him alone, he is a tailor, and he's resting himself!
He immediately equitted.
Lawyer W., while entering his cold bed in a cold winter night, exclaimed:
Of all ways of getting a living, the worst a man could follow would be going about town such nights as this, and getting into bed for folks.
A person crossing a lake in a neighboring town, was asking the master of the boat whether there were ever any people lost in the passage?
No sir, answered the tar, never! my brother was drowned here last week, but we found him again the next day.
A gentleman met a half-witted lad in the road, and placing in his hand a sixpence and a penny, asked him which of the two he would choose.
The lad replied that he wouldn't be greedy, he'd take the smaller.
A little boy, upon whom his mother was inflicting personal chastisement, said:
Give me two or three licks now, mother, I don't think I can behave well yet.

PURE LIQUORS AND WINES FOR PRIVATE USE AND MEDICAL PURPOSES.

WE offer to the country trade and consumers, a complete assortment of every variety of LIQUORS, WINES, &c., and would say that our experience of more than FORTY years as Importers is not only a sufficient guarantee for the Purity of our Goods, but that it enables us to offer advantages to buyers that can not be excelled by any house in Boston. Owing to the difficulty of procuring, in many towns, a strictly pure and reliable article of Liquors and Wines for medicinal and other purposes, we have for many years given particular attention to filling orders for PRIVATE USE, and consumers will find it greatly to their advantage to send their orders to us direct, as we employ no travelling or other agents whatever. Persons who require Pure Liquors or Wines, in large or small quantities, may rest assured that all orders will receive our best personal attention, and that every article sent from our house will be satisfactory in every respect. Communications by mail will receive prompt attention, with full and complete catalogue of goods, prices, &c.

THE SPECIFIC PILL

Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, and Gonorrhea in either sex.
This Malady, the terrible consequences of which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore dangerous, of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of Life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and sinks the unhappy victim into imbecility and a permanent grave. From one to six boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most aggravated cases, whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse or Excess.
MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Spermatorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.
I have found them all that could be desired.—Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years.—P. DICKER, M. D.
This is not a Homoeopathic Remedy, nor is there any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.
PRICE—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5, by mail, prepaid. For sale by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. W. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.
For sale at Wholesale, by W. E. KEITH & P. T. TER, General Agents, Boston Nov 16

HEBARD'S PATENT OIL!

No more accidents by Burning Fluid!
A safe substitute to burn in Fluid Lamps. THIS Oil is prepared to burn in all kinds of Lamps without chimneys, such as Tallow, Sperm or Lamp Oil Lamps, and will burn at half the cost of Fluid in all Lamps fitted with Green's Jet Burners, and is the greatest Artificial Light yet discovered. It gives a steady, clean and soft light, and does not choke the Lungs with foreign matters, such as results generally from using Rosin and Kerosene Oil, and will burn in Kerosene Lamps free from Smoke and Smell by taking off the Cap and Chimney.
It is also a COMPLETE SUBSTITUTE for Sperm and Lamp Oil, and is just as safe and harmless to burn, and may take the place of the Common Fluid and other dangerous compounds that have been thrown into the market of late.
The above Oil is perfectly clean and free from Grease and Smoke or unpleasant Odor, and is now considered the SAFEST and BEST Oil ever offered to the public. It is a most desirable article, and what is more than ALL it is unexpensive.
Any person can have samples sent by express, if desired.
The above Oil and Town Rights for sale, with full directions to make, by addressing the Patentee.
 caveat applied for and granted Feb. 24th, 1860. Letters patent issued Feb. 19th, 1861. The above Oil retails for $1.00 per gallon. Wholesale 80 cents per gallon.
Orders solicited and filled with despatch. Letters promptly answered.

DR. LA CROIX'S PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

Physiological View of Marriage.
250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushing, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c. It is a truthful, candid, and unvarnished exposure of those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.
YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.
We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled Physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore, as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional practice, for the past twenty-five years.
FERRYMAN'S LIVERY. Ladies who wish to effect speedy cures of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. DeLaney's Female Pectoral Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box), though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.
Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.
TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.
THE "ELEKTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.
THE SECRETS OF YOUTH UNVEILED! A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—a solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insidious progress and prevalence of early decay, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and describing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.
It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.
Attendance daily, from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, and on Sundays from 2 till 5 p. m.
Medicines with full directions sent to any part of the United States or Canada, by patients communicating their symptoms by letter. Business correspondence strictly confidential.
Dr. L.'s Office is still located as established, under the name of DR. LA CROIX, at No. 31 Maiden Lane, Albany, N. Y.

Popping Corn.

And there they sat a popping corn,
John Stiles and Susan Carter;
John Stiles as stout as any ox,
And Susan fat as butter.
And there they sat and shelled the corn,
And raked and stirred the fire,
And talked of different kinds of ears,
And hatched their chairs up higher.
Then Susan she the popper shook,
Then John he shook the popper,
Till both their faces grew as red,
As saucers made of copper.
And then they shelled and popped and
All kinds of fun-a-poking,
And he haw-hawed at her remarks,
And she laughed at his joking.
And still they popped, and still they sat,
(John's mouth was like a popper),
And stirred the fire and sprinkled salt,
And shook and shook the popper.
The clock struck nine, the clock struck ten,
And still the corn kept popping;
It struck eleven and then struck twelve,
And still no signs of stopping.
And John he ate, and Sue she thought—
The corn did pop and patter,
Till John cried out, the corn's afever!
Why Susan, what's the matter?
Said Sue, John Stiles, its own a'clock,
You'll die of indigestion;
I'm sick of all this popping corn,
Why don't you pop the question?

Scraps.

Five dollars worth of beaver to cover cents' worth of brains, is thought by an exchange to be a needless waste of property.

He who thinks he can do without other mistakes; he who thinks others cannot without him is still more mistaken.

The captain of a ship is not governed by his mate, but a married man generally is.

Learn wisdom by the follies of others.

A Welsh editor says, "if we have offered any man in the short but brilliant course of our career, let him send us a now list and nothing about it."

Benevolence does not measure its duties too nicely. The clouds never send it to ask the grass and plants below how they need; they rain for the relief of their own low bosoms.

Serenity of mind, a good wife, roast meat and a cold water bath, will make almost man wealthy and wise.

A soldier in one of the Kentucky regiments says the motto with them in the winter is "United we sleep, divided we freeze."

Happy the man who is an early riser. Every morning day comes to him with a gin love, full of bloom, purity and freshness.

BEAUTY. We have high authority for opinion, that perfect loveliness is only to be found where the features, even when they are beautiful, derive their peculiar charm from the sweetness and gentleness of disposition which the countenance expresses.

It is pleasant to see roses and hives a sign to a young lady's cheeks, but a sign to see a man's face break out in sores.

A child of five, having seen her father the first time, he having been absent in uniform, was much astonished that he should claim any authority over her, and on occasion of rebellion as he administered chastisement, she cried out—"I wish you had married into our family!"

There is a purple half to the grape, a son half to the peach, a sunny half to the globe, and a better half to man.

Tears at a wedding are only the commencement of the pickle that the young folks are getting into.

Slender not others because they have doted you; bite not a reptile because have felt his bite.

Childhood often holds a truth with its little fingers, which the grasp of manhood do not retain; which it is the pride of its age to recover.

The first religious newspaper ever published was the "Herald of Gospel Liberty," published by Elias Smith, of Portland, New Hampshire, in 1809.

Jests, like sweetmeats, have often a sauce.

opinion, that perfect loveliness is only to be found where the features, even when the most beautiful, derive their peculiar charm from the sweetness and gentleness of disposition which the countenance expresses.It is pleasant to see roses and lilacs glowing upon a young lady's cheek, but a bad sign to see a man's face break out in blotsoms.A child of five, having seen her father for the first time, he having been absent in California, was much astonished that he should claim any authority over her, and on an occasion of rebellion, as he administered punishment, she cried out:—"I wish you had never

by his own exertions, and straightway you shall hear numerous anecdotes illustrating
the means by which he attained his riches,
the effect they have upon him, his disposition of them, or his sayings, peculiarities and eccentricities.Astor, Girard and Billy Gray have furnished illustrations for many a clever sketcher.
We heard a few clever anecdotes the other day of Billy Gibbons, a New Jersey millionaire, one of which we will give our readers.It seems that Billy, while in a country village in which he owned some property, stepped into a barber's shop to get shaved. The shop was full of customers, and the old gentleman quietly waited for his turn.A customer who was under the barber's hands when the old man came in, asked the "knight of the razor," in an under tone, if he knew who that was, and on receiving a negative reply, he informed him, in a whisper, it was "old Billy Gibbons," the richest man in the State.Gad, said the barber, I'll charge him for his shave.Accordingly, after the old man had had that opportunity performed, he was somewhat surprised upon asking the price, to be told—seventy-five cents.Seventy-five cents! said he, quietly, isn't that rather a high price?It's my price, said he of the lather-brush, independently, and as this is the only barber's shop in the place, then as comes into it must pay what I ask.To the old man this was evidently a knock-down argument, for he drew three-quarters of a dollar from his pocket, and paid them over to the barber, and left the shop.A short time after he was in close conversation with the landlord of a tavern hard by,
and the topic of conversation—barber's shops.Why is it, said he, there's only one barber's shop in town? there seems to be nearly enough work for two.Well, there used to be two, said the landlord, till last winter, when this new man came up from the city and opened a new shop, and as every thing in it was fresh and new, folks sort of deserted Bill Harrington's
shop, which had been going on for nigh fourteen years.But didn't this Bill do good work? didn't he shave well, and—cheap?Well, as for that, said the landlord, Bill did his work well enough and cheap enough,
but his shop wasn't on the Main street like
the new one, and didn't have so many pictures and handsome curtains, and folks got in the way of thinking the new chap was more scientific and brought more city fashions with him—though, to tell the truth, said
the landlord, stroking a chin sown with a beard resembling screen wire, I never want a lighter touch, or a keener razor than Bill Harrington's.City fashions—oh! growled the old man.
So the new man's city fashions shut up the other barber's shop.Well, not exactly, said the landlord, though things never did seem to go well with Bill
after the new shop opened; first one of his little children died of a fever, then his wife was sick a long time, and Bill had a long bill
to pay at the Doctor's, then as a last misfortune, his shop burned down one night, tools, brushes, furniture and all, and no insurance.Well, said the old man pettishly, why don't he start again?Start again! said the communicative landlord, why, bless your soul, he hasn't got anything to start with.H-m-m! Where does this man live? asked the old man.He was directed, and ere long was in conversation with the unfortunate tonsor, who corroborated the landlord's story.Why don't you take a new shop? said the old man, there's a new one in the block right opposite the other barber's shop.What! said the other, you must be crazy.
Why that block belongs to old Billy Gibbons; he'd never let one of these stores for a barber's shop: they are a mighty sight too good—besides that, I haven't got twenty dollars in the world to fit it up with.You don't know old Billy Gibbons as well as I do, said the other. Now, listen to me:
If you can have that shop all fitted up rent
free, what will you work in it for by the month? What is the least you can live on?This proposition somewhat startled the unfortunate hair-dresser, who finally found words to stammer out that, perhaps, twelve or fifteen dollars a month would be about enough.Pshaw! said the old man, that won't do—
now listen to me; I'll give you that store,
rent free one year, and engage your services
six months, all on these conditions. You are to shave and cut hair for every body thatapplies to you, and take no pay; just charge
it all to me, and for your services I'll pay you twenty dollars a month, payable in advance—pay to commence now, continued he,
placing two ten dollar notes on the table
before the astonished barber; who, it is almost unnecessary to state, accepted the proposition, and who was still more surprised to learn that it was Billy Gibbons himself who had hired him.In a few days the inhabitants of that village were astonished by the appearance of a splendid new barber's shop, far surpassing the other in elegance of appointments, and in which, with new mugs, soaps, razors and perfumes, stood a barber and assistant ready to do duty on the heads and beards of the people. Over the door was inscribed Wm.
Harrington, Shaving and Hair Dressing
Saloon.The people were not long in ascertaining or slow in availing themselves of the privileges of this establishment, and it is not to be wondered that it was crowded and the other deserted. The other held out some weeks, suspecting this free shaving—for Bill
still kept his secret well—was but a dodge
to entice customers away, who would soon
be charged as usual; but when at the end of six weeks he found Billy working away as usual, charging not a cent for his labor, and having money to spend into the bargain, he came to the conclusion that he must have drawn a prize in the lottery, or stumbled upon a gold mine, and was keeping a barber's shop in fun, so he closed his shop in despair, and left the place.Meanwhile, Bill Harrington kept on busy
as a bee, and one fine morning his employer stepped in and without a word, sat down and was shaved; on rising from his chair he asked to see the score for the six months past. The barber exhibited it, and after a careful calculation, the old man said:

Plenty of customers, eh?

Lots of 'em, said the barber; never did such a business in my life!Well, replied Money Bags, you have kept the account well. I see I've paid you one hundred and twenty dollars for services—all right—and there are three hundred and thirty charged for all shaving that applied; now,
this furniture cost one hundred and eight dollars; balance due you, one hundred and two dollars. Here it is. Now you own this furniture, and are to have this shop rent free six months longer—and after-to-day you are to charge the regular price for work, for your pay from me stops to-day.

This of course the barber gladly assented to.

But, said the old man, on leaving, take care you never cheat a man by charging ten times the usual price for a shave; for it may be another old "Billy Gibbons."Our Brother.People may not be generally aware that we are the only child of our respected parents. Tradition hath it, that when we were some weeks old, dad and mam gathered about us for the purpose of calculating as nearly as possible what we were likely to turn out to be. When the inspection ended, they were confoundedly discouraged, and per consequence, the generation of Clark—
at least in our father's family—ceased with us. Notwithstanding, we always had a sort of hankering after our own brother, "according to the flesh," and a short time since,
we found one. It happened in this wise:
The other day, we went some three miles
into the country for the purpose of seeing a gentleman with whom we had some business,
and on calling at his residence, was informed that he was in a certain lot which was pointed out to us. We went to the place indicated, and not being able to perceive the person
for whom we were in search, we ascended a fence hard by to aid us in our observations.From this point of view, we saw a man in his shirt sleeves standing in an adjacent field,
and inflating our lungs sent forth a loud
halloo! Apparently we were not heard, as no movement of the person greeted our eyes, or answering shout saluted our ears. Once more we rent the air with our voice. No return. After sucking in about fifteen gallons of the atmosphere, we were about to expand
it into a steam whistle yell, when casually turning our eyes, we beheld a lad about eight years old, hatless, his hair looking as if it had just been made the sport of a whirlwind, while his face was liberally supplied with some thick patches of "free soil," sitting on a fence a short distance from us.What in thunder are you hollerin' at? said
the urchin, giving his head a most harrowing scratch with his eight digits.That man yonder in the field, we replied.
M-a-n! drawled the youth, looking in the direction we pointed, then opening his mouth
until we could have thrown a tolerable-sized potato down his expansive throat, he almost shrieked with laughter.

What are you laughing at, you nippy?

We asked crossly.

O mister! said the little urchin, that ere thing yer hollerin' at is a scarecrow.Is it? we rejoined, looking around for a knot or rat hole into which we could crawl.Uv course! he retorted, breaking out anew. Then suddenly putting on a sober face, he asked with much apparent interest:
Mister did you think it was your brother?The place on that fence that knew us suddenly knew us no more.The Mother.Her place can never be supplied: none
but she can obtain that entire intimacy with our hearts: in her loss the father feels at once a link broken between him and his children; she forms the softening medium between his masculine control and their tender years.The father may instruct, but the mother must instil: the father may counsel our reason, but the mother compels our instincts;
the father may finish, but the mother must begin. In a word, were we to draw a general distinction, without particular attention to accuracy, we should say that the empire of the father was over the head, that of the mother over the heart.Kitchen Economy.In our housekeeping we know nothing of true economy, and yet economy, is a watchword in almost every house. Beefsteak and white bread, butter and potatoes, make up the bulk of the ordinary fare of most families from one year to another. But the housewife is seized with a streak of economy, and it is announced at the table, if not put in the papers, that economy is to be the rule. Well, economy is tried. No butter, or sugar, or meat, or coffee is to be allowed. Something of course, is selected as "contraband" that will be most missed. This is endured for a while; everybody is rendered uncomfortable, and soon, to the gratification of all, it is agreed that economy is a humbug, and things settle down into the old track. This plainly shows the world is not understood. But let a French woman, who knows the meaning of the term, take charge of the housekeeping,
and not one word will be heard of economy;
every one will praise the glorious living, the rich and delicious yet nameless dishes that so please the palate, and which all agree
must be exceedingly costly, while the truth is, the economy dodge is being practised by the housekeeper, who keeps her own secrets,
and her money too.I hope American housekeepers will think of this, and when they wish to economize in family expenses, say nothing about it, but with a little ingenuity and calculation, and a little extra labor, make every one believe they are living better than ever before, while they are saving one-half their ordinary expenses.—
Just how this is to be done perhaps I cannot tell you, but I know every good French housekeeper could. And with a little thought I am satisfied every intelligent Yankee can do the same. I have long been of the conviction that we might save one-half of our living expenses; and if so, this is certainly the time for a beginning.—*Rural New Yorker.On the Battle-Field.The following affecting incident is related by the war correspondent of a contemporary,
who was at the battle of Fort Donelson, and was an eye-witness to it:—"I saw," he says,
"an old gray-haired man, endeavoring to stop
with a strip of his coat the life-line flowing from the bosom of his son, a youth of twenty years. The boy told his father that it was useless—that he could not live; and, while the devoted parent was still striving feebly to save him who was perhaps his first-born, a shudder passed through the frame of the
would be preserver, his head fell upon the bosom of the youth, and his gray hairs were bathed in death with the expiring blood of his misguided son. I saw the twain half an hour after, and youth and age were locked, lifeless, in one another's arms. A dark-haired young man, of apparently twenty-two or three,
I found leaning against a tree, his breast pierced by a bayonet. He said he lived in Alabama; that he had joined the rebels in opposition to his parent's wishes; that his mother, when she found that he would go into the army, had given him her blessing, a Bible, and a lock of her hair. The Bible lay half-opened upon the ground, and the hair,
a dark lock, tinged with gray, that had been between the leaves, was in his hand. Tears were in his eyes, as he thought of his anxious mother, passing, perhaps, amid her prayers,
to listen for the long expected footsteps of her son, who would never more return. In the lock of hair even as much as in the Sacred Volume, religion was revealed to the dying
young man, and I saw him lift the tress again
and again to his lips, as his eyes looked dimly across the misty sea that bounds the shores of Life and Death, as if he saw his motherreaching out to him with the arms that had nursed him in his infancy, to die, alas! fighting against his country, and her counsels
whose memory lived latest in his departing soul."A Mean Man.Old Ira Teanster was a dreadful mean man; he was awful mean. One day the old fellow was at work upon the high beams of his barn, when he lost his balance, and fell heavily on the floor, twenty feet below. He was taken up for dead, with a fractured skull, and carried into the house. All efforts to bring him to consciousness were unavailing,
and the doctor was called. Finally, the doctor, having trepanned him, turned and asked Mrs. Teanster for a silver dollar, to put in where a piece of the skull was wanting. At this remark, Ira, who had been breathing heavily, turned in bed, and groaned out:—
"Wouldn't a cent do as well?"Army Correspondence.

NEWBURN, (N. C.) MARCH 28th, 1862.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Having promised sometime since that I would write an article for the Patriot, and having a few leisure moments I will try and fulfill my promise. I suppose that you have heard, before this time, of the battle of Roanoke Island, on the 8th of February, and our glorious victory over the rebels; also, the brilliant victory of our army at this place.—
I will now give your readers a brief account of the battle.Tuesday morning, March 11th, the signal was made for the fleet to get underway, and in a short time the whole fleet was on the move down the Pamlico Sound, towards Hat-tersville Inlet, and no one but the staff officers and captains of the transports knew what our destination was. It was a beautiful morning and it was a fine sight to stand on the deck
and look about upon the fleet of steamers and schooners, over one hundred in number, filled with troops, all anxious to know what place
we were going to attack. The fleet were arranged in three lines, the gunboats, fifteen in number, taking the lead. We arrived at Hatteras Inlet at about 7 o'clock the same evening, and came to anchor for the night;
we here found a large mail awaiting us from home, and such a time as there was on board
the different transports you never saw. Almost every one had one or two letters from home, and any quantity of papers containing cheering news from our army in Tennessee and other places. The next morning, Mar.
12th, the signal for starting was given from the Commodore's boat and in a few moments
the whole fleet was moving slowly up the Sound towards the Neuse river, we then began to suspect that we were to make an attack on Newbern. Nothing of importance occurred during the day. We arrived at the mouth of the Neuse river about four o'clock in the afternoon, and after proceeding about fifteen miles up the river came to anchor for the night.Next morning, (March 13th) the gunboats commenced throwing shells on shore in search of concealed batteries, but not finding any
the order was given for the troops to commence landing, and by three o'clock in the afternoon our whole force had landed. It now commenced raining and our troops had to lie down on the wet ground in a drenching
rain all night, and at an early hour next morning were on their way, with the mud up to their knees. They came suddenly on an unfinished battery, over a mile in length, extending from the river to the railroad which runs from Newburn to Beaufort; and as there were no rebels in sight they pushed on about two miles, when they came suddenly in front of a large battery mounting some twenty-five guns and filled with rebels. They opened fire on us and we returned the fire in earnest;
then came the chance for our force to show their "pluck." The division was drawn up in line of battle, and the shot, shell and bullets were flying around us like hail, cutting off the trees. In a short time the rebels began to run which soon ended in a general rout of the enemy. They went across the bridge towards the city like the d—l, with our troops close on their heels; you could not see their coat tails for dust. By this time our gunboats had got through the blockade in the river and were throwing shells into the city after them.I am sorry to say, however, that we lost so many men; the loss on our side being estimated at five hundred in killed and wounded.
The regiments that suffered most were the 23d, 24th and 27th Massachusetts. We, (the 23d regiment in which I enlisted,) lost Lieut.
Col. Merritt, he having been shot with a cannon ball and only lived about twenty minutes.
He was a fine officer, and much beloved by all for his kindness and bravery. The loss in our regiment was sixty, killed and wounded, one of which was James Ryan of Quincy;
he was a fine fellow, and much beloved by our men. He was shot through the headwith a musket ball which entered his forehead and came out on the back side of his head.—
When found he had his musket in his hand,
all loaded, ready to give them another shot,
but was stricken down before

tree, and fill the air, for miles around, with their fragrant odor. I have written to many friends since I left, but have received but few answers; I wish they would be more thoughtful. My uncle is not very painful, nevertheless, it relieves me from duty, which I do not regret, as it affords time to do my mending, washing, etc.; I have become quite an expert in such matters, and if I ever set up in a domestic way, I think it will be found I can do something else besides tending the baby. I called on Parker and Felts, yesterday, and found them well—they send their best respects. I have no news to communicate which would interest you. The papers you sent me were very acceptable; our thoughts, ever, on the arrival of the mail, turn homeward. The weather is getting to be pretty hot; 80, Fahrenheit, in the shade; next month, we are told, is the hottest of the season. Our camp is located on a pleasant part of the island—open to the sea breeze, and has a fine view of the river. From Braddock's Point, fifteen miles distant, an outpost of our pickets, Fort Pulaski, a stronghold of the enemy, may be seen on a clear day. Remember me, if you please, to all enquiring friends.

Yours affectionately,
C. H. WHITING.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

BORN TO MASTER, OF NOSECARE WE.

YOUNG HAYDEN. We little thought when he bid adieu, to enter the service of his country, that it would be our last greeting on earth. But who can read the mysterious decrees of Providence. He was stricken down by disease, in the spring-time of life, and the place that once knew him, will know him no more. But in this severe dispensation, his sorrowing friends have the consolation to know, that he did not die among strangers; his sick bed was carefully watched by his comrades—until death closed the scene. He now sleeps in a soldier's grave—which will be consecrated by the tears of those who knew him in the busy scenes of life. The remains were received here on Tuesday, and the rites of sepulture, were performed the day following. Richard B. Hayden, was the son of Harvey Hayden, a respectable citizen of this place, and was about sixteen years of age at the time of his death.

A letter, which has been received from the Captain of the Company to which he belonged, will appear in our next.

PROMOTED. Among the commissions issued on Saturday last, we noticed that of Charles F. Fry of this town, as 2d Lieutenant, Co. K., 18th Massachusetts Regiment.

This is, we think, a good appointment. Mr. Fry has been connected with the Massachusetts Militia for years, and is well qualified for his new position.

JURORS. At a meeting of the Selectmen held April 12th, 1862, Mr. Owen Adams was drawn as Grand Juror to serve one year, and Messrs. Hiram Prior and Joseph G. Brackett, as Petit Jurors for the next term of the Superior Court at Dedham.

AMBROTYPES, ETC. We learn with pleasure that Mr. T. K. Hunkings, who has recently been stopping at Weymouth Landing, is about opening a saloon in this village for the purpose of taking Ambrotypes, Card Photographs, &c., &c. More particulars next week.

ICE. As the warm season approaches it is time to think about getting our ice-chests in proper condition. There are many new inventions, which if we could place reliance upon the manufacturers' words, present incredible advantages, both as they regard economy and utility; but, notwithstanding all the encomiums placed upon the new inventions, we believe that the best ice-chest is one which is made of plank and lined with zinc. It is more roomy, and articles in it are kept cool and in good order. The ice this year has been harvested well. The few weeks of severe cold gave us ice in our ponds varying in thickness from sixteen to twenty-two inches, and is beautifully transparent. Our friend, Wm. Gardner Prescott, has a large supply of the very best quality of such ice, and will deliver it to his customers during the coming season. Even the ice taken from Wenham, Fresh, Jamaica, and other celebrated ponds will not surpass it. As ice has ceased to be a luxury and has become a necessary of life, and an article that physicians recommend, we hope that every one will make preparations to supply himself during the coming season; and we recommend our friend Prescott to the patronage of the public.

THE PEAK FAMILY. The exhibition of the Peak Family at the Town Hall, on Thursday evening, was a musical treat. The house was well filled, and the performances in the best style of that popular troupe. The reputation of this Company always draws a full house.

Call at friend Savil's Saloon this evening. There will be another Free Lunch.

The Senate Finance Committee has struck out $15,000,000 of the gunboat appropriation.

For the Patriot.

Exhibition of the Adams Literary Asso

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Having the pleasure of attending the Exhibition at the Town Hall, on Friday evening, the 11th instant, and thinking that the readers of the Patriot would like to know what took place, I will endeavor, impartially, to give those who were not present, a brief description of the Exhibition.

The doors opened at seven o'clock—and supposing there would not be much of a crowd, your reporter did not get there until half past seven; when to his surprise, he was met by an immense crowd, which threatened to debar his entrance. The main floor was filled, and the gallery well packed. I think it was the largest audience ever drawn to that place to witness an exhibition.

A new feature, which I think a very good one was introduced—that is, having no programme. At half past seven o'clock, the Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Forbush, (who, by the way, is one of the best of managers) after an appeal to the attention of the audience, read the order of exercises.

The music throughout the evening was fine; it brought all parts in harmony together. The first declamation, by young Randall—"An Ode to the American Flag," was very good; "The Rally," by McGrath, was quite well rendered; "Northern Laborers," by O'Neil, was fair—a little more spirit and a little more practice would have been an improvement; "The Tragedy," was a good piece of acting—Bertram, the Chief, was well sustained by Mr. Forbush—Oscar, was quite well done by young Randall—and the inferior parts, Samuel Nightingale and J. H. Mundy, only were prominent; "Rodolphus the Brave," by Samuel Nightingale, was finely executed—he has comic powers of considerable excellence; the extract from "Samuel Adams," by John Mundy, was rendered in good style—he is a young man of good promise; L. S. Richards—"The Raven,"—was fairly done; "The Comedy," went off well—J. H. Mundy doing Bombastes finely—young Randall, as Distaffian was also very good; W. P. Barker, as "Fusbos" did his part excellently well; Mundy and Barker's fencing was a dexterous feat; "Liberty and Union," by C. H. Porter, was a fine piece of oratory—his enunciation was natural and easy, and the inspiration of the theme, by his accurate conception of the reading of the author, flowed through every sentence; the single "Declaration" by J. H. Mundy, was the best of the evening—his ease and dignity on the stage, gave promise of future excellence; young Newcomb was short and sweet—he is a hopeful youth; and last but not least, we must not forget the Gymnastics; this was a most pleasant and interesting part of the entertainment; and added much to the attractions of the exhibition; this exhilarating amusement, the importance of which, is not yet duly appreciated, is fast coming into vogue. It is hoped that next winter there will be a class of Dr. Lewis' Gymnastics in the Centre District; the amateurs on this occasion, and which gave such general satisfaction, were members of the North District School.

Presuming that your readers take an interest in every thing relating to the exhibition, I will here append a list of the names of this youthful corps of gymnastic performers.

Mr. A. Sanford, Teacher.

Miss Charity L. Reed, Miss Maggie Duggan,

" Abby C. Reed, Master Cyrus Balkam,

" Mary L. Pope, " Samuel C. Foster,

" Susie J. Pope, " George Foster,

" Ella L. Pope, " Charles Hovey,

" Edith Foster,

In conclusion, I would say that the people of Quincy, have never seen a finer exhibition than this. It was worthy of the A. L. Association.

OCCASIONAL.

GODEY FOR MAY. In this number, May flowers are profusely scattered; the frontispiece, a beautiful line engraving, gives the reader a foretaste of the sweet month of May; the "Extension Plate" is radiant with brilliant hues; "Embroiderment," a new feature in the embroidery department—and first introduced to the American public through this Magazine; there are seventy-five engravings illustrative of the month of May—and thirty-two pages filled with designs on other subjects to be found in this number; besides a new piece of music, and other new novelties too numerous to mention—it must be seen to be appreciated. Call at Gill's, he will furnish you with a copy.

TAXATION. The House of Representatives has matured and passed its general Tax Bill. The leading idea of that bill is a rigorous and all-embracing impartiality in imposing burdens. "Wherever you see a head, hit it," is the maxim which seems to have governed the decisions of Mr. Stevens' Committee. To make every one and every thing contribute, so far as possible, to the discharge of the heavy burdens laid upon the country by the slaveholder's rebellion, has been pretty generally sustained by the House. Death and the tax-gatherer will be pretty sure to find every one, should this bill become and while it remains the law of the land.

Do not forget to call at the Hancock Saloon to-night and try another Free Chowder.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, APRIL 17TH, 1862.

The public mind here is quite alive in relation to war matters. The wholesale fight at Pittsburgh, in which much was lost and little gained on either side, hardly satisfies the curiosity of a good portion of the community. And now all eyes are turned to Yorktown as a grand climacteric of the civil war; but its capture and an advance to Norfolk are among the events soon to happen.

Yorktown is situated near the mouth of York River. The lower part of this river is very wide as it empties into Chesapeake Bay, near Fortress Monroe. The engagement will probably be both land and naval. The army of the Potomac, including thousands of the brave from New England, are now before Yorktown, under its leader, Gen. McClellan; and soon the flood gates of intelligence will open to us of mighty events which the censorship of the press cannot long withhold. Wait then with patience and hope.

Judge Thomas, Member of Congress from the Second Congressional District, and successor of the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, has recently made a speech on the Tax Bill, its exuberant statistics, setting forth the wealth and industry of our State, do great credit to the industry of your member of Congress. There are many fine flights which give evidence of his high attainments in classical literature; qualifications which we love to see in American statesmen. But like his speech on the Trent affair, it meets with little enthusiasm with the public press.

The Trent affair speech was rather impetuous; lacking discretion, rather than valor; and had the Government taken his counsel, we should now have been at war with Great Britain. The general tenor of his remarks, growing out of the discussion of the Tax Bill, is certainly conservative and unobjectionable. In carrying on the war, he is said to be opposed to the confiscation of rebel property; but upon an examination of his late speech, we can draw no such deductions. So far, Judge Thomas' career in the House, cannot be considered a success—although his ability and patriotism cannot be called in question.

The State Legislature, now busy at work, will not rise until May. The session is at speech making meridian; many eloquent addresses having been recently made. The Speaker, who is extensively named by his friends as a candidate for the next Congress, able and eloquently addressed the House, on Thursday, the 10th instant, growing out of the consideration of the State Tax Bill. And although he argues, that a huge national debt growing out of war burdens is not a national blessing—yet Massachusetts is amply able to meet her share of indebtedness, and will do it in the spirit of patriotism. There are plenty of good speakers in the Senate and House, from whom we shall hear before the close of the session.

LETTERS FOR SOLDIERS ON THE POTOMAC. The Post Office Department gives notice that all letters addressed to officers and soldiers on the Potomac, whether near Washington or moving South, should be mailed to Washington City. From that office they will be properly forwarded in separate packages to the respective corps and divisions, and their delivery facilitated.

THE DISTRICT BILL. Gov. Andrew has vetoed the bill to divide the Commonwealth into districts for the choice of Representatives to Congress. He thinks the people should not be restricted to voting for residents of districts, but should have the privilege of choosing from any part of the State.

ISLANDS IN THE MISSISSIPPI. The islands in the Mississippi above the mouth of the Ohio are all named—and below the Ohio they are numbered. Island No. 1 is below Cairo, and they continue south in numerical order to No. 125, at or near Tanico Bend, Louisiana, about 120 miles above New Orleans. From that point to its mouth the river is clear of all islands.

TAKE YOUR LOCAL NEWSPAPER AND PRESERVE IT. What an interesting succession of events can be found in the volume of a newspaper of half a century. Truly the local history of a town or a city can no where else be obtained than in the local newspaper, which every subscriber could save with a little care and attention. Its hymeneal and obituary record, aside from the faithful details of every day events not elsewhere to be traced, is of sufficient interest for every family to preserve a file of their local newspaper.

—Tauton Democrat.

EMANCIPATION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. The Bill to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, has passed both Houses of Congress, and been signed by the President, and is now a law of the land.

Rev. Mr. Heath will preach to-morrow morning upon the "FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING." Subject in the afternoon—"EVEN LASTING GOODNESS AND EVERLASTING MISERY."

Bank Stock at Auction.

WILL be sold at Public Auction, on SATURDAY, April 26th, at 5 o'clock P. M. at the Hancock House, Eight Shares in the Quincy Stone Bank.

ROLL OF HONOR.

Quincy Soldiers in Uncle Sam's Service.

We publish the following list for the last time. It contains the names of those who enlisted for three months; and also those for three years. The fourth and fifth regiments were three months troops, and it will be seen that many of these soldiers have re-enlisted in other regiments. The list now contains the names of two hundred and eighty-two different persons who have enlisted in the government service since the rebellion. Of this number two have died; two have been killed; and two wounded.

The Umbrella.

The rain came pouring down from the clouds,
And pouring through the gutter,
While the dripping hurrying crowds,
Awaited did flap and flutter.
Fair Annie clung unto my arm,
And I'd just sense to tell her,
That she should never come to harm,
Beneath my good umbrella.

The wind and rain did both combine,
In turning round a corner,
To bring her cheek almost to mine!
It did, upon my honor.
She gave a little sudden start,
And said: "You careless fellow!
My tongue apologized, but heart
Bless'd wind, rain and umbrella.

In life's sharp angles, wind and rain—
Its fair and sunny weather—
Our paths have not thus always lain,
Along its way through the gutter.
For the moral courage lacked,
My depth of love to tell her,
Even with that rare occasion, backed
By rain, wind and umbrella.

Now she a farmer's meal prepares,
Bless'd in her humble station,
While I am harassed with the cares
That vex a mighty nation.
Yet I'd not have my wife infer,
(My stately Arabella)
What memories thrill me, even with her,
Beneath the old umbrella.

Pull Through.

Though dangers rise your path to bar,
Pull through, pull through,
Though dimly shines your guiding star,
Pull through, pull through;
For those who now your worth despise,
Who clog your way with scorn and lies,
Yet I'd have you safe and free;
Pull through, pull through.

Your deeds let no dishonor taint,
Pull through, pull through;
Gird on your armor for the fight,
And nobly battle for the right,
Heedless of the frowns of might;
Pull through, pull through.

Though bright eyes seldom on you gleam,
Pull through, pull through;
Though victory seem an empty dream,
Pull through, pull through;
For if the laurel you would wear,
Your heart must learn to do, and dare
The martyr's cross awhile to wear;
Pull through, pull through.

The Empty Cradle.

In the lonely, quiet chamber
There's an empty cradle bed,
With a print upon the pillow
Of a baby's shining head.
'Tis a fair and dainty cradle,
Dowry soft with pillows white;
But within the blanket folded
Lies no little form to-night.

Once the mother sat beside it,
When the day was growing dim,
And her pleasant voice was singing
Soft and low a cradle hymn.
Now there's no more sound of singing
When the evening shadows creep,
For the cradle bed is empty,
And the baby gone to sleep.

Little head that used to nestle
In the pillows white and soft—
Little hands whose restless fingers
Folded there in dreams so oft—
Lips we pressed with fondest kisses—
Eyes we gazed upon so true;
Underneath the churchyard daisies
They have hidden you all away.

Ah, the empty, useless cradle!
We will put it out of sight,
Lest our hearts should grieve too sorely
For the little one to-night.
We will think how safe forever
In the better field above,
That young lamb for whom we sorrow
Resteth now in Jesus' love.

Suerdates.

An old lady on reading in the newspaper
The head of a political article, "Illinois moving," said—
"Do tell if they are moving the State of Illinois? I wonder where they are moving William's farm on the Illinois river will be moved to!"

An Irishman being asked whether he did not frequently converse with a friend in Irish,
replied:
"No, indeed. Jemmy often speaks to me in Irish, but I always answer him in English.
Why so? Because, you see, I don't want Johnny to know that I understand Irish."

Colonel Bond, who had sat as one of the judges on the trial of King Charles the First,
died a day or two before Cromwell; who it was reported was dead.

No, no! said a gentleman who had better information, he has only given bond to the d—l for his future appearance.

At a musical party, a vocal performer who was shabbily dressed, being complimented upon the powers of his voice, vainly threw up his head and replied:
"O lord, sir, I can make anything of it."

Can you, indeed, said a wit in company;
then I advise you to make a pair of breeches
of it!

Mr. Curran being asked what an Irish gentleman, who had just arrived from Ireland, could mean by perpetually putting out his tongue, answered:
"I suppose he is trying to catch the English accent."

A servant was recently charged with stealing a sheet, the property of her mistress. In defense she said her mistress told her to bring one of the sheets off her bed to be washed, and make a shirt with the other; being much distressed for want of one, she set up all night to make it.

WE offer to the country trade and consumers,
a complete assortment of every variety of
LIQUORS, WINES, &c., and would say
that our experience of more than FORTY years
as Importers is not only a sufficient guarantee for
the Purity of our Goods, but that it enables us
to offer advantages to buyers that can not be excelled by any house in Boston. Owing to the difficulty of procuring, in many towns, a strictly
pure and reliable article of Liquors and Wines
for medicinal and other purposes, we have for
many years given particular attention to filling
orders for PRIVATE USE, and consumers will
find it greatly to their advantage to send their orders to us direct, as we employ no travelling or other agents whatever. Persons who require
Pure Liquors or Wines, in large or small quantities, may rest assured that all orders will receive
our best personal attention, and that every article
sent from our house will be satisfactory in every respect. Communications by mail will receive
prompt attention, with full and complete catalogue

as to act in concert, and assist Nature in eradicating disease.

The effect of this medicine is most wonderful—
it acts directly upon the bowels and blood, by
removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating them into healthy action, renovating the fountain of life, purifying the blood, clearing it from all humors, and causing it to
course anew through every part of the body; restoring the invalid to health and usefulness.—
They cure and eradicate from the system, Liver
Complaint, biliousness, indigestion, headache,
dizziness, piles, heartburn, weakness, pains in
the side and liver, a disordered stomach, or bad
blood, to which all are more or less subject in Spring and Summer.

HEBARD'S
PATENT OIL!

No more accidents by Burning Fluid!
A safe substitute to burn in Fluid Lamps.

THIS Oil is prepared to burn in all kinds
of Lamps without chimneys, such as Fluid, Sperm or Lamp Oil Lamps, and will burn at half the cost of Fluid in all Lamps fixed with Green's Jet Burners, and is the greatest Artificial Light yet discovered. It gives
a steady, clean and soft light, and does not
choke the Lungs with foreign matters, such
as results generally from using Rosin and Kerosene Oil, and will burn in Kerosene Lamps
free from Smoke and Smell by taking off the Cap and Chimney.

It is also a COMPLETE SUBSTITUTE for Sperm
and Lamp Oils, and is just as safe and harmless to burn, and may take the place of the Common Fluid and other dangerous compounds that have been thrown into the market
of late.

The above Oil is perfectly clean and free
from Grease and Smoke or unpleasant Odor,
and is now considered the SAFEST and BEST Oil ever offered to the public. It is a most desirable article for domestic use, and what is more than all it is unexpensive.

DR. LA CROIX'S

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

ON THE

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only 50 CENTS.

SENT free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginations, involuntary emissions, hingsings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c. &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and resources of the most skilled Physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore, as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for Medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures, without any bad results will use none but Dr. DeLaney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box), though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

THE SECRETS OF YOUTH UNVEILED. A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—A solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insidious progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and depicting the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.

It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.

Attendance daily, from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, and on Sundays from 2 till 5 P. M.

Medicines with full directions sent to any part of the United States or Canada, by patients communicating their symptoms by letter. Business correspondence strictly confidential.

Dr. L's Office is still located as established, under the name of DR. LA CROIX, at No. 31 Maiden Lane, Albany, N. Y.

The Best Estate

The Heart it hath its own estate—

The mind it has its wealth untold;

It needs not fortune to be great,

While there's a coin surpassing gold.

No matter which way fortune leans,

Wealth makes not happiness secure.

A little mind hath little means—

A narrow heart is always poor.

Stern Fate the greatest still enthral,

And Misery hath its high conspers;

For Sorrow enters palace halls,

And Queens are not exempt from tears.

The princely robe and beggar's coat,

The scythe and sword, the plume and plow,

Are in the grave of equal note—

Men live but in the eternal "Now!"

Still disappointment tracks the proud,

The bravest "neath death may fall;

The high, the rich, the courtly crowd,

Find there's a calamity for all.

'Tis not the house that honors makes—

True honor is the thing divine;

It is the mind precedence takes—

It is the spirit makes the shrine!

So keep thou yet a generous heart,

A steadfast and contented mind;

And not till death consent to part

With that, which friend to friend doth bind.

What's uttered from the life within

Is heard not by the life without;

There's always something to begin

'Twixt life in faith and faith in doubt.

But grasp thou Truth—though black appears

The rugged path her steps have trod;

She'll be thy friend in other spheres—

Companion in the world of God.

Scraps.

Miss Tucker says it's with old bachelors

as with old wood; it is hard to get them

started, but when they do take flame they burn prodigiously.

A young girl who was sighing for a husband, thus wrote out her feelings in rhyme:

My heart is sick, my heart is sad,

But O, the cause I dare not tell;

I am not grieved, I am not glad,

I am not ill, I am not well;

I am not myself—I'm not the same;

I am, indeed, I know not what;

I'm changed in all, except in name—

O, when shall I be changed in that?

As thrashing separates the corn from the chaff, so does affection purify virtue.

There are more disappointed lovers after

than before marriage.

THE FORWARD BABY. Old maid: "What

nine months old, and not walk yet? Why,

when I was a baby I went alone even at six months."

Young indignant mother (muttering to herself): "Humph! Guess you've been alone

ever since!

All beautiful composition is in the dictionary, only the words are transposed.

Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets if you have any.

Words are little things, but they strike hard. We wield them so easily that we are apt to forget their hidden power. Fully spoken, they fall like the sunshine, the dew and

gentle rain—but when unfelt, like the frost,

the hail, and the desolating tempest.

Refuse not unto the stranger that which he wanteth; deny not unto thy brother even

that which thou wantest thyself.

To vex another is to teach him to vex us

again—injuries awaken revenge, and even an

ant can sting, and a fly trouble our patience.

Ever live, misfortune excepted, within your income. When you retire to bed, think over what you have been doing during the day.

A sure mode of never succeeding with your own plans is to give too much attention to those of other people.

Some people are so fond of ill-luck that they run half way to meet it.

An Irish attorney threatened to prosecute

a Dublin printer for inserting the death of a living person. The menace concluded with the remark that "no printer should publish a death unless informed of the fact by the party

deceased."

Fun is worth more than physic, and whoever discovers or invents a new supply describes the name of a public benefactor.

Miscellaneous.

Like Father like Son.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

My friend had spoken an impatient word

to his little son, and I saw the child's face stained by the hot blood of anger. My friend saw the stain, also. What did he do? Repent of his impatience, and heal the hurt in child by gentler word? No. But he grew more impatient, and calling sharply to the boy, said, in a warning tone, "Take care,

sir."

Take care of what? Why, lest punishment follow.

You ask as to the child's fault that punishment should be threatened. There was no fault. He had, in passing near a table in the room where I sat, talking with his father, accidentally touched a book lying on the edge, causing it to fall. The noise jarred

the father's sensitive nerves. Naturally irritable, he smote the child, as I have said,

with an impatient word; and the child's spirit answered to the harsh rebuke in a hot

face and flushing eyes.

Take care, sir! repeated my friend,

seeing that his warning admonition had produced no effect on the boy's roused spirit,

smartering under an undeserved blow. The stain grew redder on cheeks and brow; the eyes more intense; the lips more firmly shut.

I saw defiance in the child's face.

Why don't you pick up that book, sir?

There was no sign of obedience.

Did your hear me? almost fiercely demanded the father. I shuddered, inwardly,

but dared not interfere between my hot tempered friend, and his equally hot tempered child. He might as well have spoken to deaf ears.

Pick up that book, I say.

The child did not stir.

I shall not speak again, said my friend, in a suppressed voice. One minute passed in dumb silence; then rising, with deliberation, he approached the boy, whose face had become pale, but not weak or fearful, and grasped one of his arms tightly. Time was still given for him to lift the book; but he was too angry to yield. I held my breath patiently, taking a long inspiration as my friend swept from the room, dragging the boy after him. He was gone for nearly five minutes, and then came back, flushed, nervous and excited, saying, as he sat down opposite me, I'm out of all heart with that boy.

He looked sadly discouraged. I did not answer. After sitting for a few moments, he added, such a temper! such a will! I never saw any thing like it!

But I answered nothing. What could I say in approval of my friend's conduct? My silence was on the side of his own uneasy

convictions, and he felt it to be so.

What am I to do with the child? he asked,

interrogating my unspoken thought. To give up to him—to let will and passion have their sway—can only end in moral ruin. He must come under the yoke. Is it not so?

Obedience is essential, I answered.

I do think—obedience at all hazards.

I did not assent to this extreme proposition.

At all hazards, he repeated, with increasing force.

It may be well, said I, to look at the conditions of obedience before exacting the full measure of obligation.

I am not sure that I understand you, answered my friend, with a slightly puzzled air.

Obedience may be impossible.

Was it impossible for John to lift that book from the floor.

Perhaps, said I.

Perhaps! My friend looked astonished.

Morally impossible, I mean.

He shook his head doubtfully.

A condition may render the easiest act so difficult of performance, that a man will look

death in the face and yet not lift a hand in attempted execution. The act, in this case, becomes morally impossible.

I do not see how you will apply that to my boy's case.

Suppose, said I, you were riding in one of our street cars, and a passenger on entering,

and before you had time to make room for him, were to order you in a rough, impera-

and chanted, and spoken it; what has it lost by the repetition? Every new voice that utters it, whether with tears or smiles, throws a brighter lustre upon it. It is a gem set in the frame of God's holiest attribute—love, whose brilliancy shames that of gold, whose richest light makes tame the flashing rays of the diamond.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, April 26th, 1862.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD. The present month has been memorable in great events; but none more so, than the energy and perseverance with which the directors of this road have pushed forward their work; in a few days the last rail will be laid, and the road open for travel. Already cars and harness have been provided, and they are scouring the country for horses of the best blood, to make up a strong and efficient team; when the connecting link is formed, we shall have two avenues of communication with Boston—one of speed, and the other for comfort and convenience.

ICE. The thermometer has not yet reached that point of elevation, that makes ice an indispensable article for our comfort. But as the season advances, and we are brought to a melting mood, we may feel the want of something of a congealing nature. Mr. Eaton harvested a fine crop last winter, which is ready for delivery, and in a few days he will be paying us, his customary visits.

THE WEATHER. The few days of warm, summer weather, which brought vegetation rapidly forward, has been followed by frosts, ice, and cold blighting winds. It is thought, and the fear has been uttered, that the buds on our early fruit trees, pear, peach and cherry, have been seriously injured. We hope not; the season opened very fair for a large yield of all kinds of fruit, and we should be sorry to see the promise nipped in the bud.

MASSACHUSETTS 13TH REGIMENT. Mr. John O. Holden arrived home yesterday from the camp of the above Regiment, near Warrenton Junction, (Va.) having been on the way since Monday. The delay being caused by the destruction of the railroad bridges at Cedar and Bull Run by the late freshets. The soldiers sent home by him one hundred letters and about fifteen hundred dollars.

The regiment is in good health and is expecting daily to be ordered on across the Rappahannock.

The 19th at Weymouth. The lovers of freedom assembled in the Universalist Church at Weymouth Landing, on Saturday last, the 19th inst., to commemorate the anniversary of the death of the martyrs of the two great Revolutions, who fell at Lexington and Baltimore. Owing to the delay in the reception of an account of the meeting, we are unable to present a full report. Elias Richards, Esq., well known as an earnest worker in and warm advocate of the cause of freedom, presided, and addresses were made by the pastors of different churches—Rev. Messrs. Giddard, (Universalist,) Terry and Dickerman, (Orthodox,) and Abbott, (Baptist,) also by Hon. John W. Lord, and the President of the day.

A series of resolutions were presented and unanimously adopted—approving of the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, and expressing the hope that the time will come when the institution of slavery may, with perfect loyalty, be "destroyed from the whole land."

A salute of 100 guns was fired.—Abington Standard.

IMPORTANT RUMOR. It is reported that Gen. Burnside has received proposals from the Governor of North Carolina for the surrender of the State.

DEDICATION AND ORDINATION. The dedication of the new house of worship in South Braintree, Mass., will take place on Tuesday next, at 2 o'clock, P. M. The ordination of Mr. Lucius R. Eastman, Jr., as Pastor of the church, will take place the following Thursday, May 1st, at 2 o'clock, P. M. Meeting of Council at 9 1/2 o'clock, A. M.

CONSOLIDATED. The Trumpet and Christian Freeman, two Universalist papers published in Boston, one for nearly two score years by the late Thomas Whittemore, L. L. D., the other for nearly the same length of time by the Rev. Sylvanus Cobb, have united in one. Mr. Cobb will be the chief editorial manager of the new paper, assisted by Messrs. Usher and Quincy, well known and popular clergy of the Universalist order. The first number of the "two in one," made its appearance this week, under a new and beautiful head, very appropriate for a religious hebdomadary sheet.

The Jonesville (Mich.) Independent states that five persons were immersed at that place a few days since. A large number of persons were present on skates to witness the ceremony.

A Free Chowder will be served up to-night at the Mariposa Saloon.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, APRIL 24TH, 1862.

Grave as the calamities are in the disloyal States, the rebels show no indications of backing down; on the contrary, they keep as obstinate and wicked as his satanic majesty. There is no hiding the fact that the rebellion has assumed a gigantic feature. The deadly struggle to put it down is unlike anything we read of in ancient or modern history. We are not fighting for conquest of Southern territory, or increased commercial advantages; but it is a struggle for national existence—a war of ideas. In speaking of the present aspects of the rebellion, the question is whether liberty, justice and law shall prevail. The successful vindication of these principles will be worth all the cost of blood and treasure that may be lost. The Union must be preserved. The news of the week from our armies in Virginia and at the South West is unexciting; all is reported as quiet at Fortress Monroe and Yorktown. The latest advices from Europe are devoid of any general interest, but enough to show we have no fears from a European war on the United States.

The French minister to Washington, M. Mercier, is now on a mysterious visit to Richmond—it is represented by the Norfolk Day-book as a visit fraught with grave significance. It is the theory of many, that the French envoy of Louis Napoleon is on a visit to the rebel capital of the confederate States as a peacemaker. It is said as a fact that before leaving Washington on this mysterious enterprise, M. Mercier was closeted for two hours or more with Mr. Seward, Secretary of State. It is surmised that the Emperor of France considers the Southern Confederacy of Jeff Davis a failure—that the business of the Minister to Richmond is to advise the Southern leaders to abandon this hopeless rebellion, and to rely on the good offices of France with the government of the United States in behalf of a liberal amnesty: nous verrons.

Quincy and some other towns present the anomaly of not being represented by any of the feminine gender. Perhaps the eminent Zoologists, Von Siebold or Professor Agassiz, can solve the mystery, and inform us how the great system of procreation can be carried on under this state of things. There must have been a severe epidemic among the dogs during the years 1859 and 1860, as there were only 16,905; a falling off of nearly one half. The Committee on dogs are very severe on city and town authorities for not more thoroughly executing and performing the duties imposed upon them by the law. Those who own dogs probably think otherwise. Suffolk County only returns 887 dogs.

SOUTHERN HONESTY. A merchant in Nashville, (Tenn.), has sent six thousand dollars in gold to a Broadway house to pay his indebtedness—$2,500 they are to retain to pay his indebtedness to them, and the balance is to pay other creditors. Another merchant writes that in a week's time he will be prepared to pay all his indebtedness in gold. We could give the names of the parties, but for the present think it sufficient merely to note the fact.—N. York Economist.

For the Patriot.
Letter of Condolence.

FORT ALBANY, (Va.) APRIL 10, 1862.

Mrs. Hayden—My dear woman. With hearts bleeding, we this afternoon, prepared a few lines for a telegram, to strike a happy home with mourning, by the sad news, that for the first time, their family unity had been broken.

It fell upon us like a heavy frost upon the tender vine, withering our hopes, and melting us to tears—causing us to exclaim, why has the hand of an All-Wise Providence seen fit to snatch one of the brightest of our flock so soon, without scarcely a day's warning.

He left his home with others of the same town, with buoyant hopes and truly bright prospects, for a short service in the cause of his distracted country; feeling that he was yet young, but able to do an older's work, in a glorious cause—which requires a brave heart and resolute mind, to battle the terrors of war and the temptations to evil.

We sincerely believe he possessed these qualities of mind and soul. So severely was he stricken by the gallant disease, that the powers of his mind were destroyed, from the time of his removal to the hospital until his death; yet it was evident to those who were constantly by his side, that he felt he was approaching the final chasm; but there was too much self-pride to acknowledge he was sick, and he remained resolute until it was too late. The spirit was willing but the flesh was weak.

Dear parents, brothers and friends, we feel your loss; many of us have seen grim death stalking in at our doors and bearing away promising spirits like that of the departed. Yet we do not forget that none but a mother can realize the depth of such grief.

A MOTHER'S heart when stricken by woe, is stricken every fibre through.

A FATHER'S heart when stricken by woe, must share the trouble too.

Your son was on guard Saturday night, and at times during the day, showed some symptoms of his disease; but as he said he was not sick, and being an entire stranger to his officers, he was left to do his duty most thoroughly. Sunday, he spent most of his time in his berth. Sunday night, he complained somewhat of being ill. Monday morning, he went to the hospital for a pill, which he took after he returned to the barracks, and then laid down quietly. About noon, some of his friends and townsmen, observing his strange and altered looks, and restless state of his feelings, approached his bedside, and spoke to him; but he did not answer them; they sent immediately to the doctor, who ordered an ambulance to remove him to the hospital.

He never sanely spoke after his removal. On carrying him into the hospital, he made some little resistance, and spoke a few words—also once or twice on receiving his medicine. I went to the hospital twice a day, to witness the progress of his disease, but it was impossible to tell the height it was reaching. All we could do was to watch and administer what little comforts, calculated to alleviate the sufferings of the fair youth, while he sank slowly and quietly into the arms of death—and listen to the stifled wailing of angels as they bore that proud young spirit to the Father that gave it. The sun had just passed the meridian, when this youthful spirit released its grasp of earthly care, and rose on celestial wings to far brighter realms above—where there is no more death, no more parting with parents and friends as death.

Hope that God may bless you, his father and all your family. We hope that you will remember, as you look upon his fair countenance for the last time, that the wound is still bleeding among his fellow soldiers as well as officers.

May the same Almighty Arm, that has bereft me so strong the hearts that are now afflicted. Bind them up and better fit them for this sad, but glorious end, is the prayer of those who place their signatures to this letter. Very truly yours,

CAPTAIN E. A. ANDREWS,
LIEUTENANTS, Joseph C. Smith, Charles H. Shepard, James L. Hall.

NIECE OF ALEXANDER SELKIRK. A paper published at Largo, in the shire of Fife, records the death of an old lady named Mrs. Gillies, who was no other than a great-grand-niece of Alexander Selkirk, the Robinson Crusoe of the De Foë story. She was proprietress and occupant of the house in which he was born, and guarded most religiously his cup and chest, which, as interesting relics, had descended as heir-looms in the family.

PERILOUS ADVENTURE. An extraordinary balloon reconnaissance was made a few days ago near Yorktown, by Gen. Fitz John Porter, in Professor Lowe's balloon. He stepped into the car supposing that the usual number of ropes were attached, but the balloon was only held by a single cord, which suddenly snapped, when he was rapidly wafted over the rebel entrenchments, but, fortunately, at a height beyond the range of secession rifles. The greatest anxiety was felt for his safety, but the General remained perfectly cool; obtained a good view of the enemy's position, when a counter-current of wind blew the balloon over the place where it had ascended. The General then opened the valves—let the gas escape, descended, and was brought into camp by a squadron of cavalry detached for the purpose, when a great many jokes were cracked respecting his highly journey by friends who a few minutes before had trembled for his safety.

A QUEER OLD FOY. Mr. Thomas Donohoe, who has been a book-keeper in the office of the National Intelligencer, at Washington for forty-five years, says that during all that long period he has never left the city, and has not visited the Capitol building but once!

There will be a Free Lunch at the Hancock Saloon this evening.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Mystic Pioneer mentions the following singular phenomenon: "As the sloop 'Apollo,' Capt. Freeman, was passing off Faulkner's Island, on her homeward bound passage through the sound, March 30th, she was visited by a meteoric illuminator, which attached itself to every part of the rigging and sails, causing her to present the appearance of a vessel wrapped in a sheet of flames."

P. H. Thompson, of Popsham, (Me.) had an ax die, recently, having been very sick for several days previous to his death. Upon opening him a piece of wire three inches long and of the diameter of the ordinary knitting needle, was found in his heart.

Price Lewis, a former resident of Waltham, (Conn.) was hung as a spy at Richmond, a few days since. He had made several trips to the rebel camps successfully, but was caught at last, and manfully paid the penalty.

Prentice says Lot's wife would bring seventy-five cents a pound in the Southern Confederacy.

About forty acres of valuable woodland in Taunton, Mass., belonging to Frederick Leonard, were burnt over, a few days since. The fire was caused by sparks from a locomotive.

It is stated that the President has been notified by the Russian government that the appointment of ex-Secretary Cameron as Minister to St. Petersburg is objectionable.

It is stated that the family circle at the White House is to receive an addition to its numbers in a short time.

The charges of cruelty made against Surgeon Porter of the Alexandria Hospital are found, on thorough investigation, to be without foundation.

At Chicago, the democrats elected their entire city ticket by 1000 majority.

A son of Henry Clay fought bravely on the federal side in the battle of Pittsburg Landing.

Chicago now ranks as the greatest market in the world for beef, pork, and lumber.

An Iowa regiment has a rule that any man who utters an oath shall read a chapter in the Bible. Several have got nearly through the Old Testament.

Rooms have been prepared in New York for the reception of sick and wounded New England soldiers on their home route.

A wrought iron gun-carriage is being constructed at the Watertown Arsenal, which, exclusive of the gun which will be mounted thereon, weighs not less than twenty-five tons.

Forty-six years ago the 11th inst., the ground was first moved to widen Pawtucket canal, to build up Lowell, Mass. It was in 1816, the cold year, when there was a slight snow in the month of June.

The Panama Railroad Company are constructing a fine grideron in the bay of Panama, of a capacity sufficient to admit the largest steamers.

An Augusta, (Ga.) paper says there is no building and nearly ready at one of the Gulf ports an iron ship of about 250 feet length and 50 feet beam, which will be supplied with a number of engines and boilers, and when it gets ready it is supposed she will be quite equal to Merrimack No. 1.

The Havana papers state that the sugar crop is very abundant this year, and that large quantities are received daily in Havana for exportation. In consequence there is a great demand for ships, which are now very scarce.

The Connecticut river has risen to an extreme height, flooding the whole of the lower part of the city of Hartford, and causing great damage and suffering.

The U. S. Ship of the Line, Vermont, arrived at Fort Royal on the 14th inst., 49 days from Boston.

Six men were fined $5 each at Taunton, on Monday, for engaging in a cock-fight the previous Sunday.

Forty-five ladies are now employed in Washington in clipping Treasury notes.—Amongst them is one whose musical education cost $50,000.

Gen. Shields has been nominated as Major General.

The 730 Treasury notes, which were at 2 1/2 per cent. discount sixty days ago, are now in great demand at a premium. The payment of interest in coin gives much satisfaction.

By statistics just prepared at the State House, it appears that there are 23,774 Massachusetts men engaged in active service in the army. This large number of men is a fact that requires no comment. Few States have done as well as our own.

The Louisville Journal judges that John C. Breckinridge has some sense of shame from his desperate attempts to drown it.

Since General Burnside took possession of Roanoke Island, the supply of turpentine has increased. It is now selling at ninety-five cents per gallon in New York and is dull at this reduced rate.

The Bowdoin street and Salem street (orthodox) churches of Boston, are about to consolidate, and will probably worship in the edifice occupied by the latter.

The English officers residing in Austria, who had received orders to return to England, have received a prolongation of their leave of absence since the danger of war with America has passed away.

The work of gun-making is crowded to such an extent at the Springfield, (Mass.) Armory, that all the daylight is used, and over $5,000 worth of gas was burned during the last quarter.

SCHOOL TEACHERS. The Nantucket Inquirer states that the School Committee of that town advertised last week for a teacher for the High School, with a salary of nine hundred dollars. The result has been that more than one hundred letters have been received from teachers all over the New England States, and a personal visit of some half a dozen teachers from the Continent. The editor thinks if the salary had been put $700 instead of $900, the result would have been the same, and argues that low salaries does not prevent the obtaining of the best of teachers.

VALUATION OF BOSTON DAILIES. The following is a list of the Boston papers taxed the present year on machinery, fixtures, material, &c., for over $10,000, with the amount for which each is taxed:

BUSINESS IN FALL RIVER. In spite of the war and the stagnation of some branches of manufacturing, the business of this city is very fair at the present time. Indeed, there is an appearance of briskness as compared with this season last year; our leading manufacturers now display an energy and courage which were then wanting. The mills are all running either full or partial time, and trade, though dull in comparison with previous years, is nevertheless very satisfactory.—Fall River News.

HAY AND CORN SHRINKAGE BY DRYING. The loss upon hay weighed July 20, when cured enough to put in the barn, and again February 20, has been ascertained to be 27 1/2 per cent. So that hay at fifteen dollars a ton in the field is equal to twenty dollars and upward when weighed from the mow in winter. The weight of cobs in a bushel of corn in November ascertained to be nineteen pounds, was only 7 1/2 pounds in May. The cost of grinding a bushel of dry cobs, counting hauling, hauling, and miller's charge, is about one cent a pound. Is the meal worth the money?

Special Notices.

LEVEE. The Ladies of Quincy Point will hold a Social Festival at Edwards' Hall, on THURSDAY EVENING, May 1st. The exercises will consist of Tableau, Singing and Speaking. Price of Admission, 15 cents; Children under twelve, 10 cents. Doors open at 7 o'clock; Exercises to commence at half past.

NOTICE. Quincy April 1st, 1862.—Owners of Dogs in this town are reminded that said dogs must be numbered and registered at the office of the undersigned, before the expiration of the PRESENT MONTH. Dogs which were registered in said office in 1861, can retain the same numbers this year, if their owners make an early application therefor.

GEORGE L. GILL, Town Clerk.
Extracts from General Statutes—Chapter 88. SECTION 52—Every Owner or Keeper of a Dog shall, annually, on or before the FIFTEENTH day of April, cause it to be Registered, Numbered, Described and Licensed for one year from the FIRST day of the ensuing MAY, in the Office of the Clerk in the City or Town wherein he resides; and shall cause it to wear around its neck a Collar distinctly marked with its Owner's Name and Registered Number, and shall pay for such License One Dollar for a Male Dog and Five Dollars for a Female Dog.

SECTION 56—Whoever keeps a Dog contrary to the provision of this Chapter shall forfeit Ten Dollars, to be recovered by complaint to the use of the Place wherein the Dog is kept.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Freedom's Call.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

TUNE—Patriotic Fire Cry.

Guardians of the land we live in—
Patriots, who deserve the name—
You, who wealth and strength are giving,
To defend our country's fame,
In the cause of Justice striving,
Like the stock from whence you came.

Men, who love your Country's glory;
Men, who hoists of patriot blood—
You, who fought where fields were gory;
You, who firm for freedom stood;
You, whose names will live in story—
Lab'ers for our Country's good.

By the flag our fathers gave us,
By the cause for which they fought,
Swear no tyrants shall enslave us,
On the land their blood has bought—
Swear the foe who dares to brave us,
With their cause shall come to nought.

While the foe would rend asunder
Freedom's temples, Freedom's schools,
Up and send the red wing'd thunder,
Through the ranks of slavery's tools;
From the traitor's hand their plunder—
Make them know that Justice rules.

Teach them 'tis a fearful daring,
'Gainst the right of man to war;
Utter scorn its doom unsparing,
Is their doom by Nation's law.
All who treason's crime are sharing,
On their heads destruction draw.

Impiously they call on heaven,
Help for Treason to afford;
Fatal the response that given—
Vengeance is his dreadful sword;
While their guilty ranks are riven,
Justice follows with the cord.

Forward still the avenger rushes,
While the vanquish'd squadrons reel;
On their ranks the war-horse rushes,
Stamping underneath his heel;
On 'til dead the war cry hushes,
Flash the fierce Avenger's steel.

See the scatter'd legions flying,
Where no hope nor succor lies;
Midst their mocking bodemen dying;
Lo! the guilty traitor dies,
O'er the grave where they are lying
No one bends with tearful eyes.

Living—scorn and shame attend them,
Still their names are by words found;
None but worthless knaves defend them—
Arnolds all the world around;
Fire or water fell will lend them,
Curs'd encumbrers of the ground.

Songs in the Night.

When, courting slumber,
The hours I number,
And sad cares number,
My weaned number,
That thought shall cheer me,
That thou art near me,
Whose ear to hear me,
Is still inclined.

My soul then keepest,
Who never sleepst;
Mid gloom the deepest,
Thine light above,
Thine eyes behold me,
Thine arms enfold me,
Thy word has told me,
That God is love.

Anecdotes.

One of the readiest replies we have heard lately, was made by an Irishman who was fencing a most barren and desolate piece of land.

What are you fencing in that lot for, Pat? asked a man; a herd of cows would starve to death on that land.

And sure your honor, wasn't I fencing it to keep the poor beasts out of it?

My dear, what shall we name Bab? Why, husband, I settled on the name of Peter.

O, don't, he replied; I never liked Peter, for he denied his master.

Well, then, replied the wife, what name do you like?

I should like the name of Joseph. O, not that, replied she, I can't bear Joseph, for he denied his mistress!

John, said a dry goods dealer to one of his clerks the other day, you charged that man too much for the cloth you just sold; did you know the price?

Yes, sir, but he was a stranger and I took him in. That's Bible.

It is reported that the Prince of Wales said to a fair partner at the ball in St. Louis: Miss, don't you think my mustaches becoming?

To which the Miss replied: Well, sir! they may be coming, but they haven't arrived.

A dandy remarked that he had put a plate of brass upon his boots to keep him upright. Well, palmed, by jing! said a Dutchman, press at both ends.

A wounded Irishman wrote home from the hospital, and finished up by saying: I've fought for this country, I've bled for it, and shall soon be able to say, I've died for it.

Great Spring and Summer Medicine,
DR. LANGLEY'S
Root and Herb Bitters,
Composed of Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Yellow
Dock, Prickly Ash, Thoroughwort, Rhubarb, Man-
drake, Dandelion, &c. all of which are so compounded
as to act in concert, and assist Nature in eradicating
disease.
The effect of this medicine is most wonderful—
it acts directly upon the bowels and blood, by
removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating them into healthy action, renewing the food and life, purifying the blood,
cleansing it from all humors, and causing it to
course anew through every part of the body; restoring the invalid to health and usefulness.—
They cure and eradicate from the system, Liver Complaint, that most-wheeled of so many diseases; Jaundice in its worst forms, all Bilious Diseases and foul stomach, dyspepsia, constipation, all kinds of humors, indigestion, headache,
dizziness, piles, heartburn, weakness, pains in
the side and liver, a disordered stomach, or bad
blood, to which all are more or less subject in Spring and Summer.
More than 2,000,000 persons have been cured
by this medicine. It is highly recommended by Physicians everywhere. Try it, and you will never regret it.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicine everywhere

chitis, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Ma-nusmus, Loss of Appetite, Neuralgia, Female Complaints, and all Disorders of the Nervous and Blood Systems.
This Remedy has obtained a great reputation
for most EXTRAORDINARY CURES in ALL STAGES OF CONSUMPTION. It recommended by many thousand Physicians in the United States and Europe—having been used with RESULTS UNPARALLELED in the ANNALS of MEDICINE.
The Hypophosphites have a two fold and specific action on the one hand, increasing the principle
which CONSTITUTES NERVOUS ENERGY, and on the other, being the most POWERFUL BLOOD GENERATING AGENTS KNOWN.
In cases of Nervous Debility, or Prostration of the Vital Powers, from any cause, this Remedy has no superior.

THE SPECIFIC PILL

A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness,
and Genital Irritability in either sex.
This Malady, the terrible consequences of
which are too well known to require more than a
bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of Life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and sinks the unhappy victim into a permanent grave! From one to six boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most Aggravated Cases,
whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse
or Excess.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Sperm-
atorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine
can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]
I have found them all that could be desired—
Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used
them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years.
I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E.
P. DICKER, M. D.

This is not a Homoeopathic Remedy, nor
is there any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.
PRICE—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5,

HEBARD'S
PATENT OIL!

No more accidents by Burning Fluid!
A safe substitute to burn in Fluid Lamps.

THIS Oil is prepared to burn in all kinds
of Lamps without chimneys, such as Fluid, Sperm or Lard Oil Lamps, and will burn at half the cost of Fluid in all Lamps fixed with Green's Jet Burners, and is the greatest Artificial Light yet discovered. It gives a steady, clean and soft light, and does not choke the Lungs with foreign matters, such
as results generally from using Rosin and Kerosene Oil, and will burn in Kerosene Lamps
free from Smoke and Soot by taking off the Cap and Chimney.

It is also a COMPLETE SUBSTITUTE for Sperm
and Lard Oils, and is just as safe and harmless to burn, and may take the place of the Common Fluid and other dangerous compounds that have been thrown into the market
of late.

The above Oil is perfectly clean and free
from Grease and Smoke or unpleasant Odor,
and is now considered the SAFEST and BEST
Oil ever offered to the public. It is a most

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

ON THE

Physiological View of Marriage.

50 PAGES AND 130 ENGRA-VINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE cents. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and marriage, disclosing the secret follies of both ages, and the causes of disease, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, bluishness, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling
secret of a Boarding School, Miss, a College
student, and a Young Married Lady, &c. &c.
is a truthful adviser to the married and contemplating marriage, who entertain doubts of their physical condition, and
are conscious of having lost the health, happiness and privileges to which
every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with
weakness, generally caused by a bad habit
of youth, the effects of which are dizziness,
sight, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in
the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and weak extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by
the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON
TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our
time to VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the
knowledge and researches of the most skilled physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the first benefit of
the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS
TREATMENTS which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may
rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SE-RECT and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished heretofore, as a Physician in our PECU-LIAR department of professional Practice,
or the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for Medicines, the efficacy of which has been proved in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. DeLancy's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them
if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying
each box), though always safe and healthy,
so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE."

For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their family, may be obtained as above.

It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

THE BRIGHT LITTLE GIRL.

BY WM. ALLINGHAM.

Her blue eyes they beam and they twinkle,
Her lips have made smiling more fair;
On cheek and on brow there's no wrinkle,
But thousands of curls in her hair.

She's little—you don't wish her taller;
Just half through her teens is her age;
And baby or lady to call her,
Were something to puzzle a sage!

Her walk is far better than dancing;
She speaks as another might sing;
And all by an innocent chancing,
Like lambkin and birds in the spring.

Unskill'd in the arts of the city,
She's perfect in natural grace;
She's gentle, and truthful, and witty,
And ne'er spends a thought on her face.

Her face, with the fine glow that's in it,
As fresh as an apple-tree bloom—
And O! when she comes, in a minute,
Like sunbeams she brightens the room.

As taking in mind as in feature,
How many will sigh for her sake!
I wonder, the sweet little creature,
What sort of a wife she would make.

Scraps.

"Two men went to 'California.' One came back without a rag to his back, the other came back with nothing but rags. Wanted to know, which did the best?

A cooper, finding considerable difficulty in keeping one of the heads of a cask he was finishing in its place, put his son inside to hold the head up. After completing the work much to his satisfaction, he was astonished to find his boy inside the cask, and without a possibility of getting out except through the bung-hole.

There is no friend to man so true, so kind,
So real and so good as woman.

No Doctor. A man advertises for a "competent person to undertake the sale of a new medicine," and adds that "it will prove profitable to the undertaker."

The clock on St. Paul's, London, is a "big thing." The pendulum is four feet long, and the weight at the end of it is one hundred pounds; the dial on the outside is regulated
by a small one; the length of the minute hand on the exterior is eight feet, and the weight seventy-five pounds; the length of the hour figure is two feet and two and a half inches.

A girl at a party was asked what made her face look so red. She replied, those horrid chaps.

Miscellaneous.

"Contraband" Stories.

The Western correspondence overflows
with "contraband" incidents—both quaint and humorous. We present a few specimens from the Cincinnati Gazette, from some of which it will appear that our soldiers extend more sympathy to the darkies than to the secesh!

While I was at the fort, the neighbor of a sick rebel, living about forty miles off, came to reclaim a slave of the latter, as well as a horse which the contraband, being lame, had appropriated for the purpose of accelerating
his speed, alleging in excuse that he "thought he had worked long enough for his master to pay for the horse." Collaring Bill, as he called him, and informing him that he was going to take either him or his scalp, the doctor
(for he was a physician) led him to General Grant's quarters. Bill, meanwhile, lustily protesting that he could not be taken back,
for his master was a rebel, and the doctor knew it, and wouldn't deny it; besides the law didn't reach dar. Bill understood himself. The doctor didn't deny the fact, and couldn't have taken him without his voluntary consent if he had. Gen. Grant said he could do nothing for him, either as to the chattel or horse. So the chop-fallen doctor relaxed his grasp, remarking to the bystanders, that Bill would bear watching, for he was the most rascally nigger he ever knew—an imputation upon his personal honor, which Bill saw fit to treat with lofty disdain, and as he limped triumphantly out, remarked to some of the spectators, he didn't make nuffin out of me, did he? I knows what I'm about.

As I was strolling around the outside works, the evening before I left, I met a negro riding home a mule, which he said had strayed off from his master's house, two or three miles distant. Accosting him in a most deferential manner, the following conversation, as near as I can remember, ensued:

Mass'r, whar do you live?

Cincinnati.

Can't you git me a passport to go dar?

A passport—you mean a pass, don't you?

Yes, de paper what you hab to show to de guard.

Why, what do you want with a pass?

I wants to leab, and I'll work for any gen-man all my life for nuffin what'll git me away.

Well, why don't you run away? You're free as soon as you come within our lines, and you're within them now.

Yes, but mass'r lib insides de lines, too,
and he can come and take me.

But isn't he a rebel?

Yes, he big a rebel as dey is in de State,
for I hear him say so many a time; but den
he pretend to de officers haw to be a Union man, and dey tink he is.

It being out of my power to obtain for him
what he desired, I gave him the best advice
I could as to the most feasible mode of accomplishing his purpose, which he received very thankfully, and left, saying he intended to make the trial. So, for aught I know, that nigger may be on my conscience.

I noticed upon the hurricane deck to-day
an elderly darkey with a very philosophical and retrospective cast of countenance, squatted upon his bundle, toasting his shins against the chimney, and apparently in a state of profound meditation. Finding upon inquiry that he belonged to the Ninth Illinois, one of the most gallantly behaved and heavily losing regiments at the Fort Donelson battle, and part of which was on board, I began to interrogate him upon the subject. His philosophy was so much in the Falstaffian vein that I will give his views in his own words,
as near as my memory serves me:

Were you in the fight?

Had a little taste of it, sa.

Stood your ground, did you?

No, sa, I run.

Run at the first fire, did you?

Yes, sa, and would hab run soon, had I know'd it was coming.

Why, that wasn't very creditable to your courage.

Dat isn't in my line, sa—cookin's my perfeshun.

Well, but have you no regard for your reputation?

Reputation's nuffin to me by de side ob
life.

Do you consider your life worth more than other people's?

It's worth more to me, sa.

Then you must value it very highly?

Yes, sa, I does—more dan all dis wuld—
more dan a million ob dollars, sa, for what would dat be wuth to a man wid de braf out ob him? Self-preserbashun an de dust law wid me.

But why should you act upon a different rule from other men?

Because different men set different values
upon dar lives—munc is not in de market.

But if you lost it you would have the satisfaction of knowing that you died for your country.

What satisfaction would dat be to me
when de power ob feelin' was gone?

Then patriotism and honor are nothing to you?

Nuffin whatever, sa—I regard dem as among de vanities.

If our soldiers were like you, traitors might have broken up the government without resistance.

Yes, sa, dar would hab been no help for it,
I wouldn't put my life in de scale 'ginst any government dat eber existed, for no government could replace de loss to me.

Do you think any of your company would have quised you if you had been killed?

May be not, sa—a dead white man ain't much to dese sojers, let alone a dead nigger—
—out I'd missed myself, and dat was de pint wid me.

It is safe to say that the dusky corpse of that African will never darken the field of carnage.

An Assault Case.

A certain witness in an assault and battery
case we once heard, mixed things up considerably in giving his account of the affair.—
After relating how Dennis came to him and struck him, he proceeded:

"So, yer honor, I just hauled off and wiped his jaw. Just then his dog cum along, and I hit him again."

"Hit the dog?"

"No, yer honor, hit Dennis. And then I up wid a stun and throwed it at him, and rollid him over and over."

"Threw a stone at Dennis?"

"At the dog, yer honor. And he got up and hit me again."

"The dog?"

"No, Dennis. And wid that he stuck his tail 'twixt his legs and ran off."

"Dennis?"

"No, the dog. And when he came back at me, he got me down and pounded me, yer honor."

"The dog came back at you?"

"No, Dennis, yer honor, and he isn't hurt
at all."

"Who isn't hurt?"

"The dog, yer honor."

"That will do," said the court. "We have had enough of you and the dog. Step down."

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 3d, 1862.

BORN TO MASTER, OF ROSEBURY, W.

The Quincy Horse Railroad.

By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that this road will be open for public travel on Wednesday next. Every thing then, we are assured, will be in readiness,—and a new enterprise, fraught with untold advantages to the community, will be thrown open for their benefit.

The Company in the prosecution of the work, have had to encounter many difficulties of a discouraging nature; but they surmounted them, and the enterprise has been crowned with complete success. Their labors are appreciated, and the generous support of a liberal public, will be their reward.

The whole plan of the Directors has been carried out on a most liberal scale—with a single eye to comfort and convenience. Large and commodious buildings, capable of holding sixty horses and twelve cars, have been erected in a thorough and most substantial manner,—attached to which are offices for all the various purposes of a railroad—to wit: Passenger Station, President and Directors' room, Clerk's office, sleeping rooms for the ostlers, watchmen, etc., all fitted up in admirable style. Forty horses and twelve cars, will be ready for use on the first day of trial.

The President informs us that it is the intention during the summer to continue the track to the bridge at Quincy Point; in the mean time, coaches will be run from the Point to connect with the cars at the Hancock House; also, from Weymouth Landing, North and South Braintree, to unite with the cars on Franklin street.

It will no doubt take some time—as the notice published in our columns to-day infer—to get the arrangements and running time fully organized, and every detail nicely arranged; but we have every confidence in the promoters and managers of this enterprise, that nothing will be left undone, that will in the least contribute to the safety, comfort and convenience of our citizens.

The track has been laid over the Neponset Bridge in a manner altogether different from the Horse Railroad tracks heretofore laid on other bridges. On the Chelsea bridge, for instance, the track is formed by laying down two inch plank over the old bridge planking, and nailing down a thin bar of iron, about half an inch in thickness over it,—thus causing a very uneven surface on the bridge, and making it difficult for ordinary teams to pass across it. But on the Neponset bridge, the Company have done their work more thoroughly; they have removed the old timber, which was found to be in a very rotten condition, and replaced them by new ones, three inch Burnt Pine plank was then laid down, on which the T rail is placed, and then filled in the surface with two inch plank laid longitudinally. In this manner the bridge is much strengthened, and the surface improved rather than injured for public travel.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT. Mr. Garrett Fleming, an industrious ledgeman, who resides on Quincy Avenue in this town, met with a severe accident on Tuesday last. He was employed at Messrs. Mitchell & Co.'s ledge, and was engaged in loading a team; had a piece of granite hoisted when the chain broke, and the huge stone fell, striking him on the side of his head—breaking his jaw, knocking out his teeth, and causing the blood to flow freely from the opposite ear. He was removed to his residence, and from there to the Hospital in Boston. His recovery, at the last we heard, was doubtful.

NARROW ESCAPE. We learn that Mr. Benjamin F. Curtis, of this town, while sailing among the islands in our bay one day last week, had his boat swamped, leaving him nothing but a very small skiff—a dangerous boat for smooth water, and perilous for deep sea; but with true firmness, and steady, cautious movements, he succeeded in reaching the terra firma, which was several rods distant, when his heart beat quicker and freer than it had for many long and anxious moments. A dog, his only companion, was rescued the next day from the bow, which was the only part of the swamped boat, that had kept above water.

MAY DAY brought with it but few flowers—but it brought a vacation to some of our schools, and the happy relief, for one day, to the scholars, from their studies. The morning was damp and unsuited for a ramble over the green sward—but as the day advanced, the sun came forth, and soon merry groups of urchins were seen perambulating meadow and field in search of the first offerings of the season, for a wreath, to decorate some fair brow.

IMPORTANT TO CITIES AND TOWNS. The appropriation for making reimbursements to cities and towns for money paid to families of volunteers for the year 1861, provides "That the same shall be paid at the time they severally pay their State tax."

YET ANOTHER. Since our last issue we learn of the death of another Quincy volunteer, William Jones, who died at Newbern, (N. C.) on the 19th ult., of typhoid fever.—Though but a short time has intervened since he bid adieu to his many friends, he has twice nobly fought for the defence of his country, at Roanoke and Newbern, through which contests he passed unhurt; but the grim messenger, Death, has now broken for the first time the family circle, and closed the earthly career of a young and ardent patriot, who, although he now lies in the silent grave, will ever be remembered.—"The lightnings may flash, and the loud thunders rattle;

He heeds not, he hears not, he's free from all pain; He sleeps his last sleep, he has fought his last battle, No sound can awake him to glory again."

By this dispensation of an All-Wise Providence, many happy hearts have been filled with sorrow.

He was a member of Co. H., 23d Mass. Regiment, a noble-hearted and promising young man of about twenty years of age. His honesty and virtue endeared him in the hearts of many. His remains arrived at this place on Saturday, the 26th ult., and the funeral ceremonies were held in the Episcopal Church the following day, and the body interred in the Mount Wollaston Cemetery—its final resting place.

MILITARY. An election of Field Officers of the Fourth Regiment, Second Brigade, of Mass. Volunteer Militia, was held at the Hancock House, Boston, on Wednesday last, Col. Abner B. Packard, acting Brigadier General, presiding. Henry Walker, Esq., of this town, was elected Lieut. Colonel, and Capt. Charles F. Allen, of South Abington, as Major.

PUBLIC ENTERPRISE. We have a few public spirited men who are not frightened at the bug-bear cry of panic makers about hard times, but who follow their own good sense, and lead off in enterprises, which call forth the labor of the community, and give new life to business. Thompson Baxter, Esq., is taking a forward step in this movement. On that eligible site, corner of Sea and Canal Streets, which has long lain unimproved, he is about to erect a costly and most beautiful edifice. Already the ground has been marked off, the cellar dug, stone drawn, carpenters set to work, presenting a lively scene, which is refreshing to behold. This is a commendable spirit; furnishing employment to those in want; adding new attractions and beauties to the place, and setting an example worthy of imitation. We wish we had more of it.

A NEW PRACTITIONER IN THE FIELD.—In Dr. Clark, who has recently taken up his residence with us, we have a new candidate in the healing art. His mode of practice differs from the old school practitioners. He does not interrogate his patients, but professes to be able to read their complaints from their countenances. We have heard some strange things—which appeared almost incredible—respecting the Dr.'s skill and remarkable cures. His office is on Temple street.

COAST DEFENCES OF MASSACHUSETTS.—In the Senate, Thursday, the Committee on Federal Relations, reported a Resolve, authorizing the Governor to contract for ordnance for coast defence to an amount not exceeding $300,000, of which $10,000 may be expended in testing and proving cannon and projectiles.

ACCIDENT. On Wednesday of last week, Mr. Joseph Gardner, employed in Sherman's box factory, South Weymouth, had one of the bones of the fore-arm broken, and was also considerably bruised, while attempting to remove a belt, by being caught between the belt and wheel. The machinery having been started for the purpose of detaching the belt, was moving very slowly at the time, and this, together with the breaking of the belt, probably saved his life.

EARTHQUAKE. The North Bridgewater Gazette, says, that a citizen of that place, who was at Bridgewater on Sunday, was startled at about 10 1/2 A. M., by sounds resembling thunder, manifestly proceeding from the earth, and which by their peculiarity he was led to believe produced by the earthquake in the vicinity. Others in the neighborhood heard the noise, and corroborate his statement. The sound appeared to come from a northwest direction. The same thing was noticed at the former place. The subterranean disturbance, it is said, was marked by rattling sound, like that described as being heard by Mr. Parry of Lakeville, on the 9th of March last, which by the way was Sunday. Members of Mr. Parry's family also saw from a window, at that time, the ground undulating like waves of the sea. As it is not a volcanic district, the Gazette hopes they may escape any severe visitation of the kind.

GASEOUS. The whole number of gas works in the United States is 420, with a capital of $51,620,640. In the rebel States the capital employed is $5,631,860, against $45,989,050 in loyal.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MAY 1, 1862.

The city has been jubilant from the news that reached us on Monday last of the capture by the Federal forces of New Orleans; and to-day we are informed another union triumph has been obtained near Corinth. This intelligence, has a favorable effect on business. It is believed here by many, that the rebel army at Yorktown will be bagged or be in full retreat before many days. If so, the bottom tub of the rebellion has caved out, and the war, except in guerilla form is at an end. The prophecy of General McClellan would seem to be verifying, that we are to have no more defeats or retreats. There is certainly a more cheerful feeling here in regard to the speedy suppression of the rebellion than has existed for some months past.

The approaching levy is regarded by the public with any thing but complacency. Its burdens are dreaded to that extent, as to greatly curtail trade operations; and no wonder—as the various taxes which the citizens of Massachusetts will have to pay the present year, as estimated, will amount to $20 00 per head on the whole population—or $75 00 per poll throughout the State. The wonderful rise in Government securities, and the ease of the money market,—loans being often negotiated at 4 1/2 per cent.—will make the onus of taxation somewhat less. Experience has proved that the result of a large national debt and high taxation lessens the rate of interest in all commercial nations.

The great questions before Congress are the confiscation, tax and tariff bills; and so far, nothing has been done on them. These topics, as they come before the House or Senate have elicited able debates and given prominence to the talents of many members heretofore in the shade. In the House, Messrs. Daves and Eliot of Massachusetts, are considered smart men; but Thaddeus Stevens of Pennsylvania, without doubt, is the ablest member of the popular branch, not excepting Blair and Colfax.

The State Legislature has adjourned after a pleasant session to most of the members of nearly four months. The Hoosac Tunnel question has been settled, by submitting all matters to Commissioners to be appointed by the Governor. In their report of all the facts in the case to the next Legislature, the public will learn the true merits of this gigantic humbug. We shall take occasion to allude to some of the acts and resolves of the past session in a future number.

REFORMATION OF CRIMINALS. Rev. Charles Spear and lady, the devoted friends of the prisoners, delivered very interesting addresses in the Universalist Church, last Sabbath, on their labors. Mr. Spear has devoted thirty years of his life to the subject of Prison Reform. He has aided several hundreds of discharged convicts. They have rooms in Boston, 427 Washington street.—Help is needed to carry on their work, and we trust, after so many years of devotion to such a benevolent cause, that they will find that help which they so richly deserve. Mr. Spear's subject from the Bible was "Christ and the Maniac." We trust that he will give another address here, as a strong wish has been expressed to hear him again.

POCKET PICKED. Mr. Isaac Hersey, Jr., of Hingham, while at the Old Colony depot, in Boston, Wednesday evening, had his pocket picked of a wallet containing two $100 bills on the Safety Fund bank, and about $150 in U. S. Treasury notes.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS. The public will be pleased to learn that Col. Wm. Raymond Lee and Major Revere have been exchanged for rebel officers from Fort Warren, and will soon return to the 20th Mass. regiment.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS. We have received from our Representative in Congress, Hon. B. F. Thomas, the expose of the House Committee of the frauds perpetrated by Government officials on the Treasury of the United States. He has our thanks.

A Free Lunch will be served up at the Mariposa Saloon, this evening.

HARPER'S FAMILY MAGAZINE. The May No. has been received. It is an interesting number, full of the choicest and best reading matter to be found in the English language. Subscriptions received at the Quincy Bookstore.

THE CONTINENTAL MONTHLY. The May number of this new magazine, which is now before us, contains much that is instructive, useful, and amusing. It is for sale at the Quincy Bookstore.

Contents.—What shall we do with it: A Philosophical Bankrupt; The Molly O'Molly Papers; All Together; A True Story; Macaroni and Canvas; Fairies; John Bright; The Anti-Norse Discoverers of America; State Rights; Roanoke Island; A Story of Mexican Life; Changed; Hamlet a Fat Man; The Knights of the Golden Circle; Columbia's Safety; Ura Major; Fugitives at the West; The Education to be; Guerdon; Literary Notices; Editor Table.

There will be a Free Lunch at the Hancock Saloon, this evening.

Death of Adjutant F. C. Smith.

CHILICOTHE, OHIO, APRIL 18TH, 1862.

At a meeting of the Chillicothe Grays, held at their armory on Friday, 18th April, 1862, at 11 o'clock, A. M., the committee appointed at the meeting on the evening previous, to draft Resolutions, expressive of the feelings of this Company, upon the decease of our late comrade—F. C. Smith, Adjutant of the 73d O. V. Regiment—presented the following:

The Chillicothe Grays learn with deep regret, the death at Weston, Virginia, on Wednesday last, of typhoid fever, of FREDERICK CHADBOURNE SMITH, Adjutant of the 73d Ohio Volunteer Regiment, (Col. Orland Smith) and lately a member of this Company. Adjutant Smith was born at Gorham, Cumberland County, Maine, about the year 1833, and was the son of Stevens Smith, Esq., of that place. He was for some years a pupil of Col. Orland Smith, at the Gorham Academy. In 1860 he came to reside in Chillicothe, and engaged as a teacher in the Union School of the city, where his success and affability won the admiration of all. During the same year he married Miss Elvira Crane, daughter of Captain Friend Crane, of Quincy, (Mass.) Shortly after the war opened he resigned his position in the schools and enlisted in his Country's service—where he served so faithfully and efficiently as to call forth the highest commendations of his Colonel.

Though a young man, Adjutant Smith had acquired a reputation for superior business capacity and strict integrity; and, by his close attention to duty, and uniform courtesy of manner, had won the warmest affection and regard, of the members of his Regiment, both officers and privates.

Having learned that the remains of the deceased are to arrive in this city to-day, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Adjutant Smith, his Regiment and country have lost an efficient officer and true patriot, and this Company one of its first and most active members.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved widow, parents, and relatives of the deceased, our earnest sympathy with them in the great loss they have sustained.

Resolved, That this Company proceed in a body to the railroad depot of this city, and escort the remains of the deceased to the place appointed for the funeral ceremonies, and (by the permission of friends,) take charge of and guard the body until its departure from the city.

R. D. McDUGAL, }
S. W. COOK, } Committee.
J. W. PILLSBURY, }

On motion, the foregoing Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously received and adopted, and thereupon it was ordered that the same be published in our city papers, and also in some paper published in Quincy, (Mass.); and that a copy of the above be forwarded to the widow of the deceased.

WM. T. MCCLINTICK, Captain.

WM. T. SAPPINGTON, Secretary.

DEATH OF THE OLDEST NEW YORK PRINTER. David H. Reins, the oldest printer, died recently, at Morrisania, aged eighty years. Mr. Reins was one of the veterans of 1812. Notwithstanding his advanced age, he continued to labor at his profession as a compositor until about two years since, when his enfeebled state of mind and body compelled him to relinquish his occupation.—Mr. Reins was one of the founders of the New York Typographical Society, and his name is recorded as Secretary in the minutes of the first meeting of the Society, July 4, 1809. At the request of the late Dr. Francis, immediately after the exercises attendant on the fiftieth anniversary of the institution, in 1859, Mr. Reins sat for his portrait, which now hangs upon the wall of the Printer's Library in that city.

Among the sick and wounded soldiers sent home last week from Burnside's division, were H. B. Pierce, of Abington, Charles Miller, of Randolph, and John Hope, of Weymouth,—the first of the 23d Mass. regiment, the second of the 21st, and the third of the 24th.

Adjutant Frederick C. Smith, of the 73d Ohio regiment, who died of typhoid fever, in Weston, (Va.) April 15th, was a graduate of the Bridgewater Normal School, and for two years master of the principal grammar school in Stoughton.

SPIRITUAL ASSOCIATION. JOHNSON'S HALL, QUINCY. Services at 10 1/2 o'clock, A. M. & 2 1/2 P. M.

Miss Annie E. Dickinson of Philadelphia, 19 years of age, will speak before the Spiritualist Society, to-morrow. Her discourse in the afternoon will be on the National Crisis.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Port Macon surrendered on Friday the 25th ult., after a bombardment of ten and a half hours. Federal loss, 7 killed, 18 wounded.

It is stated that the appearance of the Fall wheat plant in Upper Canada is unusually good wherever the fields have sufficient drainage. There is very little winter-killed, and the plant is thick and vigorous.

Heavy as was the fruit crop in the West last fall, the coming season promises even still greater abundance. The trees are covered with bloom in all quarters. In Central and Southern Illinois prospects are exceedingly good. At home, we are assured, the indications for a full fruit crop were never more favorable.

The Mexican General Robles has been executed under the charge of being a traitor to his country. The execution created a great excitement. His brothers have, through the press, asked the public to suspend judgment.

Queen Victoria has offered to give up Buckingham Palace to the Emperor of the French during his visit to see the International Exhibition, and the Emperor will occupy it for ten days or a fortnight during the season.

The Board of Aldermen of Lowell have abolished the Liquor Agency and appointed apothecaries to dispense ardent liquors for medicinal and mechanical purposes.

Embalming bodies has become quite a business at Washington. One physician is said to have made $30,000. The prices are fifty dollars for an officer and twenty-five dollars for a private.

A well sunk at any point along Saginaw River, Michigan, to the depth of seven hundred feet, will bring to the surface the strongest and purest salt brine found any where in the United States.

The ice blockade on the Western Lakes has broken away, and navigation has been resumed this year ten days earlier than in 1861.

Calico, the well known cotton cloth, is named from Calicut, a city in India from whence it first came. Calico was first brought to England in the year 1631.

A disgusted seecah says that Floyd, Pillow and Price, are pretty good generals—take them as they run.

The Kennebec Journal calls upon the farmers of Maine now "King Cotton" is threatened, to make efforts to grow flax, for which there is an increasing demand.

Captain Porter, of the Essex, engaged in the capture of Fort Henry, though a strong loyalist, has three sons and a brother-in-law in the rebel army, and his wife resides in the South.

The British schooner Guapa, which cleared from Boston for Gibraltar and a market, took out one galloons valued at $10.

Rev. Mr. Heath will preach in the Universalist Church to-morrow morning upon Cornering Religion; in the afternoon a Communion discourse will be given.

Marriages.

In Scituate, on the 29th ult., by the Rev. Frederic Reed, Mr. Noah Curtis of this town, to Miss M. Annie, daughter of Edwin Bailey, Esq., of Scituate, formerly of East Boston. At Sing Sing, (N. Y.) on the 1st inst., by Rev. A. T. Stewart of Tarry Town, Mr. James White of Boston, formerly of this place, to Miss Aggie, eldest daughter of J. B. Deutsch of the former place.

Deaths.

At Newbern, (N. C.) on the 19th ult., of typhoid fever, William Jones, aged 19 years, 11 months and 11 days.

Notice.

QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD.

THE Quincy Horse Railroad will be opened on WEDNESDAY, the 7th inst., to accommodate the LADIES of Quincy, with a FREE RIDE TO BOSTON.

Four cars will leave Franklin Square, in Quincy, at 10 A. M., and return from the terminus, at State street, Boston, at 2 P. M.

These cars are specially for the LADIES, who are invited to fill them before the hour of starting, and return in them from the city.

R. B. LEUCHARS, President Quincy Horse Railroad Co. Quincy, May 3d, 1862. 1w

Notice!

QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD.

THE Cars of the Quincy Railroad Company will commence running regularly on THURSDAY, the 8th inst., between Quincy and Boston.

The Cars will leave Franklin Square, Quincy, at 7 o'clock, A. M., and every hour thereafter until 9 P. M.

Leaving State street, Boston, at 7 A. M., and every hour till 11 P. M.

The Cars of the Quincy Railroad Company will go through to State street, Boston.

Some little delays may be anticipated for a few days until turnouts are established, and running time ascertained over the Quincy and Dorchester Railroads; and the Directors feel assured that the traveling public will fully consider their efforts to supply cheap and commodious facilities of communication between Quincy and Boston.

GOODHUE'S
Drummer.
LADIES and Gents—if you are wise, You'll study to economize; Be careful when you "goods," shall buy, You do not pay for them too much.

'A sixpence saved'—we all have learned, 'Is equal to a shilling earned;' This "gentle hint" we give to you, That you may patronize GOODHUE.

One thing we'd have you understand, He deals in nothing "contraband"; Another thing we'd have you know— No other man sells "goods" so low.

GOODHUE his customers will "suit" In best of style, from HEAD to FOOT; And make them feel, when they want more, The place to buy is at his STORE.

Some folks it very much surprises, How 'tis he's selling at such prices; Some think he some time will rue it, But GOODHUE knows just how to do it.

GOODHUE is bound to make a racket, Assisted by young HUNT and HACKETT; And those who wish to make life sunny, Should trade with them—and SAVE THEIR MONEY.

As Spring is coming on—and Summer— He sends this forth instead of "drummer"; He wishes this, the understanding— GOODHUE sells lowest— WEYMOUTH LANDING.

"It is a custom in some places for merchants to send out men—who, in business parlance, are called "drummers," to "drum up" customers; but, as we advise our patrons to study economy, by purchasing their goods OF US, we—wishing to practice what we teach—send out this MODEST little circular INSTEAD, as much less expensive.

REMEMBER
—THAT—
NO ONE

Poetry.

It only seems the Other Day.

BY E. L. BLANCHARD

Though swiftly time, with rapid wings,
Has borne us from old scenes we knew,
Yet memory of the picture brings
In glowing colors back to view;
Thus early friends remember when
They first as schoolboys met in play;
And yet, though years have passed since then,
It only seems "the other day."

The form of her we loved of yore,
To whom we pledged affection's vow,
Will glide before our eyes once more,
Though but in memory living now;
Of that dark hair one tress alone—
A treasured gift—is spared decay,
Yet words in that familiar tone
Seemed only breathed "the other day."

Those friends appear no more the same
That shared our mirth and dried our tears,
Or taught us childhood's favorite game—
The dear old friends of early years;
But when we ask if they forget
Those memories of the past, they say
"Though time has wrought so many changes, yet
It only seems 'the other day.'"

Fallen.

BY EDWARD S. HAND.

Blow gently, Oh ye winter winds,
Along the fern reaches,
Nor whist the yellow leaves which cling
Upon the saddened beeches;
And gently breathe upon the hills
Where spring's first violets perished,
Died like the budding summer hopes
Our hearts too fondly cherished.

Oh memory, bring not back the past,
To brim our cup of sorrow;
The dear old days creep on to bring
A drearier to-morrow.
Can streaming eyes and aching hearts
Glow at the battle's story,
Or they who stake their all and lose
Exult in fame and glory?

Oh, lay them tenderly to rest,
Those for their country dying—
Let breaking hearts and trembling lips
Pour the dirge of sighing
Yet tender than the requiem raise
The song of exultation,
That the great heritage is ours
To DIE TO SAVE THE NATION.

In patience wait, nor think that yet
Shall Right and Freedom perish,
Nor yet Oppression trample down
The heritage we cherish!
For still remember, precious things
Are won by stern endeavor—
Though in the strife our heart strings break,
The Right lives on forever.

On Guard

At midnight, on my lonely bed,
When shadow wraps the wood and lea,
A vision seems my view to greet
Of one at home that prays for me.

No roses bloom upon her cheek—
Her form is not a lover's dream—
But on her face, so fair and meek,
A host of holier beauties gleam.

For softly shines her silver hair,
A patient smile on her face,
And the mild, lustrous light of prayer
Around her sheds a moon-like grace.

She prays for one that's far away—
The soldier in his holy fight—
And begs that Heaven in mercy may Protect her boy and bless the right!

Till, though the leagues lie far between,
This silent incense of her heart
Steals o'er my soul, with breath serene;
And we no longer are apart.

So guarding thus my lonely bed,
By shadowy wood and haunted lea,
That vision seems my view to greet
Of her at home who prays for me.

Anecdotes.

Last summer, in the height of mosquito time, the little rascals had their songs, to the annoyance of every one. While my little sister Etie, then about two years old, was being put to bed, her mother said to her:
"Etie, you must always be a good girl, and then at night, while you are asleep, the angels will come and watch around your bed!" Oh yes, ma, said Etie, I know that. I heard them singing all around my head last night.

Well, Sambo, how do you like your new place?
O, berry well, massa.
You see missis biled tree eggs for herself, and gib me de broff.

An Irish footman went one day to his master and said:
"Place your honor I want to ask you a question: Is a thing lost when you know where it is?"

Blood-an-ounds, Pat, to be sure, not said
his master, how can you ask such nonsense?
Oh, thank your honour, says Pat, the d—a harm then for the new copper tea-kettle's at the bottom of the well.

At a tea-party, a young gentleman being
at a loss for conversation, said:
"Pray, Miss, does your mother keep a cow?"
No, replied the young lady, but I perceive your mother keeps a calf.

A soldier in the late war having stolen a shirt from a farmer, to whom he would not make restitution:
Well, said the farmer, if you keep it, you will make restitution in this world or the next.
Faith, replied the soldier, if you will wait
so long, I guess I'll take another.

A dancer said to a Spartan:
You cannot stand so long on one leg as I can.
Perhaps not, said the Spartan, but any goose can.

THE SPECIFIC PILL
A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness,
and Genital Irritability in either sex.

This Malady, the terrible consequences of
which are too well known to require more than a
bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore the most dangerous of all the long catalogues of human ills. It saps the very springs of life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and
sinks the unhappy victim into imbecility and premature death. From non-sensical boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most Aggravated Cases,
whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse
or Excess.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Sperm-
atorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine
can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]
I have found them all that could be desired—
Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used
them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years.
I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E.
P. DICKEE, M. D.

This is not a Homoeopathic Remedy, nor
is there any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.
PRICE—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5,
by mail, prepaid. For sale by all respectable

Not Yet.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Oh country, marvel of the earth!
Oh realm to sudden greatness grown!
The age that glories in thy birth,
Shall it behold thee overthrown?
Shall traitors lay that greatness low?
No, Land of Hope and Blessing, No!

And we who wear thy glorious name,
Shall we, like cravens stand apart,
When those whom thou hast trusted aim
The death-blow at thy generous heart?
Forth goes the battle-cry, and lo!
Hosts rise in harness, shouting, No!

And they who founded, in our land,
The power that rules from sea to sea,
Bled they in vain, or vainly planned
To leave their country great and free?
Their sleeping ashes from below,
Send up the thrilling marmur, No!

Knit they the gentle ties, which long
These sister States were proud to wear,
And tread the kindly links so strong
For side hands in sport to tear—
For scornful hands aside to throw?
No, by our fathers' memory, No!

Our humming marts, our iron ways,
Our wind-tossed woods on mountain crest,
The hoarse Atlantic, with his bays,
The calm, broad Ocean of the West,
And Mississippi's torrent-flow,
And loud Niagara, answer, No!

Not yet the hour is nigh, when they
Who deep in Eden's dim to light set,
Earth's ancient kings shall rise and say,
"Proud country, welcome to the pit!
So soon art thou, like us, brought low!"
No alien group of shadows, No!

For now, behold, the arm that gave
The victory in our fathers' day,
Strong, as of old, to guard and save—
That mighty arm which none can stay—
On clouds above and fields below,
Writes, in men's sight, the answer, No!

Scraps.

The smiles of home are exceedingly pleasant,
but there are many people who have good houses, and who prefer smiling with a friend outside.

With every child we lose we see deeper into life, as with every added lens we pierce
further into the sky.

We are told to take care, but most of us
have too much of it for our comfort already.

It was a maxim of Gen. Jackson's, "Take time to deliberate; but when the hour for action
arrives, stop thinking, and go in."

Some one blamed Dr. Marsh for changing his mind. "Well," said he, "that is the difference between a man and a jackass, the jackass can't change his mind, and the man can—it's a human privilege."

What tune did it whistle? "Over the hills

"Tom, why don't you drop in and take tea with us some time? My wife would be pleased to have you."

"Well, Dick, I seldom go a visiting, for I think that if I find better fare it will make me discontented at home, and if it should be any poorer, it wouldn't be much of an object."

Miscellaneous.

House Cleaning.

BY AN IRRITABLE MAN.

What a confounded state of disorder this house is in, I said to my wife on coming home from business the other afternoon; if I didn't know better I should think we were going to move. Pray tell me what are you about?

I am about to clean house, my dear, my wife replied.

You look as if you were about to become an inmate of the insane asylum, for my wife was shockingly attired in a dressing gown that had seen better days and many house cleanings. She carried a long-handled feather duster in her hand, and had a cap
on her head.

Oh, you may sneer at me as much as you please, she said; but I presume that you would find a difference in the appearance of the house, if it were not that I superintended
the cleanings.

What possible good is accomplished, I asked, by turning the house upside down in this manner? For my part, I never could see that you improved its appearance in the least by doing so; it is simply a confounded bore, and I have come, to the opinion that if there be one thing I dislike more than another, it is house cleaning.

One thing is very certain, she replied,
which is, that you men know nothing about
it. Look at that cobweb in the corner there!

And my wife made an attack with the long-handled feather duster upon an inoffensive little cobweb, that I thought rather ornamental than otherwise.

Now don't you think, I said, that if you were to clean one room at a time, that it would be a great deal better than throwing the entire house in confusion at once. Devote one week, for instance, to the cleaning
of the parlors, another to the dining room,
and so on. That is my plan.

At that rate, house cleaning would last through an entire year, and I, for one, am not disposed to adopt your plan. No, I want to put it all into as small a space as possible, and get through with it as speedily
as I can. If I were to follow your suggestion, the dust and dirt raised in cleaning
one room would be sure to settle, or in some way get into another room just put to rights, and the result would be that house cleaning would never end. No, every thing must be done at once.

Well, my dear, I said, I'll not attempt to argue the matter with you, for I know it would be a very useless task, but I must say that my mother, who understood those things, used to—

Of course, my wife interrupted, you mother did very differently from what I do. She was differently situated, and could do as she pleased. A widow, left as your mother was, could have her own way in a great many matters which we poor wives cannot follow.

I know your mother was a very remarkable woman; but I trust that I do my duty to you and my children and my house, as well as I know how. I don't, continued my wife, putting the end of the handle of the feather
duster into the corner of her eye, and brush-ing out an imaginary tear, think it fair, or honorable, or generous, or husband-like in you to be always telling me how much better
your mother kept house than I do. I wish to gracious you had married your mother.

Pooh! pooh! I exclaimed, you know that would not have been proper. I might have married your mother, though, which would have been as near as I could come to gratifying your wish.

My wife smiled.

My mother wouldn't have had you, sir,
she said.

She would not have shown as good taste,
then, as her daughter did, I replied.

Her daughter sometimes regrets the good taste she showed, my wife said, mischievously.

I think you are mistaken, my dear, I answered; but I am ready to waive the question, provided you will tell me when dinner will be ready. It is six o'clock, and as yet I see no signs of it.

I thought I told you, before you went away this morning, my wife made answer,
that you would have to get your dinner down town, for we should have none.

You did say so, I replied; but I supposed
it was simply a hint for me to send home
something from the market, which I did.

I know you did—enough to feed the aldermen and their assistants with. How did you think it could be cooked when we were cleaning house?

I didn't know you were going to clean house, I said. I wish to gracious I had; I wouldn't come home till midnight.

Yes, and left your poor wife here in the dust and disorder, while you were feasting and enjoying yourself. I am glad, now, you have not been to dinner, for you can see what I have to put up with! how I have to get along,

and how uncomfortable, even to me, house
cleaning is.

I presume it is, my dear, I said in a mollified tone of voice, for I was desirous of having my dinner, and did not care to provoke my wife; and I am very sorry that you deem it necessary to engage in it. Why don't you sit down quietly, and let the servants do the work? I don't think it necessary for you to lift a finger to it.

Nicely the house would be cleaned, indeed,
she replied, if I did not. You men know nothing about it, and I just wish you wouldn't speak another word on the subject.

Very well, let me have some dinner, I replied, to put into my mouth, and I will not.
If there is one thing I dislike more than another, it is going without my dinner.

I am sure I don't know, said my wife, what you will have to eat, for it is utterly impossible for me or either of the servants to stop work at present to cook anything.

Oh, anything will answer, I said, a piece
of cold meat pie, or a slice of boiled ham,
for instance. That, together with an apple
tart and glass of wine, I think, will suffice.
Let one of the servants set the table in the library, and then send the things up, if you please.

My wife laughed.

If you think, she said, that we have any meat pie or boiled ham in the house, you are greatly mistaken.

Why, we had some yesterday, where has
it gone to?

Gone to? echoed my wife. Don't you suppose the children and servants must eat?

Why, yes, certainly, I answered; but—
But what? interrupted my wife. You don't think a meat pie will last forever, I trust?

No, I answered; but my mother at house cleaning time, always had a meat pie and a boiled ham in the cupboard.

There it is again, exclaimed my wife; you are always comparing my housekeeping with your mother's. I don't like it. I endeavor to do the best I can, and if I fail to have a meat pie and a boiled ham in the house whenever you ask for them, I am certain to have your mother's ways cast into my face. I don't do things as your mother did.
I know, and what is more, I don't intend to.
If you are not satisfied with my manner of housekeeping, why, you had better hire a housekeeper who will suit you better. I never heard my father—and he was a most fastidious man—complain of my mother's housekeeping and she taught me. Everybody who knew my mother said that she was the neatest and most perfect of housekeepers.

Good gracious! I exclaimed, don't say any more to me about your mother, for if there be one thing I dislike more than another,
it is to hear about her housekeeping. But all this time, while you are talking about the excellent qualities of your mother and yours, I am absolutely starving. Now, once for all,
can I have my dinner or not.

Certainly, answered my wife, just so soon
as I am able to get it for you.

When will that be? I asked.

In about an hour, she replied.

I can't wait so long, I said. I have an engagement to meet a gentleman on particular business, at eight o'clock, and here it is seven.
I see that I'll have to go out and get my dinner elsewhere; there is no help for it. I'll have a good one, at all events, I added, as I drew on my gloves.

Yes, you had better go, said my wife, and leave me here to eat dry bread, while you spend two or three dollars on a dinner. My father never left my mother, when in this
way.

What do you mean? I inquired, slightly startled, by, in this way?

Why, in the midst of house cleaning, of course, she replied; what other way could I mean?

Oh! I said, much relieved by her explanation, I thought, perhaps, that you meant—Sir, said my wife, indignantly, you will oblige me, now, by going out and getting your dinner wherever you please, and paying just as much as you like. But my father—

My dear, I said, interrupting her, if there be one thing I dislike more than another, it is to hear about your father. Good bye!

I placed my hand on the knob of the door,
to open it, when Katy, entering the room
said that dinner was on the table. Immediately I turned to my wife, who had been arranging her hair, and performing other toilet duties, during our confab, and, offering her my arm, which she took, we proceeded to the dining-room.

The Pure Heart.

The springs of everlasting life are within.
There are clear streams gushing up from the depths of the soul, which flow out to enliven
the sphere of outward existence. But like the waters of Siloam, they "go swiftly." You must listen to catch the silvery tones of the little rill as it glides from its mountain home;

you may not witness its silent march through the green vale, but its course will be seen in the fresh verdure and the opening flowers;
its presence will be known by the forms of life and beauty which gather around it. It is ever thus with the pure. You may not hear the "still small voice," or heed the silent aspiration, but there is a moral influence and a holy power which you will feel. The wilderness is made to smile, flowers of new life and beauty spring up and flourish, while an invisible presence breathes immortal fragrance through the atmosphere.

For the Patriot.

Revolutionary War—State Tax.

Whereas by means of the late war a considerable public debt hath arisen, and it is the duty of the Legislature, and for the interest of their constituents, that ways and means the least burdensome, be provided for the punctual discharge of the interest, and the gradual lessening the principle thereof;
and whereas considerable sums of money
may be collected from certain papers, commissions, instruments and processes,

Be it therefore enacted, That from and after the first day of August, there shall be levied, collected, and paid throughout this Commonwealth, for the several and respective writings hereafter mentioned, the following duties:

For every deed that shall be recorded, in any of the Counties of the Commonwealth,
one shilling.

For every original writ issued from the office of a Clerk of Common Pleas, eight pence.

For every original issue of every Justice of the Peace, four pence.

For every writ of execution issued by the Clerk of the Supreme Court, eight pence.

For every writ of execution issued by the Clerk of any Court of Common Pleas, eight pence.

For every execution issued by a Justice of the Peace, four pence.

For every confession of a judgment before any Justice of the Peace, four pence.

For every register of a vessel, one shilling.

For every charter party, three shillings.

For every policy of insurance, two shillings.

For every advertisement respecting private concerns, of the length of twelve lines, computing eight words to a line, or any less advertisement, each time the same shall be inserted in a newspaper, six pence; on each such advertisement of greater length,
and less than twenty such lines, one shilling;
for each time inserted as aforesaid; and in that proportion for all advertisements of greater length. After three years trial this section of the law was found to have been unpopular, and not reimbursing the Government for the expenses incurred in collecting
the tax; therefore the law was repealed.

For every bill of lading, one penny.

For every commission for the office of Sheriff in either of the Counties of Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex, Hampshire, Worcester or Berkshire, twelve pounds; and in any other county in the Commonwealth, six pounds.

For the appointment of any person to be Clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court, or Clerk of a Court of Common Pleas in either of the counties of Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex, Hampshire, Worcester, Berkshire, twelve pounds; and in any other counties in the State, six pounds.

For every Register of Deeds, on every choice, twenty shillings.

For every Commissioner for the office of a Judge of Probate, twenty shillings.

For every Commissioner for the office of Register of Probate, twenty shillings.

For every admission of any person to practice as an attorney in a Court of Common Pleas, six pounds.

For the admission of any person to practice
as an attorney, nine pounds.

For the admission of any person to the degree of a Barrister at law, twelve pounds.

This act passed July 2d, 1785.

A Word to the Boys.

When the Duke of Wellington was sick,
the last thing he took was a little tea. On his servant's handing it to him in a saucer,
and asking if he would have it, the Duke replied, "Yes, if you please." These were his last words. How much kindness and courtesy is expressed by them.

He who had commanded the greatest armies in Europe, and was long accustomed to the tone of authority, did not despise or overlook the small courtesies of life. Ah, how many boys do. What a rude tone of command they often use to their little brothers
and sisters, and sometimes to their mothers.
They order so. This is ill-bred and unchristian, and shows a coarse nature and hard heart.

In all your home talk, remember, "If you please." Among your playmates, don't forget, "If you please." To all who wait upon or serve you, believe that "if you please"

will make you better served than all the cross or ordering words in the whole dictionary. Don't forget three little words, "if you please."

How the Account Stands.

At least fifty cities and towns have been taken from the enemy since the commencement of the present year. About thirty rebel forts and fortifications have also been captured since the first of January. The Federal reverses have been in New Mexico alone,
where the enemy have occupied three or four evacuated military posts and towns.

The following facts in connection with this war are worth bearing in mind:

1. That no rebel soldier has yet planted a foot on the soil of the free states, except as a prisoner of war.

2. That the Union troops have always been victorious in the field, their reverses being invariably caused by indiscreet and unskillful attack on strongly fortified positions.

3. That since the fall of Sumter, the rebels have never taken a fort or strongly fortified position, while they have been compelled to vacate and surrender places of immense strength.

Scene in a Recruiting Office.

On Saturday last, a friend was eye and ear
witness to a scene and colloquy substantially as follows:—

Recruiting office, and officer in charge.—
Enter, an elderly Irish matron, her brother,
and her tall son of nineteen summers.

"And where's the Captain?" inquired the matron.

"I am the person you seek," replied the officer.

"This b'y o' mine says he's recruited with yees, and shure I've here to forbid my sich doin's intirely, for yer see he's but nineteen,
and the only support I hev."

"Have you no husband?"

"De't a bit o' one but this brother and son
o' mine hev I."

"I see no way for you to do but to obtain a substitute."

"A substitute! Fyith and what is that?"

"Raise another young man to take his place."

"Another young man, indeed! did ye iver
see the likes o' that whin I've bin nineteen long years a rail-in' him! Out wid yees for a hard jinker—as though I could raise another in two days!"

The afflicted widow uttered a subdued
malediction, but as her mind wandered for a moment to the power and use of that pilla-rium of civil rights—the habeas corpus—which she had indistinctly heard about somewhere, she ejaculated in high tones—"I'll go to the State—us and git the hip o' Corporal Uggar; murder! but I'll not lose my b'y
so easy."

The Right to Live.

There are some people so thoroughly
cowed that they appear to be always apologizing for venturing to be in this world.—
They seem virtually to say to every one they meet, but especially to those of wealth and rank, "I beg your pardon for being here."

Not only is this a painful and degrading condition, I do not hesitate to say that it is a morally wrong one. It implies a forgetfulness of who put you in this world, my friend,
that you should wish to skulk through it in that fashion. Is not this the right way for a human being to feel?—The Creator put me here, in my lowly place, indeed; but I have
as good a right in this world, in my own place in it, as the queen or the president.

My title to be here is exactly the same as that of the greatest and noblest; it is the will of my Maker. And I shall follow the advice of a good and resolute man in an early century,
who was always ready to give honor to whom it was due, but who would not abnegate his rights as man, for mortal. I intend to do what he said should be done by every man,—I intend "wherein I am called, therein to abide with God."—A. H. Boyd.

"Save the Jug."

The agony which some people manifest
because they fear slavery may not be preserved, reminds us of the exclamation of a certain conservative who flourished in days of yore, ere the temperance men had begun their grand work. He had been to town to make purchases, among which was a two-gallon jug,
full to the cork with the worst rum that could be had for love (of it) or money; and he was retracing home, in his wagon, accompanied by his wife and three children. Something occurred that caused the wagon to be upset,
spilling all its contents right on the verge of a precipice. As it went over, the old gentleman, giving no thought to either wife or children, belliowed out:—

"Save, oh, save the jug!"—Traveller.

About Pens.

Pens of some sort have been in use from very ancient times, adapted to the material upon which the written characters were to be impressed. Upon stone or metallic plates gravers of steel served for writing, and such are referred to by Job in speaking of "an iron pen." For the waxen tablets of the ancients a metallic stylus was employed; one end of which was sharpened for marking, and the other was flattened for erasing the marks and smoothing the wax. It was also the practice in ancient times, as it is among the Chinese at the present day, to paint the letters with a fine hair pencil. Pens of reeds also were made at a very early period, for the use of a fluid ink upon papyrus. The reed selected for this purpose is described as small
and hard, and about the size of a swan's quill.
It was found in Egypt and Armenia, and Cairo and Alexandria were famous markets in which it was sold. Along the shores of the Persian Gulf, reeds are still collected for this purpose, and are distributed throughout various parts of the eastern countries, being better adapted to the ink and paper employed in those regions than any other kind of pens. The introduction of common writing paper rendered necessary pens of a finer character, and caused a demand for goose-quills.

A great trade grew up in these articles, which even the more recent introduction of steel and gold pens has not materially diminished. Poland and Russia are largely engaged in it. In a single year St. Petersburg has furnished England over 27,000,000 of quills. Within the last fifty years steel pens of various kinds have been manufactured in Great Britain, and the number made annually
in Birmingham has been estimated at one thousand millions. Several attempts have been made to establish this manufacture in the United States, but it has been found almost hopeless to compete with the manufacturers of Birmingham. The art of making gold pens has, however, been carried to the highest perfection in New York, so that the only really excellent pen used in Europe is obtained in this country. The machinery used for this purpose was invented by Mr.
Rendell, and improved by Mr. Fairchild, and is curious and elaborate, more than twenty distinct operations being required in the production of a single pen. There are seven or eight factories for this manufacture in the city of New York, one in Brooklyn, (N. Y.) two in Brooklyn, (Ct.) one in Hydeville, Mass., and one in Cincinnati.—New American Cyclopedia.

Obeying Orders.

One day Washington, sending a dispatch,
directed the bearer to cross the river at a certain ferry, and go through the Ramapo Pass to Morristown. The young man, knowing that a nest of traitors invested the Pass, ventured to suggest to the Commander-in-chief
that another road would be the safest.

"I shall be taken," said he, "if I go through the Pass."

"Young man, your duty is not to talk, but to obey," said Washington, sternly.

He went as directed, and near the Pass was captured, as he was afraid of being, and sent to New York, then in the hands of the enemy. The next day the despatches taken from him, disclosing a plan of attacking the city, were published with great parade, and the English immediately began preparations to defend it.

This gave Washington time to plan and execute another movement in quite a different direction, and by that time both the British and the bearer found out that the despatch was meant to be taken.

The Season.

Days, weeks, and months serve as the way-marks of Time, by which we measure our progress in the journey of life; while the successions of the seasons, like the alternations of day and night, remind us of the ever-

ties greet us on every side—what pleasant objects delight the eye, and what glowing pleasure does she diffuse about the heart! We revel in the soft influence of the varied fascinations, till the soul longs to mingle in the sunshine, with the breeze, the buds and blossoms, that send upward their fragrant incense.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 10th, 1862.

THE FIRST DAY. A new era in the future destiny of Quincy, was inaugurated on Wednesday last. The new avenue of communication with our metropolitan neighbors, the Horse Railroad, was thrown open for public travel. Five cars, filled with ladies—who, on this occasion, with their usual promptness, responded to the invitation of the managers—moved off, at ten A. M., in gallant style for Boston; time occupied, one hour and twenty minutes—this figure, however, will be lessened in future trials. Everything is now reduced to a system, and is in fine working order; a good road, enterprising managers, carriages of a superior make; in fact, teams, experienced conductors, a reduction in fare of one third; cars which run every hour in the day, from six A. M., till nine P. M.—an accommodation before denied us—are some of the advantages which the citizens will derive from this enterprise. It is an achievement, of incalculable benefit to the place, and will receive the fostering care of the people.

UNFORTUNATE. Chas. N. Dison, a young and enterprising grocer, on Washington St., in this place, lost a good horse on Tuesday. He was delivering goods, as usual, when in front of Mr. McDonald's, on Brackett street, his horse slackened his speed, with the intention of stopping, as probably he had done on former occasions; Mr. Dison having no articles to leave at this place, applied the ends of the reins quite smartly to the animal's back, causing him to spring suddenly, and somehow, very singularly, to break one of his hind legs, near the thigh. Mr. David Edwards, a venerable horse doctor, was called, who advised the owner of the quadruped to kill the same, which he quickly did. The loss will fall quite heavily on our young friend, as the grocery business is quite dull at the present time.

CONTRABAND FROM WAR. While Mr. Enoch D. Lathrop of Quincy Neck was taking his usual walk, on Sunday morning last, he suddenly came upon a large black snake, which showed fight; but Mr. Lathrop being a strong and powerful man, soon conquered and killed his antagonist. His snakeship measured five and one half feet in length, and great praise is due to Mr. L. for his heroic courage in that perilous moment.

CALIFORNIA MAILS. The irregularities and uncertainties heretofore experienced by the attempts of government to establish a daily overland mail between the East and California, will hereafter be obviated by a new arrangement, whereby mails will be forwarded and returned four times each month. Mail matter will leave Quincy for California via Boston and New York, on the morning of the 7th, 15th, 23rd and last days of every month.

SABBATH SCHOOL ASSOCIATION. The Norfolk County Sabbath school society held its annual meeting on the 6th inst., in the church at Braintree, R. S. Storrs, D. D., pastor. Number of schools represented, 26; number of teachers, 68; average attendance for the year, 78 per cent.; number of scholars, 4426; average attendance, 2732, of which 975 are over 18 years of age; 71 conversions were reported.

FIRE IN HINGHAM. A destructive fire occurred in Hingham, on Saturday night last. It caught in a building on the main street, occupied by Daniel Souther, shoe dealer, E. Whiton, hatter, Dr. D. P. Wilson, dentist, and Elihu Thayer provision dealer, which was entirely destroyed, with nearly all its contents, including books, valuable papers, &c. Also, an old wooden building adjoining, and a store occupied by George Lincoln, Jr., dry goods dealer. Most of the stocks of goods and buildings were insured.

When the alarm was first given there was a scarcity of men for a short time, but an abundance of ladies. The women, instead of screaming and getting in the firemen's way, sprang forward to assist in working the engines, and by them one machine was completely manned and worked for some time, till a reinforcement of males arrived and relieved them. They did great execution, throwing some tremendous streams into the midst of the burning matter, and their performance created a great deal of enthusiasm among the firemen.

OUR TOWN CLOCK—who can account for its striking peculiarities?

Mr. Heath will preach to-morrow morning upon Spain. Subject in the afternoon, MAKING AND BREAKING RESOLUTIONS.

JURORS. At a meeting of the Selectmen, May 9th, the following persons were drawn as jurors to serve in the Circuit Court to be held in Boston the present month.

For Grand Jurors: Henry Hardwick, Paul Willard, and Horatio G. Dearborn.
For Petit Jurors: Daniel H. Bills and J. Alva Davis.

BOLD ROBBERY. On Wednesday morning last about three o'clock, as Mr. H. S. Moulton of East Abington, was driving to Brighton, and when between Weymouth Landing and South Weymouth, he was attacked by three men, one of whom seized his horse, while the others beat him, pulled him from the wagon, and cut his pocket book, containing $245, from his clothes, with which they decamped, also taking the horse and wagon. After he had recovered sufficiently he went to a house in the vicinity, and got a person to accompany him in pursuit of the robbers. After going about a mile they found the horse and wagon in the road, but could get no trace of the thieves.

A MILD WINTER. The last winter is generally considered to have been unusually mild. Yet the temperature of the first quarter of the year was 11.2 degrees below the average of thirty-one years. The quantity of rain was 3.94 inches above the average.

ADMONITION. The following admonition to the Republican party appears in the Boston Journal:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BOSTON JOURNAL.
Dear Sir: Will you permit me to say that the sooner the Republican party cuts itself loose from all unconstitutional projects, (whether they relate to emancipation by proclamation, conquering States and holding them as territories, confiscation without trial, or any other measure not warranted by the Constitution, the sooner it will begin to provide for its own salvation. Very truly yours,
JOEL PARKER.

Cambridge, May 5, 1862.

TOTAL ECLIPSE. The Confederate Almanac for 1862, published by Rev. Dr. Sumner at the Southern Methodist Publishing House, announces "an eclipse of the sun, visible over the confederate states!" To this the Nashville Union adds that about the same time "there will be a total eclipse of the confederate states, visible over all creation."

For the Patriot

School Committee's Report—1861-2.

In looking over the School Committee's Report, we are gratified to see that they have taken the long desired step in regard to grading the Primary Schools; which, in other places has been a source of great advantage and improvement to this class of schools. We hope the Committee will follow up the commendable step they have taken until the "old rote" system is abolished.

Heretofore, the memory is almost the only one faculty that has been regarded—and only one element of that, viz: the memory of words; while the memory of the understanding is seldom called into exercise. It has been quite uncommon to hear in any of our schools a single question or remark by the teacher, which had any reference to the understanding of the children. In most cases the reading has been nothing more than a mechanical pronunciation of an unknown tongue to the children, as an explanation of the meaning or application of the words is seldom or never made.

It would be of great service to the Primary Schools if the Committee would prepare a manual on the most approved plan for the use of the schools; then, and not till then, shall we have that kind of teaching, which really educates.

It is time that the old notion was exploded that our Primary Schools are merely nurseries, and the teachers nursery maids, where parents can send their children to be taken care of for a large portion of the day, so that they can enjoy their several avocations according to their various inclinations, without being molested.

It would be well for all those who have an interest in our rudimentary schools, to consider well the just and judicious remarks of the School Committee in regard to this class of our pupils, and give their earnest co-operation to the Committee in carrying out the great improvements so wisely suggested by them.

The subject of having frequent recesses in our public schools, is being agitated by the friends of education in England and this country. The following facts seem to substantiate this important movement, coming as it does from high authority, it is worthy of respect and consideration. A pamphlet has been recently written on education by E. Chadwick, C. B., and published pursuant to an address of the House of Lords. Among the subjects discussed in this pamphlet is the hours of study, upon which he makes the following statements:

"Struck by the frightful disproportion between the powers of childish attention and the length of school hours, he directed questions to many distinguished teachers on this matter. Mr. Donaldson, head master of the Training College of Glasgow, states that the limits of voluntary and intelligent attention are—with children from five to seven years of age, about 15 minutes; from seven to ten years of age, about 20 minutes; from ten to twelve years of age, about 30 minutes; from twelve to sixteen or eighteen years of age, about 30 minutes; and continues, 'I have repeatedly obtained a bright voluntary attention from each of these classes, for five or fifteen minutes more, but at the expense of the succeeding lesson.'"

The Rev. J. A. Morrison, Rector of the same college, speaking on the same subject, says:

"I will undertake to teach a hundred children, in three hours a day, as much as they can by possibility receive; and I hold it to be an axiom in education that no lesson has been given until it has been received; as soon, therefore, as the receiving power of the children is exhausted, any thing given is useless—nay, injurious—inasmuch as you thereby weaken instead of strengthening the receiving power. This ought to be a first principle in education. I doubt if it is seldom acted on."

The truth of these pregnant remarks is made more and more evident by the testimony of all competent witnesses. From Carlisle's picture of German schools, and from all descriptions of the English schools, there is no doubt that in both those countries there is a lamentable want of understanding on the part of scholars of the subject which they attempt to learn. The matter is still worse in France and this country, and it is the prominent vice which pervades the whole American system of education. One failure to secure an understanding of the things which we try to teach is, doubtless, in part owing to the fact that we endeavor to teach too much in a given time, but it is also in part attributable to the circumstance that we waste more than three-fourths of the time trying to impart ideas when the mind of the pupil is not in a condition to receive them. A teacher might as well expend his efforts upon carved wooden images of children as upon scholars where there minds are tired out.

The Board of Education have stated in their former reports, that School Committees were recreant to their trust, who employed teachers that only gave their divided attention to teaching, and transacted other business for gain, independent of instruction. Have we such teachers among us? Let the School Committee speak for themselves through the following extract, taken from their Report in reference to teachers:

"Some are zealous and devoted to their schools; and others give to them a divided attention."

There is one serious stain upon our schools, that is non-attendance. We much regret that the Committee have made no mention of it. In looking over a series of school reports for the last twenty years, we find that the average of non-attendance amounts to a fraction over twenty-four per cent. It seems as if some method should be adopted to remedy this lamentable evil. Can our citizens, parents or guardians, be unaffected by this surprising statement, that twenty four per cent. of the benefits and value of the liberal provision made by the town for the education of their children is wasted? Can tax payers, some of whom are not a little disposed to complain at the extent of their assessment for the support of our schools, be indifferent to the fact, that nearly one quarter of the amount they pay for schooling is utterly lost?

We wish we had more time to make a few remarks upon our miserably ventilated school rooms, where so extensively are sown the seeds of disease and destruction in the constitutions of our children.

Taking the School Committee's Report all in all, it is in our opinion the best that has been issued for years. If the important suggestions of the Committee are energetically enforced, our schools will show a rapid advance in improvement and knowledge, from their present position. The course the Committee have taken in regulating the studies of the High School, so that they shall be more practical, will make this institution deservedly popular.

Annual Report

OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF THE TOWN OF MILTON, ENDING MARCH 31st, 1862.

We have been favored with a copy of this brief but well written Report, of eight and a half octavo pages. Messrs. Samuel Babcock, (Chairman), George Vose, Horace Chapin, Joseph R. Webster, David G. Hobbs, and James L. Kennedy, compose the Committee. It commences very properly, by saying, the amount of money appropriated for schools by the town is $5,500; the amount expended was $5,492 25; the whole number of schools kept through the year has been ten; to wit: six grammar schools and four primary schools. With one exception the teachers have remained the same throughout the year. The character and condition of each school is alluded to—and the praise to merit is not strained. Great pains have been taken in some of the schools with the mode of articulation in reading; so that the defects heretofore pointed out were at the last examination scarcely perceptible. The evil of irregular attendance in all the schools of Milton is deprecated in glowing terms by the Committee, and the attention of the parents is strongly urged for its correction—for who else can correct this universal evil in our schools unless the parents?

A just tribute is paid to the importance of primary schools. "Their influence goes (says the Report) with the scholar through every succeeding stage of his progress in education. If so much is dependent upon the education there received, the impressions there made, the discipline there established, and the work there begun, how false is the idea too generally prevalent that almost any one making any pretensions to learning would answer to teach children. Teachers of young children need to possess a rare combination of talents; a natural aptness in feeling, with a capacity to engage their attention—call their full powers in due order, and to give them the right direction."

The concluding part of the Report, has the following pertinent suggestions:

"There is no position in which an individual can be placed, where greater responsibilities must be assumed, than are devolved upon a teacher of one of our public schools. It is not enough that the literary qualifications of a teacher be deemed sufficient; it is not enough that there should be found an aptness to teach: unrefined manners, uncouth expressions, and negligent habits, will do more to mar the beauty of those minds and characters, which are in the hands of a teacher to fashion and develop, than is usually supposed. Children are creatures of imitation; and, looking upon their teachers as proper examples, they are quite as likely to seize upon and copy, in their acts and manners, the evil as the good. Nothing is more contagious than bad manners. But while the teacher should always endeavor to improve and refine the manners of the scholar, and may exert a most salutary influence in this direction, he cannot wholly change long settled habits and corrupted manners—the result of evil associations, it may be, or of the want of proper home-training."

"There are many things which go to make up a good school. Expect not true success in a school without the aid of a faithful and competent teacher; and not then, unless he has the support and co-operation of parents."

A list of books prescribed by the Committee, and the number of scholars engaged in each branch, including History, Botany and Algebra, are very properly set forth in the Report.

Capt. C. C. Bumpus, of Braintree, a very superior officer now in command of a Company at Fort Warren, is spoken of as the successor of Major F. J. Parker, of the First Battalion, on duty at the Fort.

NEW BUTTER. We have received from Mr. Arey, on Temple Street, a sample of this article, from a new dairy, of a superior quality. Those who would enjoy this luxury in all its freshness and sweetness should give Mr. A. a call. He has also, a large assortment of family groceries of every description.

For the Patriot.

Letter from Co. C, 21st Regt.

NEWBORN, N. CAROLINA, Apr. 24, 1862
To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Thinking perhaps a few lines would not come amiss at this time from the 21st Regiment, M. V., I take the liberty to address you, with the hope that you will publish what I write if you think it worth your while. I suppose you know the conspicuous part taken by the 21st Regiment in the fight at Roanoke Island; also at or near Newbern; therefore, there is no need for me to enter into any of the details of either of those engagements. What I wish to post you up in, is our expedition to Camden—and as the 21st was the only Massachusetts Regiment there, I hope it would be just as acceptable as if all the Massachusetts Regiments that are in the division were there. There were only two Regiments that left Newbern to go on the expedition—the 51st Pennsylvania and the 21st Massachusetts Volunteers. We left Newbern Thursday, April 17, at 5 P. M. on the steamer Northwest, and arrived at Roanoke Island the next afternoon; here we were joined by the 9th New York Regiment, 89th New York, and 6th New Hampshire, making a total of five Regiments. General Reno was in command of the expedition. We made our way up towards Elizabeth City, and landed three miles below the city, Saturday, at 6 A. M.; we then took our line of march through the country; every thing looked beautiful; the houses looked neat, and the niggers fat and lazy. The day was very warm and by the time we had marched sixteen miles—we were pretty well fagged out. By this time we had come up to the enemy, and our battery of four brass howitzers opened fire on them. The enemy were in the woods as usual. The fight lasted about two hours, when the enemy finding themselves too hotly pressed ran away. The fight was not very severe—our loss in killed and wounded, is probably one hundred; the enemy's loss is not known. It was now near dark, so we camped on the battle field for the night; large fires were built, and what there was in the haversacks had to suffer. Every body was tired out, so it was not long before sleep was the order of the night. But about ten o'clock the order came for us to get ready to move back where we started from in thirty minutes. The boys thought this was pretty rough after so hard a day's work—but go we must. Gen. Reno had found out by scouts that the enemy had been reinforced with ten thousand troops from Norfolk, which was only twenty miles distant. We marched back that night, arriving where we landed the morning before at 6 A. M.—thus making the trip in twenty-four hours. This was not very bad, making a march of thirty-two miles—having a sharp fight, and whipping the rebels, all in twenty-four hours. We arrived home in safety, and we are all ready for another hack at the rebels any time our Generals see fit to make another advance.

The health of the troops here, is generally very good. The 21st needs some recruits, which I am in hopes we shall get. I have no more news to write at present. So good bye, and allow me to subscribe myself
Your obedient servant,
A QUINCY BOY.

A TRADITION. The Traveller says that according to tradition, the day of the battle of Lexington, of which Saturday, the 19th of April, was the 87th anniversary, was very hot; the thermometer rose to 85, and the cherry trees were in blossom on that day in the vicinity of Boston, which we believe has since been the case only twice on April 19th: the last time in 1828, 34 years ago. In 1861 the destruction of the flower buds of the cherry and some other fruit trees (probably by the great warmth of the 3d and the severe cold of the 18th of March) was so nearly universal that it may be said the Cherry did not flower at all in Massachusetts.

A Free Lunch will be given at Savil's tonight.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

An English paper states that from returns lately made, it appears that last year the duty on dogs produced $956,750.

The Richmond Examiner learns that the expenditures of the confederate government are at the rate of two or three millions a day, and there is a weekly addition of that sum, to the currency.

In digging the graves of the brave men of the Vermont Third Regiment who fell before Yorktown, the remains of some soldiers of the Revolution were turned up. The brass buttons that had been on their clothing were in good preservation.

The life of a Massachusetts soldier at the battle of Roanoke, was saved by a ball striking and glancing from the miniature of his wife. See what it is to be married!

An army of 600,000 men carry on their shoulders 15,000 tons, and eat 600 tons of provisions, and drink 1200 hogheads of water per day.

Grass-hoppers are early if the season is late. The Machias Republican man has seen a dozen live ones, captured in an open field from which the snow has just gone.

Accounts from the West are variable, the heavy rains in some sections having retarded the planting of wheat. This is true of parts of Illinois, Michigan and Indiana. The fall wheat is every where spoken of in excellent condition.

Three hundred bales of cotton arrived at Cincinnati a few days since, from Nashville.

The steam frigate Roanoke is to have three heavy Ericsson towers, like the Monitor, on deck.

During the first three months of 1862, 32,337 bales of cotton, of the value of three million, two hundred and twenty-seven thousand and nine hundred and four dollars, were received at the port of New York from Europe.

The exports of lumber from New Brunswick during the year 1861, were 16,933 tons hardwood, 41,459 tons pine timber, and 2,751,645 superficial feet of sawn lumber, and the duty collected was $70,772.39.

Thurlow Weed, in a recent letter from Europe, says that the persistence of our volunteers in facing batteries and storming redoubts, under fire, has won the commendation of veteran military officers in Europe, who look for no such results in raw volunteers.

The bombardment of Fort Macon took place on Friday. The battles of Roanoke and Newbern also took place on Friday—Friday is considered by some an unlucky day and no doubt it is to the rebels when General Burnside encounters them.

The farmers of Maryland will raise but small crops this season. The weather has been unfavorable for following and early seeding, and the state of affairs make them uncertain what to do. Most of them have sufficient employment, however, in looking for their runaway negroes.

There is a deed on file in Cambridge, which describes a piece of land as bounded by "stumps and stones, where Daniel Harrington licked William Smith."

Gen. Grant's name is Ulysses S.—"U. S. Grant," being his usual signature. The initials not only stand for United States, but Unconditional Surrender. This is the only condition on which he Grants the slightest quarter to the rebels.

President Lincoln is said to be in capital health, and heavier than when he was inaugurated. His cheerful, hopeful temperament has carried him safely through trials which would have destroyed a more despondent nature.

The latest news from Europe states that both Denmark and Sweden are preparing for war, as there is but little hope of a peaceful settlement of the questions connected with the German Duchies.

A letter from Gorham, (N. H.) says the bear at the Alpine House thawed out on the 16th ult., having lain under the snow five months lacking ten days, the snow being about ten feet deep over his den.

Cucumbers and asparagus have made their appearance in the Cincinnati markets.

TO THE LADIES. Those in want of Hoop Skirts will find a very superior assortment at Caleb Packard's—latest styles selling cheap.

There will be a Free Chowder at the Hancock Saloon this evening.

Deaths.

In this town, at Sailors' Snug Harbor, on the 6th inst., Mr. Adam Herrick, a native of Wenham, aged 76 years.

At Benicia, (Cal.) March 9th, of consumption, Mr. Lott S. Robins, formerly of Cohasset, (Mass.) aged 31 years.

The exports of lumber from New Brunswick during the year 1861, were 16,334 tons of wood, 4,459 tons pine timber, and 2,571,856 superficial feet of sawn lumber, and the duty collected was $70,772.39.

Thurlow Weed, in a recent letter from Europe, says that the persistence of our volunteers in firing batteries and storming redoubts, under fire, has won the commendation of veteran military officers in Europe, who look for no such results in raw volunteers.

The bombardment of Fort Macon took place on Friday. The battles of Roanoke and Newbern also took place on Friday. Friday is considered by some an unlucky day and no doubt it is to the rebels when General Burnside encounters them.

The farmers of Maryland will raise but small crops this season. The weather has been unfavorable for following and early seeding, and the state of affairs make them uncertain what to do. Most of them have sufficient employment, however, in looking for their runaway negroes.

There is a deed on file in Cambridge, which describes a piece of land as bounded by "stumps and stones, where Daniel Harrington killed William Smith."

Gen. Grant's name is Ulysses S.—"U. S. Grant," being his usual signature. The initials not only stand for United States, but Unconditional Surrender. This is the only condition on which he grants the slightest quarter to the rebels.

President Lincoln is said to be in capital health, and heavier than when he was inaugurated. His cheerful, hopeful temperament has carried him safely through trials which would have destroyed a more despondent nature.

The latest news from Europe states that both Denmark and Sweden are preparing for war, as there is but little hope of a peaceful settlement of the questions connected with the German Duchies.

A letter from Gorham, (N. H.) says the bear at the Alpine House thawed out on the 16th ult, having lain under the snow five months lacking ten days, the snow being about ten feet deep over his den.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Break the Yoke.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

From the hill side and the valley,
From the river and the lake,
The brave sons of Freedom, rally;
Their lov'd liberty's at stake—
Round the Nation's flag they rally,
And their onward course they take.

Like the monarch eagle soaring,
E'er he plunges on the foe;
Like an avalanche down pouring,
On the trembling plains below;
Like the mighty ocean roaring,
When the raging whirlwinds blow.

Their dread voice is like the thunder,
When it rolls along the sky;
While the lightning leaps from under Every vengeance cavern'd eye;
And their sword will cut asunder,
All the chains of slavery.

On the banner floating o'er us,
Read the mandate of the Son
Of Him who goes before us—
Him, the great and Mighty One—
Break the yoke—the heav'n's accurs us,
Let the will of God be done.

Shall we leave in shameful fetters,
Hearts that beat to Freedom true;
Shall we prove the mean abettors,
Of a false despotic crew?
No! we'll write in living letters,
Freedom lives to Justice true.

Let the tyrants' yoke be riven;
Let the Nation's voice decree;
Slavery from our land is driv'n—
Sound the trump of jubilee—
Would you win the smiles of heav'n,
Make our peerless Country free.

The Early Blue Bird.

Blue bird! on you leafless tree,
Dost thou carol thus to me,
"Spring is coming! Spring is here!"
Sayst thou so, my birdie dear?
What is that, in misty shroud,
Stealing from the darkened cloud?
Lo! the snow flakes' gathering mound
Lies o'er the whitened ground,
Yet 'twill snow, blithe and clear,
"Spring is coming! Spring is here!"

Strik'st thou not too bold a strain?
Winds are piping o'er the plain,
Clouds are sweeping o'er the sky,
With a black and threatening eye;
Urchins by the frozen rill,
Wrap their mantles closer still;
Yon poor man, with doubtful oar,
Doth he shiver at the cold?
Hath he not a nest of his?
Tell me, birdling—tell me true?

Spring's a maid of mirth and glee,
Rosy wreaths and revelry;
Hast thou wooed some winged love
To a nest in verdant grove?
Sung to her of greenwood bower,
Sunny skies that never lower?
Lured her with a promise fair,
Of a lot that ne'er knows care?
Prithee, bird in coat of blue,
Though a lover—tell her true.

Ask her, if when storms are long,
She can sing a cheerful song?
When the rude winds stalk the tree,
If she'll closer cling to thee?
Then, the blasts that sweep the sky
Unappalled shall pass thee by:
Though thy curtained chamber show
Sittings of untimely snow,
Warn and glad the heart shall be,
Love shall make it Spring for thee.

Our State—Massachusetts.

The riches of the Commonwealth
Are free, strong, minds and hearts of health;
And more to her than gold or grain.
The cunning hand and cultured brain.

For well she keeps her ancient stock,
The stubborn strength of Pilgrim Rock;
And still maintains, with milder laws,
And clearer light, the Good Old Cause.

Nor needs the skeptic's pious hands,
While near her school the church-spire stands,
Nor fears the blinded bigot's rule,
While near the church-spire stands the school.

Anecdotes.

A soldier was sentenced, for deserting, to have his ear cut off. After undergoing the brutal ordeal, he was escorted out of the courtyard to the tune of the rouser's march. He then turned and in mock dignity thus addressed the musicians:
Gentlemen, I thank you, but I have no ear for music.

A fine-looking coal-black negro came into our lines on the Potomac one day recently and reported himself for work.
Where are you from? asked the officer on duty.
Culpepper Court House, sir.

What's the news there?
Nothing, massa, 'cept dar's a man down dar lost a mighty good and valuable nigger de morning, and I reckon he dun lose some more 'foe night!

A mechanic, having taken a new apprentice, awoke him the first morning at a very early hour, by calling out that the family was sitting down to the table.
Thank you, said the boy, as he turned over in bed to adjust himself for a new nap, thank you, but I never eat anything during the night.

A young lady at Niagara was heard to exclaim: "What an elegant trimming that rainbow would make for a white lace overdress."

FOR THE PREVENTION AND CURE OF
Consumption, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Marasmus, Loss of Appetite, Neuralgia, Female Complaints, and all Disorders of the Nervous and Blood Systems.

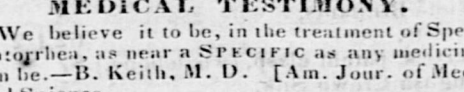

This Remedy has acquired a great reputation for most EXTRAORDINARY CURES in ALL STAGES OF CONSUMPTION. It is recommended by many thousand Physicians in the United States and Europe, having been used with results UNPARALLELED in the ANNALS OF MEDICINE.

The Hypophosphites have a two fold and specific action on the one hand, increasing the principle which CONSTITUTES NERVOUS ENERGY, and on the other, being the most POWERFUL BLOOD GENERATING AGENTS KNOWN. In cases of Nervous Debility, or Prostration of the Vital Powers, from any cause, this Remedy has no superior.

"Winchester's Genuine Preparation" is the only reliable form of the Hypophosphites, and after the Original Formula of Dr. Churchill.

INQUIRE FOR AND USE NO OTHER!
A Fair Trial is a Certain Cure.

PRICES—In 7 oz Bottles, $1.—Six Bottles, $5. In 16 oz Bottles, $2.—Three for $5. Circulars gratis. Sold by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.

A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, and General Irritability in either sex.

This Malady, the terrible consequences of which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of Life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and sinks the unhappy victim into imbecility and a permanent grave. From one to six boxes of this Specific Pill are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most Aggravated Cases, whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse or Excesses.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Spermatorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]
I have found them all that could be desired.—Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years. I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E. P. DICKER, M. D.

This is not a Homoeopathic Remedy, nor is there any other deleterious ingredient combined with it.
PRICE—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5, by mail, prepaid. For sale by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.

Spring Weather.

It shines, it rains,
Then shines again,
What does the weather mean?
It hangs in doubt,
The sun comes out,
With drizzling mist between.

Now dark, now light,
Like day, like night,
'Tis changing, fickle weather;
It mists at times,
Then rains or shines,
And sometimes all together.

O! now I see,
It is like me,
A wide head and a duce,
I fret, I smile,
Then cry awhile,
And sometimes all at once.

I pout, I pet,
Well pleased I get,
Both diligent and lazy;
In my own way,
Is such a day,
When rainy, shiny, hazy.

Straps.

STAY ON THE EYELID. An exchange
says: "Put a teaspoonful of black tea in a small bag; pour on it enough boiling water to moisten it, then put it on the eye, pretty warm. Keep it on all night, and in the morning the eye will most likely be gone; if not, a second application is certain to remove it."

On hearing the remark that the world is full of change, a suffering editor said he could hardly make up his mind to believe it,
so little found its way into his pocket.

An Ohio Dutchman, in view of the new and stringent law against profanity, has very cautiously addressed a letter to his brother
at "Amsterdam."

He who is passionate and hasty, is generally honest. It is your cold, dissolving hypocrite of whom you should beware. There is no deception in a bull-dog. It is only the cur that sneaks up and bites you when your back is turned.

In the olden time they had but seven wise
men. Now, take men at their own valuation, and you would find half that number fools.

If a young mechanic, or farmer, or clerk,
marries a poor girl who has not been taught
the rudiments of cooking, washing, ironing, mending clothes, or darning stockings, but
who is an expert at playing the piano, working on canvas, crocheting, or spinning street yarn, you may be almost certain that that young couple will not be apt to make their fortune, but ten to one will live and die
in poverty.

A miser having heard a charity sermon,
exclaimed, "This sermon strongly presents the necessity of alms; I have a mind to turn beggar."

The wisest man is generally he who thinks himself the least so.

One of the sweetest offices of memory is to scatter flowers on the graves of the dead.

Why are seeds when sown like gate-posts?
They are planted in the earth to prop a gate.

A lady must think she has something valuable in her head, if we may judge from the number of locks she keeps upon it.

Our forefathers preached golden sermons
from wooden pulpits. Now a days it is reversed. People go to church to see the world, and hear wooden sermons from golden pulpits.

People who like so much to talk their mind, should sometimes try to mind their tongue.

An Irishman, being asked in court for his marriage certificate, showed a big scar on his head, about the shape of a shovel, which was satisfactory.

Bullets can sing and whistle, but they are not very pleasant musicians.

Every woman's rights are marriage-rites;
every traitor's rights, funeral-rites.

A little girl hearing it remarked that all people had once been children, artlessly inquired:

Who took care of the babies?

The idea which any one has of God is a sure criterion of his spiritual state.

Miscellaneous.

Home—the Residence.

Another thing which should be thought of
in seclusion. The home ought not to be open to the casual eye, or the secrets of it liable
to the prying or the propinquity of neighbors.
It ought to stand apart, neither subject to overlooking or overhauling. Every family should be brought up distinct from every other family. The house should be within an enclosure sacred to it. The blessed sun and air should not be cut off from it by the intervening of any other houses. This is the necessity of cities, which are full of houses crowded together in part remedies; but the cramped homes of the city never come up to the full idea of home. A home should have a yard and a garden. I do not hesitate to say that, as a matter of dollars and cents,
it would be better in the end for the individual speculator to lay out each house with a fair garden spot, place it on some general line, employ an architect as well as a carpenter and mason, spend something on shrubs
and trees; in short, make a home of it—
then to cover all his land with wood and mortar; while it would add to the character of the town, introduce a high order of population, increase taxable property, and do for the place what men in vain look to churches,
schools, horse-railroads, gas, and water to do.
The man of thought and intelligence, who wants a permanent abode for his family, will look to the house before he will these other things. If he cannot find a home, these will be a small temptation.

Besides, to the well ordering of a family,
privacy is absolutely essential. What chance is there for that, where houses stand so near that, through the open windows, inevitably,
you hear much that is said, or through a thin
partition comes the thrumming of a piano,
the scolding of the mother, the crying of the child, the entrance and exit of every guest?
This sort of living is only too common. It is a necessity many submit to because they can do no better, while it is a submission which is likely to act unfavorably upon the rising generation, who must get their idea of home
from the homes in which they are nurtured.
We all know very well that the presence of a guest or boarder, breaks up much of the peculiar life of home, interrupts its free and steady flow. We all know that the vacation
we spend at boarding-places is too apt to interfere with home precepts and discipline—sow tares amidst our wheat. How much greater the harm which comes from always living so near to others, so exposed front and rear, and both sides, that inevitably, in spite of you, the daily life of yourself and your children is subject to influences you would gladly be rid of. I do not believe a truly independent home possible—a home standing on its own basis and supported by its own principles as every home should—so long as houses are built as a very large majority of those in our neighborhood are. Nor as a matter of pride or mere feeling, but as a matter of principle, I would not occupy a house where I was not or could not be alone. Nearness to one's business, or anything that could be urged in favor of such a residence, would not weigh as a feather with what could be urged against.

I know there are many persons, even fathers and mothers, who will not sympathize with this at all. They would rather live in public. They want to see and hear what is going on. They don't care anything about yards and gardens. All that can be said of such, is that they are falling into the great American current which sets against the home, whose top folly is seen in the life of the New York hotel. The man who has forgotten the free range his childhood loved
over the old farm, or through the pastures,
and refuses for his children even a garden
or a yard—the man who prefers his children should be educated in the street, or turns them to play in some other man's grounds—
the man who forgets how much more of good outdoors teaches, in the earlier years, than the costlier parlor can, who sacrifices his children's good to his desire for a wider range indoors, or a more costly abode, is traitor to the best memories of his own life, and working against the best life of his child. Continent with some conditions is only a proof
how far man may fall from his true position,
yet be unconscious of his fall. The contented slave is the saddest evidence of the atrocity
of slavery.

Permanence, utility and seclusion, are the things a man should specially seek in the house he is to call home. In its exterior it should violate no law of taste, while it should be suggestive of the character and position of the inmates. You go through the streets of a city or town, and you inevitably draw your inferences of the inhabitants from their houses. If you are hungry, or have lost your way, you select the house at which you will
ask. Even organ grinders and pedlars study

the outside before venturing within the gate.
Some houses suggest vanity, pride, meanness, as surely as some suggest home. I remember that, pacing backward and forward through Fifth Avenue in New York, and marveling at the prodigality of the cost of that double row of sand-stone palaces, I felt the chill of that splendor striking through me
till I came upon a square, sober, though evidently costly house, and I said, this looks like a home. Tasked the owner, and from his well-known name I knew that I was right. In the landscape it is the home that satisfies and pleases. Not the abode of wealth or of show, but the abode over which that nameless grace of home is thrown. I have seen that charm embracing as a help the little one-story, unpainted wayside cottage,
equally with the glorious old gambrel-roof
homestead beneath the trees, to me the type and symbol of a New England home. I have seen it invest the home of poverty, while refusing to linger about the abode of pride—a something which seems to radiate from the life within, through shingle and clapboard,
as the life of the soul speaks in the outward expression of the face and the form.

As a part of the home, a single word of its furnishing. In proportion as you introduce splendor, you banish love. No child can grow up to love a house so adorned that he associates with it the perpetual warning to be careful of his hands and feet, all the freedom of whose motions must be checked
by the cost of the carpet and the material of the sofa. If there must be a company-room, to be kept sacred from the intrusion of the child's foot, then let there be special pains that there be some room sacred to childhood—the wild domain of disorder and frolic, where things may be banged and broken according to the laws of an innocent misrule, without fear of rebuke.

The furniture of home should be for use,
and every adorning subsidiary to propriety and taste. The paper upon the wall, the casts, engravings, ornaments, should all have reference to home culture; not stiff or ugly or over many, but such as living with the child, insensibly educate and elevate his taste, as living with virtue insensibly educates and elevates his character. A house that chills a stranger with the idea that its furnishings are to be seen and not used,
which reveals no trace of childhood, or only childhood prematurely prim; rooms stiff and bristling and suggestive of the upholstery—is no home. How gladly one escapes from all this drear array of show to some cozy,
free-and-easy comfortable room, whose furniture bears the marks of use; where there are no angles and straight lines, but the unstudied order, or the equally unstudied disorder, of a free and happy household.

The idea of a home cannot be independent of the house. I do not deny that there are homes where there is no advantage of the house; still, to the perfect idea of the perfect home the house is essential; not a house of cost, but a house appropriate to the condition of the occupant, a permanent, useful, secluded abode; a place not for the guest, but for the family—not for the adult merely, but for the child. The idea every man should have in building, ought to be to build a home, whether the house be for his own occupancy or to let. It is time there was a little more humanity in landlords, and that public opinion rebuked this coming of money at the expense of the finer sentiments of the heart and home. We have had a precious inheritance in the old homes of New England. Our fathers builded better than they knew when they erected them, and he shall be the benefactor of his children who shall, under altered circumstances of time and place, transmit to his children a true home—and he shall stand highest among architects who shall strive, not to build the churches, the capitols, the monuments of the nation, but who shall give himself to the skilful planning of homes for the people—a work Downing had so nobly begun when he was suddenly taken away. The nations of antiquity, whose marvels of learning and of art still excite the admiration and wonder of the world, had no homes; there are no homes where the Bedouin slumbers in the shadow of the pyramids, or fuddlers his steed
amid the crumbling magnificence of a long-buried despotism; the gay and glittering Frenchman has no word for home; while the cities of the Continent, to whose monuments
the rich, the restless and the wise make pilgrimages, have no homes—the wretched hovel alternating with the palace and the ruin. They may do to admire as works of art, but let us have to show the traveller, to bless ourselves, to help our children—a land
of homes, speaking to the eye of the stranger and dear to the heart of the dweller.

Peas not an Exhausting Crop.

Notwithstanding there is a large amount of material removed from the field when a crop of peas is carried away from it, still the soil will not be exhausted or impoverished

by a crop of peas, as by some other crop in which a smaller amount of matter is removed in the crops; because peas are more like a green crop, turnips, or beets, and the large thick leaves take up a good share of the nourishment which produces the crop from atmosphere, instead of from the soil. For this reason, a crop of peas is one of the most profitable crops that a farmer can raise.

Bursting of an Iceberg.

A few years ago, a French man-of-war laid at anchor in Temple Bay; the younger officers resolved on amusing themselves with an iceberg, a mile or more distant in the Strait. They made sumptuous preparations for a picnic upon the very top of it, the mysteries of which they were curious to see. All warnings of the brown and simple fishermen
in the cars of the smartly dressed gentlemen who had seen the world, were quite idle. It was a bright summer morning, and the jolly boat, with a showy flag, went off to the berg.
By twelve o'clock the colors were flying from the ice turrets, and the wild midshipmen were shouting from its walls. For two hours or so they hacked and clambered upon
the crystal palace, frolicked and feasted, drank wine to the king and ladies, and laughed
at the thought of peril where all was fixed and solid. As if in amazement at such rash-ness, the grim Alp of the sea made neither sound nor motion. A profound stillness watched on his shining pinnacles, and hearkened in the blue shadows of the caves. When,
like thoughtless children, they had played themselves weary, the old slabaster of Greenland mercifully suffered them to gather up their toys and go down to their cockle of a boat and flee away. As if the time and distance were measured, he waited until they could see it and live; when, as if his heart
had been a volcanic fire, he burst with awful thunders, and filled the surrounding waters with his ruins. A more astonished little party seldom came home to tell the story of their paine. It was their first and their last day of amusement with an iceberg.

Controlling Her Temper.

The husband of a lady of a fiery temper says, before marriage he was warned of her disposition. To test the accuracy of the information, one evening, as he sat next to her at dinner, he managed cleverly to jog the servant's elbow, as a plate of mock turtle soup was offered her, which, of course, was upset over the young lady's white dress of tulle lace. No complaint, not even a frown being evinced, the delighted suitor concluded that what he had heard was a mistake, and the marriage took place. But soon the lady's character displayed itself, as is always the case after marriage, it never before; and his wife, like a human Stromboli, was subject to her eruptions every ten minutes upon an average. How is it, my dear, said the husband, that having such a bad temper, you stood the ordeal by soup so well. Why, said the lady, I may have appeared indifferent at the time; but, good heavens! you should only have gone into my room a little afterward, and seen the marks of my teeth on the bed post! from that time forth the husband never provoked his wife. He feared her teeth.

Lucifer Matches.

Many of our readers, no doubt, remember the old-fashioned tinder box, and the way in which, by striking flint and steel, a spark was caught in the tinder, and after two, three, or even five minutes, a light was obtained.—
Among the many improvements of the present time, not the least useful is the Lucifer match; expeditious, cleanly, cheap—and with care, safe.

But is the lucifer-box used with care?
We fear we must answer no. The luciferbox stands on the mantle shelf in many houses
where the children can get at it, and they often amuse themselves with striking lights,
and the consequence is, that they not only set fire to themselves and perish by the most terrible of deaths, but they also imperil the lives and property of others. A farmer in Kent, had his entire rick-yard, and farm
burned down, and was completely ruined, entirely through some children playing with lucifer matches. But the evil is by no means confined to children. The working-man carries lucifer matches in his pocket to light his pipe. He enters the workshop, throws off his jacket, and the mere act of throwing it, or anything striking against his pocket is enough to cause the combustion of the matches; and if his jacket only were burned,
it would be the just punishment of his carelessness; but, unfortunately, a fire once kindled, no one knows where it may end.
And there is no doubt in the minds of those best able to form a judgment, that the fires
caused by the careless use of lucifer matches
cost the insurance offices many thousands
a year—to say nothing of the lost lives that cannot be restored or compensated—and the rain that comes to multitudes of poor people who are not insured.

In most cases, there is the greatest mystery as to how fires originate, but all agree that the unhealthy and expensive custom of smoking, and the consequent frequent and careless use of the lucifer match has had much to do with the terrible increase of fires.

Death by fire was once a rare calamity—
it is now one of our most frequent occurrences. We are paying dear, indeed, for our advancement in art and science, when one of the most useful implements of modern civilization has become, by abuse, a frequent employer of death. Let us resolve to be careful in the use of the lucifer match. Let all make conscience of keeping lucifers in a safe place, using them at a right time, and for a right purpose.

Proverbs Worth Preserving.

Hasty people drink the wine of life scald-
ing hot.
Death is the only master who takes his servants without a character.
Content is the mother of good digestion.
When pride and poverty marry together
their children are want and crime.
Where hard work kills two, idleness kills
a hundred men.
Folly and pride walk side by side.
He that borrows binds himself with his neighbor's rope.
He that is too good for good advice is too
good for his neighbor's company.

The Mother's Affection.

The most efficient and important influence that woman can shed on society, is her right to the exercise of that maternal care, which forms the primitive and most indelible species of early education. Who is it that protects the child when young, and watches over its helpless years with the seeming be-nignity of an angelic form? The mother.
Who is it that holds the sceptre of guidance and restraint over the wild passions and tender affections of the child? The mother.

When the resplendent laurels of fame are bound round the temples of the man, what eye so bright as the mother's? what heart
throbs with such lively and joyous emotion?
The mother casts a charm around her, emanating solely from her personal purity, that forms the broadest corner stone on which civil society depends for all its good results,
its comforts and improvements.

No circumstance, no earthly changes can destroy the mother's love; 'tis of a celestial nature and origin—it springs when first the child's career in life is begun, and grows as the child advances to mature life. It does not to morrow—after living one day, but,
from the earliest ages till now, the mother's love has been unchanging, independent, a blest and noble passion, one that will never,
never perish, until the vital principle in man
is extinguished.

The first soft accent, the half-formed lisping,
the dear idea that softly plays and spar-kles upon the opening mind, is the sweet appellation of "MY MOTHER." In every age and clime, the records of history abound with instances of motherly kindness. When amid the frowns of the regardless world, when the appealing hand of sickness and despair is attended with extreme poverty, the mother,
though her cup of misery be full and overflowing, stifles the secret agony of her own bosom, and whispers consolation to the heart of the suffering child. When sickness preys upon the fragile form—who can soothe its sorrow—but she who sings sweet lullaby,
and cradles the infant on her warm and beating breast: no pillow so soft and quieting.

The father provides for his child, protects
it, loves it—but his love is of a calmer nature; it descends not to those minutiae of tender affections, those watchful and anxious cares for the minor gratifications of existence
which the mother, perhaps, from her refined and delicate sensibility, can more readily and justly appreciate. Though the wide spreading billows roar between the parent
and the child—though he be in a distant land, living in the expectancy, if not eternal,
of a prolonged separation—yet the pious
prayer of the mother is offered at the throne
of mercy, for his preservation, his safe return to the home of maternal joy.

It is in his absence that the impression, instilled into his mind by his mother's fond and watchful love, stands forth as his banner to defend him from error; her whispered injunctions, her soft admonitions seem then as if they were written in golden letters upon his memory with the refulgent sun-beam.

Since it is woman that forms the basis of the youthful mind, how important it is that more attention should be paid to female education! Woman has often been considered a mere cipher; but now that the flowers of literature have been transplanted into the valley of ignorance, she rises, partially, from obscurity, and shines in a lovelier light. May its purity increase with its splendor, till our country, from the North to the South, is rich and radiant, with the flowers of virtue and intelligence, which have sprung beneath the judicious care of maternal affection.

Be Happy as You Are.

Wife, and mother, are you tired, and out of patience with your husband's and children's demand upon your time and attention?
Are you tempted to speak out angry feelings
to that faithful, but, perhaps, sometimes heedless or exacting husband of yours? or to scold and fret to those sweet and beautiful ones? Do you groan, and say, "What a fool I was to leave my father, where I lived in ease and in quiet." Are you, by reason of the care and weariness of body which wifehood and motherhood must bring, forgetful of and ungrateful for their comforts and their joys? O wife and mother, what if a stroke should snuff your husband, and lay him low? what if your children should be snatched from your arms, and from your bosom? what if there were no true, strong heart for you to lean upon? what if there were no soft little innocents, to nestle in your arms, and to love you, and to receive your love? How would it be with you then?

Be patient and kind, dear wife. Be unweary-ing, and long suffering, dear mother, for you know not how long you may tarry with them.
Let there be nothing for you to remember,
which will wring your heart with remorse if they leave you alone. Let there be nothing for them but sweetness and love unutterable,
if you are called to leave them by the way. Be patient, be painful, be tender of them all; for Death will step, sooner or later, between them and you. And oh! what would you do if you should be doomed to sit solitary and forsaken through years and years? Be happy as you are, even with all your trials; for, believe me, thou wife of a loving and pure husband, there is no lot in life so blessed as thine own.

Wakeful Hours.

There is something beautiful as sublime in the hush of midnight. The myriads of quiet sleepers, lying down each their life burden,
insensible alike to joy or sorrow; helpless
alike—the strong as the infant—and over all the sleepers lies, which even the world has
can have never lost sight of one pillowed head. Thoughts like these come to us in our wakeful night hours, with an almost painful intensity. Then eternity only seems real, and every day like a fable. But morning comes, and the air and hum of life chase them away, as the warm sun dries up the dew-drops, while like these thoughts performed their reviving mission, ere they departed.

Care of Little Things.

Mr. Irving in his life of Washington, says, that great and good man was careful of small things, of his household as closely as upon
the most important concerns of the Republic.
The Merchants' Magazine, in speaking of the facts, says:

"No man ever made a fortune or rose to greatness in any department, without being careful of small things. As the beach is composed of grains of sand, as the ocean is of drops of water, so the millionaire's is the aggregation of the profits of single adventures, often inconsiderable in amount. Every eminent merchant, from Girard and Astor down, has been noted for his attention to details. Few distinguished lawyers have ever practised in the courts who were not remarkable for a similar characteristic. It was one of the peculiarities of the first Napoleon's mind. The most petty details of his household expenses, the most trivial facts relative to his troops, were in his opinion, as worthy of his attention as the tactics of a battle, the revising of a code. Demosthenes, the world's unrivaled orator, was as anxious about his gesture or intonations as about the texture of his arguments or grandeur of his words.—
Before such great examples, and in the very highest walks of intellect, how contemptible
the conduct of the small minds who can despise small things.

A Spy of the Revolution.

In the year 1776, when Gov. Clinton resided in Albany, there

Madam Clinton, with the ready tact of women of those troublous days, went quietly into the kitchen and ordered hot coffee to be immediately made, and added to it a strong dose of tartar emetic; the stranger, delighted with the smoking beverage, partook freely of it, and Mrs. Clinton soon had the satisfaction of seeing it produce the desired result. True to scripture, "out of his own mouth was he condemned." A silver bullet appeared, which, upon examination, was unscrewed, and found to contain an important despatch from Burgoyne. He was tried, condemned, and executed, and the bullet is still preserved in the family.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 17th, 1862.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

THE HORSE RAILROAD has done a sweeping business this week; the current of public travel appears to have set that way. The people have taken the matter up in earnest, and seem determined that an enterprise in which they have so deep an interest shall not fail for want of support.

The hourly arrival and departure of cars has given a lively aspect to affairs; and no doubt will have a happy influence on business. For the money thus expended will remain at home, and through numerous channels, much of it will be returned to the community and be kept in circulation—this will stop an important leakage, and keep our finances in better trim.

The Directors have been active in perfecting their arrangements, and every thing now moves like clock-work. By coaches, a connection has been formed with the Point, Weymouth and Braintree.

The Sunday arrangement is another important achievement accomplished by this enterprise. There is now no interruption in our communication with Boston. The citizen can pass the Sabbath there, if he chooses, without being subjected to an exorbitant monopoly; and the denizens of that crowded north of human beings, have the opportunity of returning the visit, and in a cheap and pleasant ride, breathe the pure air of heaven, and luxuriate in the beauties to be found in rural districts at this season of the year. It was a desideratum in modern travel, long felt, and we were gratified to see that on its first trial, it was so well sustained.

ON FURLOUGH. We yesterday had the pleasure of seeing our young friend, John Whitehead, a volunteer from this town in the 24th New Hampshire Regiment. He is at home on furlough, having been wounded in the left shoulder at the battle of Williamsburg. After the general engagement was over, a party of rebel soldiers advanced under a flag of truce, and fired upon the regiment, killing and wounding quite a number. He reports that during his stay at Yorktown and Williamsburg he had the pleasure of meeting a large number of Quincy boys, including Co. K, 18th Mass. Regiment, who were in very good health, and if we are to judge from his looks, they must be a hearty and tough looking crowd.

DROWNED. We learn that Mr. Charles H. Severens, of Dorchester, having gone down the harbor in a boat, on the 5th instant, was lost in the severe squalls which occurred on that day. His body was found near Hull. His age was 54 years and 8 months.

BRAINTREE SOLDIER KILLED AT WILLIAMSBURG. We learn of the death of Alfred E. Parker, a son of Mr. Thomas Parker of Braintree, who was in the 1st Reg., Excelsior Brigade, which suffered so severely at the battle of Williamsburg, (Va.). Nearly all of Parker's company were killed, wounded or taken prisoners. Young Parker and Capt. Bugbee, of Boston, fell at the same time, and were both buried in one grave.

Two sons of Mr. Parker, of Braintree, who were in the same company, were taken prisoners by the rebels.

QUITE SUCCESSFUL. We learn from some of our prominent citizens in this place that they are taking Dr. Clarke's medicine with good success. If this is so, in this world of affliction, we cannot do otherwise than advise those that are suffering to try his medicine. By referring to our advertisements his office hours can be ascertained.

RETURNED. Sergt. M. M. C. Chubbuck, son of the late Wm. Chubbuck of this place, arrived in town on Wednesday last. He belongs to the 6th Mass. Battery, but took care of a lot of sick and wounded soldiers sent North; and then obtained leave of absence for twenty days.

FIRE AT WEYMOUTH LANDING. The large stable, sheds and bowling alleys connected with A. B. Wales' hotel at Weymouth Landing, caught fire Tuesday night at 11 o'clock and were wholly consumed. The horses were all removed in safety. The loss will probably amount to about $3000.

Friend Savil will give another Free Lunch at his Bowling Saloon, this evening.

Weymouth.

By the courtesy of the Town Clerk of Weymouth, we have received the Report of the Selectmen, embracing the annual statements of the Overseers of the Poor, Surveyors of Highways and School Committee of our sister town. The expenditures for schools were $8,920 88; roads $4,335 76; pay of Town Officers $2,247 69; Town Poor $3,553 12; Miscellaneous $8,353 89; Weymouth Union Guards $852 78; aid to Volunteers $15,307 39; expenditures over receipts the past year $10,550 65. The bills of many town officers seem large; the three Assessors received $1,046 50 for their services; the bill of one of the School Committee was $892 12; and two others each $74 25 and $62 45; the average number of Paupers at the Almshouse was twenty-four—expense of each per week $1 62; expense of the Poor out of the Almshouse was $1,562 55.

The Report of the School Committee is interesting. At the commencement of the year, the Committee selected five of their number to examine teachers and superintend the Schools with power to appoint others to assist. The Grammar, Intermediate and mixed Schools were kept ten months; the Primary nine, and the sub-Primary eight months; a uniform price to teachers of the same grade was paid. The schools of each district were assigned to special Committees for supervision and direction. There are eleven school districts in this town, each having a Prudential Committee. The literary character, progress and discipline of each school is commented upon by the General School Committee. As a general thing, the schools appear prosperous and the teachers faithful and successful. The High School at South Weymouth, under the charge of Mr. A. H. Davis, a graduate of Bowdoin College, is spoken of with much praise. The average number of pupils through the year was in attendance thirty-nine; this is too small by half for a school of this importance in the large town of Weymouth.

FOREIGN INTERVENTION. Some of the European papers state that England and France "think seriously" of interference in American matters. Our private opinion is that they had better mind their own business and let ours alone or we will take measures to make them "think seriously" of their own precarious position.

THE REBELLION. Every day brings us news of the success of the loyal Americans over their deluded brethren. We rejoice at the triumphs which attend our arms, and we feel that the more overwhelming they are, the sooner this unhappy strife will cease. More than all, do we rejoice, that the capture of New Orleans and Norfolk was made without shedding the blood of friend or foe. To obtain these latter successes, however, there has been heretofore severe engagements. Our people have tried every conciliatory way to obtain peace, but failing in that, they must conquer it.

NEW WORKS. We have received the first number of a new and interesting work, entitled "Ballads of the War." This number contains one of the first great events of the war, entitled "The march to the Capitol," illustrating the departure of the 6th Mass. Regiment, and their passage through Baltimore, and is printed in a neat and tasteful manner. Price 25 cents each number, or $3 a year. We also received a copy of another new work, entitled "Army and Navy Melodies," which contains a large and well selected variety of hymns, adapted to the use of the army or navy. A portion of the tunes and many of the hymns were composed expressly for this work.

Both of the above named works can be obtained of A. Williams & Co., book-sellers and publishers, 100 Washington street, Boston.

ECONOMY IN HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES. A contemporary urges the practice of economy in household expenses, and adds: "To save twenty dollars on every hundred in our annual expenses for dry goods, is a consideration worthy of attention in these hard times. The next question is, how are we to know how this economy can be practised—where can goods be procured at so great an advantage? We will tell you: AT THOSE STORES THAT ADVERTISE MOST EXTENSIVELY IN THE NEWSPAPERS. Why so? Because they are kept by merchants of enterprise."

THE "JOB TERRY." One of the volunteers from this town, in a recent letter mentions having stepped aboard the locomotive "Job Terry," while at Warrrentown Junction, (Va.). This iron horse was a well known courser on the Old Colony & Fall River Railroad, and for years performed "special" service between North Bridgewater and Boston.—N. Bridgewater Gaz.

FIRE IN NORTH BRIDGEWATER. About five o'clock on Wednesday morning, the barn, together with three cows, a heifer, and the wood house belonging to Mr. Galen Warren, were destroyed by fire. The dwelling house was injured. Loss estimated at about $1000.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MAY 14, 1862.

The work to maintain the integrity of the Union by force of arms, goes bravely on. One year ago the 12th of April, occurred the first battle of the war. Ten thousand rebels opened fire upon seventy loyal soldiers in Fort Sumter. Since then, there has been fought some thirty battles, besides any number of skirmishes. Of the actions occurring in 1861, eight were defeats to us and six victories. But since New Year's day, the list shows an uninterrupted series of splendid successes for the Union arms. And the crowning glory of triumph so far, was the capture of Norfolk; this, with the taking of Richmond, which we soon shall accomplish, if not done already, about closes up the rebellion. The war is to be short. According to Gen. Scott's predictions, we shall have conquered a peace by the first of July next.

We never before witnessed such exuberance of joy among the citizens of Boston as was manifested on Sunday and Monday, and a happy influence is felt on business. Our material prospects brighten every moment. Mercantile affairs are rapidly increasing in importance; and if continued as they now are to a great extent on a cash principle, the basis of business will be sound and sure. The rebellion which is soon to be successfully overcome, has been a fiery ordeal to test the strength and integrity of the government of freedom, founded by our forefathers. We have shown to the world, that our republican institutions, based upon popular sovereignty, or the inherent will of the people, can stand like the principles of truth on an eternal rock. Crowned heads and the aristocracy of Europe, have in our struggles with the traitorous South, desired and still desire that our great experiment of free institutions might prove a failure. We have disappointed them, and have exhibited to all nations of the earth, that a government of the largest liberty has the most powerful elements of strength to resist disintegrations. The rubicon is passed and our liberties are safe forever.

The city is unusually lively. There is quite an influx of strangers; and merchants are here from Kentucky and Tennessee for the purchase of goods. To this class of customers our traders will be wary, and as a general rule adopt the cash principle. After the subjugation of the rebellion, the Southern trade will hardly be worth seeking. The Southerners have taught us to the tune of many millions, how easily they can repudiate their debts. Hereafter, let the motto be with Northerners to all coming as purchasers from the land of Dixie, pay to day and trust to-morrow.

By a late law of the State, May training with the Volunteer Militia is revived. The common to-morrow will present quite a la militaire spectacle and the bands will discourse much sweet music. Hear what last evening's Traveller says of finance: "State Street is as bright as a button and merry as a cricket. Capital is steadily increasing, and the rates of interest for discounts and loans are becoming small by degrees and unprofitably less from week to week. The natural consequence is, that the capitalists, bankers, banks and other reservoirs of currency, are seeking employment for their idle funds by making investments in the six per cents, seven thirtieths and five twentieths of the Government issues. The more humble buyers are turning their attention to bank, factory, insurance, railroad, land and mining stocks. The public creditors are receiving constant remittances of legal tender notes, and the deposits with the assistant treasurers are at once paid out again, keeping the circulating medium constantly afloat." Mirabile dictu.

Epistolary.

The following letter of acknowledgment for a box of articles, has been received by Mrs. Arey.

CAMP LEE, NEAR NEWBURN, MAY 2, 1862.
TO THE LADIES' ASSOCIATION OF QUINCY. When I thank you for myself, feel assured that you also receive the heartfelt thanks of the Quincy Boys in the Massachusetts 24th. Your gifts prove that while away endeavoring to do our duty, we are not forgotten by those who will with our own dear ones, soon enjoy the blessings of a peaceful home, in a country as free as it is proving itself to be powerful. Respectfully yours, SERGEANT WM. S. WILBUR.

FLOOR of a superior brand, for sale by J. Arey on Temple street, to which we would call particular attention; also, a large and general assortment of family groceries, which are offered at the lowest market prices.

FIRE IN BRAINTREE. We learn that there was a slight fire at Mr. Alva Morrison's factory, on Wednesday evening last, but it was discovered and put out before much damage was done.

Mr. Heath will preach to-morrow morning upon the Wedge of Gold. Subject in the afternoon, Free Agency and its relation to Universal Salvation.

For the Patriot.
Army Intelligence.CAMP NEAR WEST POINT, (VA.) MAY 10.
To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Since my last letter to you, many changes have taken place in the army of the Potomac. We have been exposed to the weather; marches were long and fatiguing, and sometimes we did not get our regular allowance of rations; the roads were narrow and muddy, and it was impossible for the teams to get along as fast as we marched. After we arrived in front of Yorktown, we received our supplies regularly, although the roads had not improved much the first two weeks. But before we were there three weeks, we made roads in all directions; built bridges, dug entrenchments, mounted mortars and siege guns—in fact, we worked day and night, until the rebels left. A few days before they (the rebels) vacated Yorktown, they shelled our camp in all directions; only a few of their shells burst, and they were without effect.

It is of no use for me to write about our engagement, or the evacuation of Yorktown. I presume you know more about it than we do, as we do not know what takes place in our Brigade. However, we know that we drove them from Williamsburg, and twenty miles farther towards Richmond; and my impression is that before you receive this letter, that they will be driven into Richmond and out again. Because they will not and cannot stand before the united and firm army of McClellan.

They had the advantage of us for the last three or four days—but we have taken that advantage away from them—although it cost a number of lives. We have driven them from their strong holds and hiding places, and from the woods and swamps, which they have been concealed by. And now we have got them where we want them—in the open field—running like a fox from the hounds—and the impression of many is, that we will keep them running, until secession is run out of their veins, and washed into the Gulf of Mexico.

The weather is very pleasant now, and every thing looks prosperous. Our troops are in good health, and in fine spirits. There is not a time since I have been in the service that there is less on the sick list or in the hospital than at the present time.

JAMES J. DOWD.

For the Patriot.
The School Committee's Report.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:
In looking over your paper of May 10th, I found an article signed B.

B. evidently desires to puff the School Committee's Report, while at the same time he has a fling at some of our teachers who are supposed to give a "divided" attention to their schools. B's. experience has not taught him, and perhaps never will teach him, that the "divided" attention of some men of talent and ability is worth more to a school than the undivided attention of some men who are on the lowest verge of mediocrity.

He politely calls our Primary School Teachers nursing maids, and accuses them of teaching by the "old rote" system. It is evident that he knows nothing at all about them, or he would not get so far from the truth.

He travels to England and Germany to show that the schools of Quincy are in a very poor state, and then with another puff of the School Report ends his touching tale. Verily a prophet is in our midst. P.

COMPLETED. The model tenement house, built in accordance with the will of the late Abbot Lawrence, is now completed and fully occupied. It is situated not far from Boston Common, and is five stories high. The structure is of brick, with granite and freestone trimmings. There are four tenements on each floor, each with a like number of rooms, and all the necessary closets. The health and comfort of the occupants are studied in every arrangement. The rent varies from $2 50 to $3 25 per week. The tenants belong to the respectable middle class, and are so anxious to remain that they use the property with great care, and pay the rent in advance with remarkable promptitude. The entire cost of the land and building is estimated at $30,000, and the income nets about six per cent. per annum.

WEIGHT OF A MILLION DOLLARS IN GOLD. To the question "What is the weight of a million dollars in gold?" an officer of the mint answers as follows: "The weight of one million dollars United States currency in gold, is 53,750 troy ounces—or nearly two tons and a quarter, reckoning 2,000 pounds to each ton."

WAR VESSELS IN THE ENGLISH AND FRENCH NAVY. There are 613 effective vessels of war in the British navy; these are manned by 80,000 sailors, and armed with nearly 15,000 guns. There are 449 war vessels in the French Navy; which is manned by about 30,000 sailors, and armed with 8,322 guns.

Two salmon were caught at Seconnet last week—the only ones, says the Fall River Press, that have been taken in those waters for many years.

ANNUAL PARADE. The Hancock Light Guard, of this town, Capt. Spear commanding, had their annual parade and inspection last week. Punctually at 9 o'clock, A. M., the roll was called, thirty-three members answering to their names. The company formed a line in front of the armory, where they were most thoroughly inspected by Lieut. Col. Walker, inspecting officer. After inspection, the company were exercised in the manual, in the firings, in marching, &c., evincing a most commendable proficiency in all their performances. They were then marched into the Lyceum Hall, where a bountiful collation had been provided, and to which ample justice was done. Col. Walker here took occasion, warmly to compliment the company on their marked proficiency in drill, stating, that in all the companies he had inspected, none (save in numbers) had done better, none had given more evidence of improvement, or what was better, manifested more love for the work, without which nothing could be done, than the members of Company H. Remarks were also made by Capt. Spear, Lieut. Col. Walker, and Lieut. Sergeant Barker and others. At half-past one, the company was again called into line and marched to the land of Dr. Woodward, near Mt. Wollaston, where the afternoon was spent in practical instruction in the schools of the soldier, company and sentinel. The duties of the day were fittingly closed by a dress parade, in front of the Town Hall. On the whole, the company never made a more creditable appearance, and the proficiency in drill, the order and attention shown, together with the absence of everything that could mar the harmony of the company, must have been as encouraging to their officers, as it was gratifying to the citizens of the town.

A CARD.

The Citizens of Weymouth take this method of expressing their sincere thanks to the Firemen of the Quincy Companies for the promptness with which they hastened to our rescue; and the very valuable service they rendered us in the hour of our great necessity, at the fire on the 13th inst. May their own homes escape all such peril, and their members and muscle never be less. "So say we, all of us."

J. M. GOODHUE.
Weymouth Landing, April 19.

GOODHUE'S

Drummer.

LADIES and GENTS—if you are wise, You'll study to economize; Be careful when you "goods," shall buy, You do not pay for them too high.

"A sixpence saved"—we all have learned,— "Is equal to a shilling earned;" This "gentle hint" we give to you, That you may patronize GOODHUE.

One thing we'd have you understand, He deals in nothing "contraband"; Another thing we'd have you know— No other man sells "goods" so low.

GOODHUE his customers will "suit" In best of style, from HEAD to FOOT; And make them feel, when they want more, The place to buy is at his STORE.

Some folks it very much surprises, How 'tis he's selling at such prices; Some think he some time will rue it, But GOODHUE knows just how to do it.

GOODHUE is bound to make a racket, Assisted by young HUNT and HACKETT; And those who wish to make life sunny, Should trade with them—AND SAVE THEIR MONEY.

As Spring is coming on—and Summer— He sends this forth instead of "drummer"; He wishes this, the understanding— GOODHUE sells lowest— WEYMOUTH LANDING.

"It is a custom in some places for merchants to send out men—who, in business parlance, are called 'drummers,' to 'drum up' customers; but, as we advise our patrons to study economy, by purchasing their goods OF US, we—wishing to practice what we teach—send out this MODEST little circular INSTEAD, as much less expensive.

REMEMBER
—THAT—
NO ONE

Poetry.

The Snake in the Grass.

BY JOHN G. SAGE.

Come, listen while to me, my lad,
Come, listen to me for a spell;
Let that terrible drum
For a moment be dumb,
For your uncle is going to tell
What befell
A youth who loved liquor too well.

A clever young man was he, my lad,
And with beauty uncommonly blest,
Ere, with brandy and wine,
He began to decline,
And behaved like a person possessed;
I protest,
The temperance plan is the best.

One evening he went to the tavern, my lad,
He went to the tavern one night;
And, drinking too much,
Rum, brandy and such,
The chap got exceedingly "tight,"
And was quite
That fellow fell into a snore, my lad.

'Tis a horrible slumber he takes,
He trembles with fear,
And acts very queer;
My eyes! how he shivers and shakes;
When he wakes,
And raves about horrid great snakes!

'Tis a warning to you and me, my lad,—
A particular caution to all,— Though no one can see
The viper but he,—
To hear the poor loutish caw!
"How they crawl!"
All over the floor and the wall!

Next morning he took to his bed, my lad,
Next morning he took to his bed,
And he never got up,
To dine or to sup,
Though properly physicked and bled,
And I read,
Next day, the poor fellow was dead!

You've heard of the snake in the grass, my lad,
Of the viper concealed in the grass;
But now, you must know,
Man's deadliest foe,
Is a snake of a different class;
Alas!
'Tis the viper that lurks in the glass!

A warning to you and to me, my lad,—
A very imperative call;
Of liquor keep clear
Don't even drink too far,
If you'd shun all occasion to fall;
If at all,
Pray take it uncommonly small.

And if you are partial to snakes, my lad,
(A passion I think very low),
Don't enter, to see 'em,
The Devil's Museum!
'Tis very much better to go,
(That's so!)
And visit a regular show.

Keep the Heart Young.

Keep the heart young, though the sands ebb low,
And the silver cord be parting,
Though the wrinkles come and the roses go,
And the first gray hairs are starting.

Smooth, if you can, the furrowed cheek,
And the brow where years are written;
Dye if you will those locks so sleek,
'Till your age be snugly hidden.

But the heart may be young, though the look
All its inner life revealing,
And its pulses leap, though the blood run cold,
Like the brook through your single stealing.

As the pearls keep fair in its sunken shell,
Though the beach be wasting ever,
And the spring still gush in the study dell,
While the dying day-beams quiver;

As the leaves fade hot on the ivy green,
With the rest in autumn weather,
Let the links be bright in their golden sheen,
That bind us all together.

Anecdotes.

Two men by the name of Beans were lately hung in the North of England. A countryman passing near and seeing the crowd,
enquired what they were doing?

Only stringing a few Beans, was the reply.

A nobleman of the fast anchored Isle, once advertised for an English servant. Pat, on hearing this, applied for the situation. On being questioned of what he was, he replied:
An Englishman, to be sure.

And where was you born?
In Dublin, surely, said Pat.
Born in Dublin, replied the nobleman, and an Englishman—how can that be?

Why, please your honor, said Pat, s'pose
a man is born in a stable, is that any reason he should be a horse?

Jim, I should like to know how you expect to get your living, seeing you are too lazy to work?

I calculate to be a Revolutionary Pensioner, replied Jim.

An Irishman on the tongue of a wagon was run away with by a pair of horses, and had his leg very much bruised by the violent motion of the swingletrees. Some person to whom he was relating the accident asked him:

Why didn't you jump off, Patrick?
Faith, sir, returned Pat, and it was as much as I could do to stay on.

May.

BY G. W. BABCOCK.

Haste away! haste away!
'Tis the merry month of May,
The sun is brightly shining and balmy is the air;
The birds are sweetly singing—
And flowers are gently springing—
And perfumed winds are flinging soft kisses to the fair.

The earth, from sleep awaking,
New forms of life is taking—
Soon will her gentle bosom unfold its wealth
again,
With notes of joy abounding—
In every grove resounding—
As May with rosy footsteps is tripping o'er the plain.

See, nature now is teeming—
And lovely eyes are beaming—
And youthful hearts are greeting the golden morn of May.
While she floateth on the gale—
Shedding flowerets o'er the vale—
Her presence bringing life to the bosom of decay.

See, what beauty fills the eye,
From beneath the azure sky,
What melody of nature on zephyrs floats along;
'Tis the merry month of flowers—
Born of April's sun and showers—
Let us hail the smiling hours with joyous laugh
and song.

Haste away! haste away!
'Tis the merry month of May,
The sun is brightly shining and balmy is the day;
Come, enjoy the happy hours—
In Flora's scented towers—
And form a wreath of flowers to deck the brow
of May.

Scraps.

Tacitus says, "In the early ages man lived a life of innocence and simplicity." Upon this a critic remarks: "When was this period of innocence? The first woman went astray.
The very first man that was born in the world killed the second. When did the time of simplicity begin?"

John Phenax went to the theatre once when Mrs. Smith was advertised to appear in two pieces. After the performance, he demanded the return of his money; for, he said, Mrs.
Smith appeared whole during both performances.

A word of kindness is seldom in vain;
while witty sayings are as easily lost as the pearls slipping from a broken string.

Virtue without talent is a coat of mail
without a sword; it may defend the wearer,
but will not enable him to protect his friend.

An intelligent farmer, being asked if his horses were well matched, replied, "Yes,
they are matched first-rate; one of them is willing to do all the work, and the other is willing he should."

"Don't you mean to marry, my dear sir?"
"No, my dear widow, I'd rather lose all the ribb I've got than take another."

When we meet with reverses, our friends
fall from us, our peacemakers are like birds
of peace, which become more and more conspicuous as the leaves drop off, tempting every passing urchin to throw a stone at them.

Why is a man sick a bed never round-shouldered? Because he is "flat on his back."

The poor have little—the beggars none—the rich too much—enough not one.

Anger is the most impotent passion that accompanies the mind of man; it affects nothing it goes about; and hurts the man who is possessed by it more than any other against whom it is directed.

A good word is an easy obligation; but not to speak ill, requires only silence, which costs us nothing.

Troubles are like dogs—the smaller they are, the more they annoy you.

Women can easily preserve their youth;
for she who captivates the heart and understanding never grows old.

Men are born with two eyes and but one tongue, in order that they should see twice as much as they say. The same is applicable to boys and women.

The best way to get help in this world is to help yourself. Show that you need aid, and all turn a cold shoulder; but prove that you can do without folks, and they will beg to give you a lift.

Miscellaneous.

One Day at a Time.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

One neighbor dropped in upon another.

Are you sick, Mrs. Carson? asked the visitor, on meeting a pale, troubled face.

Sick at heart, Mary, was answered gloom-ily. Not even the ghost of a smile became visible.

Is that all? The visitor's countenance brightened.

I don't know any worse sickness, she said
rather abruptly.

That depends on the origin and nature of the disease, replied the friend. There is a heart sickness, which is unto death; but I take it that yours is of a milder type, having its origin among life's petty annoyances, or
it may be in its more sober disappointments,
in things common to us all, yet born in how many different ways.

Mrs. Carson sighed heavily. There was a lead weight on her bosom. Reason ascended to her visitor's suggestions, but oppressed feelings held her in bondage.

What troubles you to-day? Why are you so much cast down? asked the visitor.

But this may be an intrusion.

Mrs. Carson did not answer immediately.

Her dreary eyes rested on the floor, her hands lay idly in her lap: she was the picture of despondency. At length she said:

Owing to changes in business, my husband must give up his situation. A dissolution of the firm throws him out. To-morrow he leaves his place, with no prospect of another.

What are we to do? We've saved nothing.
How could we on so light an income.

I'm sorry to hear that, answered the lady.

Could anything be more gloomy or discouraging? Can you wonder that I am in trouble?

I do not wonder that you are concerned about the future, Mrs. Carson. That is a natural result. But I cannot see, in the event, any reason why you should sit down
with folded hands, and make yourself miserable. Mr. Carson is, of course, troubled.

You may well say that. He took scarcely a mouthful of breakfast this morning.

On him rests the heaviest part of this burden.

He must provide and maintain a home for his wife and children. I sympathize with him from my heart.

It's seeing him so cast down that makes me so wretched, said Mrs. Carson. If he were cheerful and hopeful I could take heart.

Perhaps in thought he is saying the same thing of you.

When did he tell you this?

Last night I saw that something was troubling him, and urged him to say what it was.
Then he told me.

How did you receive the announcement?

Mrs. Carson was silent.

Bravely, as a wife should, when she sees trouble approaching her husband, or in weakness and tears, I make you this confession.

Did that help him any? Did that make his trouble lighter?

No, my friend. While telling me of the change, he mingled hopeful words in his sentences. But afterwards he sat silent and gloomy through all the evening.

And you?

Cried myself almost sick.

And sat opposite to him, at breakfast time
this morning with a rueful visage. No wonder he had no appetite.

No wonder, said Mrs. Carson, repeating the words to herself. That was not well at least.

And should not be repeated. Poor man!
It shall not be repeated, Mary. Poor man!
he has enough to bear, without the dead
weight of my despondency.

I am glad to hear you say that, Mrs. Carson.

Now you are coming towards the right way of thinking. We have only to-day, and in every to-day, we shall find the elements of despondency as well. To accept the one and reject the other, is to be wise. Last evening you cast aside your husband's hopeful words, and drew around both his heart and yours a pall of despondency. This morning your state was unchanged, and you let him go forth for the day doubly weighed.

My friend this was not well. Now I pray
you, limit thought and duty, as far as in you lies, to this one day, which, in God's Providence is yours. You have a pleasant home, children, and husband. There is not a single external element, in all appertaining to your to-day, that is not favorable to peace of mind. When to-morrow becomes to-day, will the change be marked? I think not.

You will still, I trust, have a home, food,
raiment, your children, and your husband,
and God's promise to those who do their duty in singleness of heart. What if your husband's hands are idle for a short time?

What if the way, looking weeks or months in advance, does not seem clear? Your to-day is all bright, if you will have it so. The sun shines, the heart beats, God's Providence is not hindered. You may be in peace,
if you will do your best to secure peace.

The friend departed, leaving Mrs. Carson in a better frame of mind, and with her thoughts flowing in the right direction. One day at a time, she said to herself, as her hands took hold of the duties of the hour. Ah!
if we could so live, how tranquil all might be.
Even in this feeble effort, my heart has a calmer beat. I did not believe in the possibility of a change such as I feel. One day at a time.

She lingered on the suggestion, drawing out more and more distinctly many of the things it involved, and seeing more and more clearly, how it lay at the basis of all right living and true enjoyment.

Relieved in a great measure, from its burden of despondency, the mind of Mrs. Carson lifted itself into a region of clearer light and became busy with ways and means adapted to the change which had taken place in their circumstances. Instead of running with folded hands, in terror of approaching ills—
or dwelling in vague apprehensions, she let hope gain entrance; and hope had good words to say.

Slowly, in the dimly closing twilight, a man walked, with eyes upon the pavement;
bowed head and hand, with stooping shoulders, he was bending under a heavy weight.
One week ago, the same man walked in the twilight, with head erect, and quickly falling footsteps, almost impatient to reach his home. Then he looked for a smiling welcome and loving words; now as thought reached forward, he saw only clouds of tears.

His heart was cheerful then, but heavy now.
Suddenly, his path had been crossed by a mountain range that looked impassable. For himself, he might gird his loins, and bravely move to ascend, but, she who must walk by his side through smiling landscapes, or amid tossing activities, had sunk down, overcome by weak terrors; and with this added
how was he to advance? Brave enough to face the mountain, with its sky-reaching cliffs, and snow summits, if his way must be over its barrier, and strong enough to support his companion, if she put forth what strength was given; he was not able to carry her as a dead weight. And this it was that bowed his head and saddened his spirit, as he lingered, with slow steps, in the falling shadows, and dreaded the arrival at home.

Mr. Carson's hand rested for some moments on the door, before he found heart to push it open.

Night had fallen without for him within—a night the blackness of which no damp rays could penetrate. Usually he shut the door after him with a quick, strong hand, that announced his entrance in echoes from the farthest chambers, and made the stairs musical with the patter of little feet; now it was closed so noiselessly, that only the alert ears of Mrs. Carson noted his coming.

There's your father, she said to three little ones who had gathered about the centre table
under a gas lamp, one with her doll, and two with their picture books, and then there was a scampering down stairs, and a jangling of young voices, sweet, if discordant. The mother heard only the sound of kisses in response. The father's voice, lately so full of glad welcome, as he opened his arms for his babies, was silent now. What a change! And yet so far as every external element of happiness was concerned, no new condition existed. There was no evil in the present.
Food and raiment, light and warmth, health—
all that they could appropriate was in equal abundance now as before. It was the shadow of some imagined evil in the future, which might never come, that shut the sunlight
from their hearts—which might never come,
or coming, change to good in the day of its advent.

Mr. Carson entered the room where his wife sat bearing one child in her arms, while two clung to him, in laughing efforts to impede his progress. The old welcoming smile was on her face—not so bright nor so happy, but fuller of tenderness. How like a flash its reflected rays drank up the shadows
from his eyes and brow. He could not help stooping over and kissing her with unwonted fervor. She felt it in a sweet thrill, down to her heart. They were drawing closer together.

You have changed since morning, said Mr.
Carson, soon as the children resumed their toys and picture books, laying his hand on his wife's head as he spoke, and looking into her calm eyes almost wonderingly.

Have I?

Yes. What has brought this change?

Right thinking, perhaps.

What have been your thoughts?

To-day is ours, and only to-day.

Only to-day, said Mr. Carson, echoing the words of his wife.

Is it wise to throw aside the good things of
to-day, because in doubt as to the future?
To shut our windows, and refuse to let today's sunshine enter our dwellings, because there are signs of a storm to-morrow?

No, it is not wise, answered the husband.

So I have thought, and so thinking, I have been striving to keep myself in the present,
and amid the duties and blessings that crowd
the passing hour. All is well with us to-day—
all has been well with us so far in life; and if changes and trials are to come, will not strength as we need be given?

Surely it will, dear wife, added Mr.
Carson, I cannot express the feeling of relief your language gives. Yes, yes. Let us take in all our to-days, the good things God has provided. Hitherto they have been in full measure. If diminished from this time, as to what is external and material, may we not have an increase of our internal pleasures? I do not think we have been a great deal happier since a better income enabled us
to rent this larger house, and to possess costlier furniture.

Just the conclusion of my mind, answered
the wife. I know we were as happy—sometimes, I have thought, happier—in that cosy little house where the first six years of our wedded lives were spent. And now that you have alluded to this humble condition, I will say what further has been in my thoughts. Let us go back to the same condition, and thus reduce our expenses to the old rate. In a smaller house, I can get along well enough with a single servant, and not have to work any harder than I do now.
This will be acting right in the present—
doing to-day what seemeth best—and I think we shall find the way before us growing smooth to our feet, though it looks so rough
and so thorny in prospect.

Comforter! comforter! strengthen! said
Mr. Carson, giving way to a gush of feeling.
His voice was half echoed and his eyes glist-ened. One hour ago, I was wretched. Now I am hopeful, resigned, peaceful. The high mountain across my path, that seemed impassable, has sunk to a little hill. When our feet begin the ascent, we shall not find the way so difficult, and strength will come in the hour of need.

And it came as he prophesied. The lesson and experience of that day and evening to Mr. and Mrs. Carson were so full of instruction, that they could not be forgotten. In present right thinking and acting—in taking each day as it came, and accepting the good
it had to offer—they found tranquility of mind; but in all variations from this rule of life—in all weak yieldings to doubt and fear;
in all helpless broodings over coming ills—
they were led into darkness, self-torments, wretchedness. One day at a time—taking and using the good it had to offer, and bearing patiently its ills—this was the better life
they sought to live; and though, for some years afterwards, their way in the world was through obscure places, where the humbler move, they found as sweet flowers to give the air perfume, and as soft and green a turf
for their feet, as had ever delighted them in more prosperous seasons.

Tribute of Respect.

23d Mass Regt., Craven Co. (N. C.) }
APRIL 27TH, 1862.

MR. JAMES JONES—Dear Sir:—You have doubtless, before this, been informed of all the particulars of the death of your late lamented nephew, William Jones. He died on Saturday the 19th of April. His cousin, Alonzo Jones, a member of my company,
took measures to send the body home at once,
and is entitled to much praise for the prompt and kindly manner in which he performed
the delicate duty.

Alonzo, being detailed as clerk to the Provost Marshal of Newbern, and our Camp
being some eight miles from thence, he can-give you all the particulars, which it is impossible for me to do, as I am the only officer of my Company on duty at present, and am consequently confined closely to camp.

I cannot close without adding a slight tribute to the soldierly worth of your nephew.
He was always ready for duty, willing, kind
to those about him, and had endeared himself to every member of the Company.

At the battle of Newbern, he was conspicuous for his fearless courage. He placed himself some paces in advance of the line of battle, and dealt out his rounds at the rebels
with the coolness of a veteran. I warned him several times that he was in danger of being shot by our own men, but he kept his post throughout the fight, while his noble friend Ryan fell dead beside him.

I can safely say that he was as brave and true a soldier as the regiment could produce.

With deep sympathy, I am Sir,

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM L. KENT,
LIEUT. COM. CO. H. 23d MASS. REGT.

Secesh Letters.

The following letters were found at Yorktown after the evacuation of that place by the rebels, and were forwarded to us by our correspondent, James J. Dowd. We give them to our readers verbatim.

New Agricultural Wrinkle.

A funny story is told of an old friend of ours—one who, sick and tired of the care
and bustle of city life, had retired and gone to farming, as the saying is. His land, albeit well situated and commanding sundry fine prospects, is not particularly fine as some we have seen, requiring scientific culture, and a liberal system of manuring to induce abundant yield. So far by way of explanation.

Once upon a time, as the story books say,
our friend being on a short visit to the city,
was attending an auction sale down town,
and it happened they were selling damaged sausages at the time. There were some eight or ten barrels of them, and they were just "going at fifty cents a barrel," when the auctioneer, with all apparent seriousness, remarked, that they were worth more than that to manure land with. Here was an idea—
"Sixty-two and a half cents—third and last call—gone!" "Cash takes them at sixty-
two and a half cents per barrel!"

To have them shipped to his country-seat
was the immediate work of our friend, and as it was then planting time, and the sausages
to use a common phrase, "were getting to be no better fast," to have them safe under the ground and out of the way, was the next movement. He was about to plant a field of several acres of corn, the soil of the piney
wood species; so here was just the spot for his experiment in agriculture—this new wrinkle in the science of geponics. One "link" of sausage being deemed sufficient,
that amount was placed in each hill, accompanied by the usual number of kernels of corn and an occasional pumpkin seed, and all were nicely covered up in the usual style.
Now after premising that several days have elapsed since the corn was planted, the sequel of the story shall be told in a dialogue between our friend and one of his neighbors.

Well, friend, have you planted your corn?
Yes, several days since.

Is it up yet?

Up? yes, and gone too, the most of it.

How is that?

Well, you see I bought a lot of damaged
sausage the other day in New York, a smooth tought auctioneer saying they would make excellent manure, if nothing else. I brought the lot over and commenced planting
a sausage in each hill, and—

Well, and what?

And I felt satisfied that I had made a great job of it. Some days afterward I went out to the field to see how my corn was coming on, and a pretty piece of business I have made by my agricultural experiments.

Why, what was the matter?

Matter! the first thing I saw before reaching the field was the greatest lot of dogs digging and scratching all over it! There were my dogs and your dogs, and all the neighbors dogs—besides about three hundred strange dogs I never set eyes on before—and every one was hard at it, mining after the buried sausages. Somehow or other the rascally whelps had scented out the business, and they have dug up every hill by this

Excessive smoking is a new vice. How many young men at school and college used to smoke fifty years ago? Some half dozen. How many do now? The answer is—legion. Boys of twelve years old are seen early in the morning with cigars in their mouths.

Youths have consulted me who have just come from the new schools now called colleges, confessing that they have been in the habit of smoking constantly; and these are laid just hoping to begin the business of life.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 24th, 1862.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we"

FIRE. The inside of a small cottage house owned by Mr. Welch, and situated near the residence of Mr. George H. Locke, in the westerly part of the town, was entirely burnt out, between four and five o'clock on Sunday afternoon last. The house was unoccupied, and is supposed to have been set on fire. The Granite Engine, which is close at hand, was promptly on the spot and did good service, also the Hydrant, of Railway Village. There was no general alarm given in the centre part of the town.

INCENDIARY. There was an attempt made on Thursday evening last, to burn the barn owned and lately occupied by Mr. Joseph Hardwick, in the south part of the town. Fortunately the fire was discovered before it had gained much headway, otherwise, considerable property would undoubtedly have been destroyed.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR. Vice President Hamlin made a short stop in this place, one day the present week, while on his way to Washington. He was the guest of Mrs. Kidder, his aunt, an aged and much respected lady of this place. She enjoys very good health, is quite active, and was much pleased with her nephew's visit, although she is nearly ninety years of age.

SAILORS' SNUG HARBOR. The annual meeting of the Trustees of the Sailors' Snug Harbor was held on Monday, when the following organization took place:

President—R. B. Forbes.
Treasurer—W. A. Wellman.
Secretary—J. F. Tuckerman.
Executive Committee—R. B. Forbes, Albert Fearing, Andrew T. Hall, Robert B. Storer, George B. Upton.

Appropriate notice was taken of the death of the Honorable William Appleton, and the Executive Committee are to take measures to fill his place and organize a board of monthly visitors. The Treasurer's report showed that the expenses of the current year have been about $1700 in excess of the receipts, including income on stocks and other securities and donations. There are at present thirty-six men in the Snug Harbor. During the past year several have died. All that is now wanted to render this institution an entire success is more money, in order that a regular adequate income may be secured to render it independent of casual and uncertain contributions, which during the past year have amounted to about $1300. It is hoped by the Trustees that the sympathies of the benevolent who delight in supporting similar institutions will be kept alive, and that means will be provided to defray the current expenses which, as the number of inmates increases, must become larger year by year.

IMPROVE THE CHANCE. We are sorry to learn that Mr. Hunkings, the Ambrotypist, is going to leave us the coming week. He is an excellent artist, and has taken many superior pictures during his short stay in this place. His photographs of the horse cars, are beautiful pictures, and are selling very cheap. His card photographs are equal to the best; and his ambrotypes cannot be surpassed.

A GOOD WORK. We notice that the Fathers of the Town are doing some good things in the centre of our village. The sludge-ways are being cleaned out; one of which has not been for eleven years, and caused a good deal of trouble last winter. The sidewalk on Temple street is also being improved—it has been in an awful condition for some time past.

PERSONAL. Our friend of the shears, James M. Beckford, we see has turned up in a new situation; from the gentlemanly assistant in our Post Office for a number of years, to a Conductor on our new road. The appointment is a good one; as we have no hesitancy in saying, that the post cannot be filled by a better man.

INTERESTING RELIC. A barber in Gloucester, (Mass.) has in his possession a razor said to have once been the property of Gen. Washington, which he left at his headquarters in Cambridge during the Revolution. It is of English manufacture, with a brass back, stamped "Charles Breve," and with a bow and arrow. The blade is of ivory and broken at the rivet.

QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD. It is with great satisfaction that we notice the growing popularity of this means of conveyance to the city. It is rare that a new undertaking succeeds so well at first, but the care and good judgment of those engaged in the enterprise, seem to have foreseen every thing, or almost every thing, required to meet the wants of the travelling public. The cars are easy, neat and commodious. The officers are skillful and gentlemanly in their deportment. The horses are fine animals, and, considering the fact that they are fresh from their native pastures, it is surprising to notice how well they perform the service required of them. It is not often that a new road runs so well and evenly as does this road; but it will run better as soon as the rails are a little worn. The citizens are certainly deeply indebted to the gentlemen who have carried this untrodden enterprise to a successful completion, and we hope that it will receive the patronage it so richly merits.

FIRE AT SOUTH BRAINTREE. Two barns, a slaughter house, and other out-buildings belonging to the estate of Capt. Isaac Dyer, in South Braintree, were entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday evening last. The buildings were connected with Mr. Dyer's residence, but his dwelling was saved. Two horses, three cows and three calves perished in the flames. Three engines from this place and two from Randolph were present—Braintree, we believe, has no fire companies. The loss is about one thousand dollars and is covered by insurance.

Mr. Dyer had received letters at different times informing him that his buildings would be set on fire, but being well advanced in years (about eighty) he was too feeble to watch for his enemy. We learn that a public meeting of the citizens of Braintree was held on Monday, and sufficient evidence was found to cause the arrest of a near relative of Mr. Dyer, who is probably the fiend.

HEAVY ROBBERY AT HINGHAM. The premises of Mr. John Todd, merchant tailor of that place, was entered on Friday night, 8th inst., and goods to the amount of two thousand dollars, and upwards, were stolen. Mr. T.'s stock was large, and the rogues had a fine opportunity to make a heavy haul. The presumption is, that they came from the city, as a wagon, deeply loaded, passed the toll-gate, on the Quincy and Braintree Turnpike, in that direction, early on Saturday morning. What adds to the depravity of the act, is the supposition, as it was on the night of the fire, that other robberies were committed, and the buildings fired, that no trace might be left that would lead to detection. Large rewards have been offered for the apprehension of the thieves, but as yet, no clue has been obtained as to their whereabouts.

DEDICATION AT BRIDGEWATER. The new and spacious house of worship recently erected by the Trinitarian society in Bridgewater, in place of that which was destroyed by fire several months ago, was dedicated on Sunday last. An able and very interesting sermon was preached by Rev. George W. Field, pastor of the Salem Street Church, Boston. Rev. Ebenezer Douglass, formerly of Oldtown Me., will soon be formally installed as pastor of the church above mentioned.

FREDERICK JONES, one of our young volunteers in Burnside's division, visited our office yesterday. He looked rather feeble, having been sick for five or six weeks with the typhoid fever in the hospital at Newbern, in which place he was confined at the time of his brother's death, of which we made mention a few weeks ago. He has obtained a furlough for sixty days, in which time, in all probability, he will regain his usual strength and agility.

HARRIS & CROSBY'S CLOTHES WRINGER. We would again call the attention of the public to this valuable invention. Its merits may be summed up in a few words—a great saving of time and labor—it gives a more effectual finish to the work, with less injury to the clothes. For sale by N. B. Fernald, on Washington street.

PROBATE COURT FOR NORFOLK COUNTY. The next term of this Court will be held in this town—on Tuesday next, 27th inst.

THE LADY'S BOOK FOR JUNE has made its appearance. As usual, it abounds in good things of general utility in the domestic circle. Emphatically, it is a Lady's Book, which none should be without.

Your subscriptions will be received at the Quincy Bookstore.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE IN DEDHAM.—On Tuesday, 16th inst., that large and well known estate, the Norfolk House, in Dedham Village, was sold at auction by Brown Brothers, for $5000. Mr. Rice of Boston was the purchaser.

WHAT IS GOOD FARMING? The best and most pithy answer we ever heard to this enquiry was given by Mr. Kane at an agricultural meeting in Dorsetshire, England.

He said he fed his land before it was hungry; rested it before it was weary; and weeded it before it was foul.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, May 21, 1862.

The horoscope of the week, foretells that momentous National events are near. The impending battles at Richmond and Corinth create a high state of feeling in our community. Perhaps even now, the conflict may have occurred. Uncertainty as to results hangs heavy on many minds. That victory will perch on our banners we have no misgivings—no doubts. A startling phase is presented since my last, on domestic slavery, by the proclamation of General Hunter. He declares by reason of the rebellion that all persons held in slavery, in Georgia, Florida and North Carolina, are by military necessity forever free. This document is hailed by some with joy, by others with indignation. Close upon the heels of Hunter's Proclamation, comes one from the President of the United States, who says in plain words that neither General Hunter or any other commander or person has been authorized by the Federal Government, to make proclamation declaring the slaves of any State free. He still maintains, that the United States ought to co-operate with any other State which may adopt a gradual abolishment of slavery, giving to such State, in its discretion, to compensate for the inconveniences, public and private, produced by such change of system. This repudiation of Hunter's course is a poser—and will probably lead to his recall from command. It is evident that these matters have produced great sensation throughout the country. A rupture in the Cabinet is predicted; but we are assured the President will stand his ground and meet the issue in the same firm spirit that has governed him through the civil war.

The comments of the press are profuse, and some of the articles ably written; Mr. Lincoln is generally sustained.

The opposition to General Hunter's course by the President, will have a tendency to break up the old lines of the Republican party; some believing that the little household of four millions of negroes held in slavery, should, as an act of war, be set free at one mighty swoop. The conservatives of the Republican party, with the Democrats, regard the present calamitous war, not one for the abolition of slavery, but to maintain the Union—the Constitution and enforcement of the Laws; and that the settlement of slavery matters should be adjusted after the rebellion is quashed. A large portion of the Northern, the Western, and all of the Border States, will sustain his views on peaceful emancipation.

The President is a genius, and no mistake. Now be it known, that this Abraham Lincoln, is not a handsome man—his motions in the drawing room are not graceful—he is neither Cicero or Demosthenes as an orator; there is no marked brilliancy and eloquence in his style of writing or speaking; there is little enthusiasm in him except in cracking jokes and telling humorous stories; his slowness is never mistaken for timidity; his self-possession is of a high phenomenal order—a man of observation rather than books; inspired by an enlightened patriotism, he has shown to the American people, that he has honesty of purpose and a large share of shrewd common sense; he seems bound to triumph in the end, although his path-way is beset with difficulties, such as none of his predecessors ever trod, and we hope none of his successors in office ever will tread.

Parson Brownlow, of Tennessee, is expected here to-day. In his movements he is reaping a golden harvest. His average receipts for each lecture are one thousand dollars. He is to have ten thousand dollars for the copy right of his coming book. He will soon gather up an ample fortune.

The weather is very fine and the city full of folks. The war fever gave somewhat a lull to business operations the past few days. The interruption will be but temporary. x.

THE SEASON. The country never looked pleasanter; it appears like a flower garden. The apple, pear, peach, and in fact, almost every description of fruit, promise an abundant yield. Vegetation generally, is coming forward rapidly, which gives hope to the husbandman.

THE WORK OF CONGRESS. Speaker Grow writes to a friend as follows:

This Congress is redeeming in good faith all its pledges to the people. What you said of it a few days ago was eminently just. It may seem to the country to move slowly, but no Congress before it has, in the same time accomplished so much for the future greatness and glory of the Republic:

The National Capital free forever.
Slavery forever prohibited in all territories.
The Pacific Railroad authorized.

The public domain set apart and consecrated to free homes and free men.

The policy of gradual emancipation inaugurated: besides war measures.

Rev. Mr. Heath will preach to-morrow morning upon: Working and minding our own business.

Subject in the afternoon: Fashionable hypocrisy or a candid appeal to those who are with us, but against us.

Another Free Lunch will be served up by friend Savil, this evening, at the Mariposa Bowling and Oyster Saloon.

In Memory of Warren R. Shackley.

Among the list of the dead on the field at Williamsburg is comprised the name of Warren R. Shackley, a brother of our townsman, Mr. Jonas Shackley. The Norfolk Journal, of Roxbury, thus alludes to him.

"Warren R. Shackley was a car-builder by trade, and in the employ of the Metropolitan Railroad Co. He was a young man of pure morals and Christian character, being a member of the Broomfield street Methodist church, in Boston. An excellent workman, he had secured a good situation at his trade. But when the war was commenced by the attack upon Sumter, his feelings immediately became aroused, and he was strongly impressed with the conviction that it was his duty to enlist in his country's service. Some of his friends represented to him that he ought not to leave a good situation for the precarious life of a soldier; that there were enough others who could go at less sacrifice who were willing to take his place on the field. But this could not overrule his deep convictions. He remarked that he had neither wife nor children to mourn his loss should he be killed; and declared that he had voted for Lincoln as President, and if there was a necessity to fight for him, he was ready. He joined the City Guards corps without having had a previous military experience, and at once engaged actively in their drills. Their protracted remaining here became irksome to him, and he frequently expressed the desire to be away. He wanted to meet the enemy, he said, and was willing to do his part. He enlisted originally for three months only; but when the vote of the company was taken as to whether they should serve three years, he remarked quietly to a friend that he should be the last man to object to serving a longer period. The religious society to which he belonged made him a present in their church of a revolver, and the interest of many friends was shown by a variety of gifts. Since his departure, he has frequently corresponded with friends here, and always in a tone that indicated him a manly soldier, a true patriot, and a sincere Christian. He was struck in the head by a fragment of a shell, which tore away his brain, killing him instantly. His age was 22."

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-TWO YEARS OLD. The Danbury (Ct) Times says, "Mr. Eleazer Evans has turned up from his garden an old coin, bearing date 1700. The impression is quite rough and irregular, and but part of the die covers the coin, but enough is left to show that it is of British manufacture, and the date stands out clear and strong. The place where it was found is near by the camping ground of Tyron and his drunken soldiers, when they applied the match to this village, and this old coin has no doubt slept the century nearly, which has passed away between that time and this. Like the veterans of the Revolution, these mementos of the war have almost entirely disappeared. This is a rare old coin, and will be a valuable addition to the collection of some antiquarian."

THE MONITOR. This is the title of a new weekly, of eight quarto pages, published at Concord, in this State, at two dollars and fifty cents a year. It is a handsome sheet, well filled with valuable reading matter, and enters a new field in periodical literature. The publisher says:

"The Monitor is designed to fill a place until now occupied by no American publication. Its columns are freely open to any sincere, fearless thought, on any subject. It allows free discussion on both sides of any topic, leaving the moral to winnow itself from the chaff of words. It offers a brave opinion to day, but reserves the right to offer a braver one to-morrow, even if it contradicts itself. Its many editorial departments are under the control of one mind, which, after hearing all opinions, decides for itself. It is not doubted that America will support this, its first weekly Review of Literature, Science, Art, the Drama, Wit, Music, Poetry, Temperance, Politics, Mechanics, Patriotism, Liberty and Truth."

For the Patriot.

An Appeal for the Refugees at Port Royal.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Mrs. William B. Rogers, one of the officers of the "Educational Commission" of Boston, desires me to present the thanks of the Commission to the Ladies of Quincy from whom gifts of clothing have been received for the refugees at Port Royal.

Permit me to add that any further gifts of money, or new or cast-off clothing, left either at my house or at Mr. Gill's store, will be taken care of and duly forwarded.

JOHN D. WELLS.

CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES. We have a commerce with the Canadian, or "British North American Provinces," averaging for the last half dozen years, over forty millions of dollars. Notwithstanding our civil war, and the hostile attitude of England, this trade has scarcely been interrupted in the least particular. The fact thus established, that the Canadian and the United States are bound together by the most intimate and strongest ties of interest, and no diplomatic device or intrigue can separate them.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Com. Farragut is a native and resident of Tennessee. He entered the service in 1810 and is 65 years old.

The terms proposed for an exchange of Col. Corcoran, is stated upon reliable authority, have been accepted by the rebel government, and he is expected to be set at liberty in a very few days.

The barque Island City, of Boston, which arrived at Portland on Saturday from Matanzas, brings one of the largest if not the largest cargo of molasses ever brought to that port. It consists of seven hundred and sixty-seven hogheads, seventy-seven tierces and three barrels.

Three prize vessels arrived at New York on Monday. Only two have been sent to Boston since the war began.

Capt. Boggs of the United States gunboat Varuna, who sunk six rebel steamers on the Mississippi, and fought his vessel until she was sunk, is a nephew of the gallant Lawrence, whose "Don't give up the ship" has become historic.

Lieut. Worden has been ordered to the command of the new iron clad frigate Ironsides, launched on Saturday at Philadelphia. The Ironsides was christened by the veteran Commodore Charles Stewart, who formerly commanded the old Ironsides.

One of the leading merchants in New York failed the other day for the want of $500. He held property at the time that in ordinary times would have brought $80,000.

A Paris correspondent says, in explanation of the present attitude of France: "If the truth must be told, the decided ill will of a large and powerful party in France toward the Union cause dates from the admission of the Orleans Princes into the Federal service."

The Lewiston Journal talks about a Port Royal orange measuring 14 1/2 inches in circumference, which was sent home by a volunteer. Our boys are having sweet times.

A Chicago correspondent of the Tribune says that the dog of St. Louis Pfieff of that place was at his side when he was killed at the battle of Shiloh, and stayed by his grave twelve days till the Lieutenant's wife came to find the remains. She was about giving up in despair when she discovered the dog.

A deserter at Yorktown says that the Irishmen in the enemy's ranks are regarded with well-grounded suspicion, and will show but a faint disposition to fight us.

American Primary school books are used in teaching the Prince Imperial of France.

The first vessel bearing the Siamese flag has entered the port of Bremen, where she was originally purchased by the King of Siam.

George F. Train's tramways—horse railroads—are being constructed in Switzerland. They are the first on the continent, barring a small one-horse affair in Paris.

There is a pair of Colt's revolvers, nearly finished, at Colt's armory in Hartford, which are inscribed, "From the President of the United States to the King of Denmark."

The unfinished monument to the memory of Mrs. Washington, in the vicinity of Frying Creek, has been shamelessly defaced by the rebel soldiery, who used it as a target. It is covered with profane writings and obscene caricatures, and scaled by bullets, some of which are buried in the marble.

The Nashville Union reports that Daniel S. Donelson, Brigadier General in the Confederate service while ordering his troops to burn other people's cotton and rice, in the Southern States, recently sold his own in Sumter county, Tennessee, for Yankee gold and "green backs."

Hamilton E. Towle, the young American civil engineer who invented the temporary steering gear after the breaking of the rudder of the Great Eastern on the last voyage out, has labelled the ship—not for compensation, but to obtain an acknowledgment of the services rendered.

It is estimated that the pension bill, recently passed by the House, will draw from the treasury no less than $40,000,000 annually. It will be reported from the committee to the Senate materially modified.

Major Slemmer, of Fort Pickens fame, has joined Gen. McCook's division of Gen. Buell's army corps.

The Lowell Courier says that a dog belonging to the late David Rogers, lively stable keeper there, actually sickened and died of grief on account of the death of its master.

The President has signed the Homestead Bill, and it has now become a law.

Gen. Halleck has peremptorily ordered all newspaper correspondents outside of his lines near Corinth.

It is estimated that over five hundred vessels will sail for the Southern ports by the first of June. There will be at least two hundred clearances for cargoes of ice.

The movements of the Eastern and Western armies, for prudential motives, will be kept very quiet for the next three or four days, unless in the meantime a decisive battle takes place.

It is said that 20,000 shad were caught in the Connecticut river on the 19th inst.

CARPETS. Large quantities of these goods have been brought over to our city from the recent auction trade sales in New York, by the New England Carpet Co., who are cutting them up to their retail trade at an unprecedented and astonishing rate.—Boston Post.

Their advertisement will be found in our to day's issue.

JUSTICE RENDERED. The most extraordinary event of the present Congress was the offering of a resolution in the House on Friday of last week, by Owen Lovejoy, thanking Gen. McClellan for "the display of those military abilities that secure important results with small sacrifice of human life." The resolution (says the Lewiston Journal) was passed without a dissenting voice, being voted for by men who have ridiculed McClellan's caution as cowardice, and derided "strategy" as the poor resource of a man who has no other claim to generalship.

FINANCIAL. "Five columns of the Plymouth Rock, of the 8th inst., were occupied with an advertisement of property for sale by auction to pay the taxes, which amount to nearly three thousand dollars."—Exchange.

Three thousand dollars to be collected under the hammer of the auctioneer, from delinquent tax-payers. This is a big figure for that staid and puritanical town. We thought the prosperity of Plymouth was built upon a rock.

Marriages.

In East Weymouth, on the 18th inst., by Rev. J. P. Lane, Mr. Augustus Tirrell to Miss Eliza R. Pratt.

In South Braintree, on the 14th inst., by Rev. S. R. Eastman, Jr., Mr. Caleb Thompson to Miss Sarah Jane Wait, all of that place.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 19th inst., Mrs. Mercey, wife of Mr. Gideon F. Denton, aged 40 years. In Weymouth, on the 10th inst., Mrs. Rebecca Hart, widow of the late Noah Bates, formerly of Dorchester, aged 75 years.

In Boston, on the 16th inst., Mrs. Miriam, widow of the late Edward C. Tirrell, aged 70 years and 2 months.

In Bradford, (N. H.) on the 14th inst., of consumption, Mrs. Nancy, wife of Mr. Ambrose S. Brackett formerly of this town.

In Scituate, on the 18th inst., Mrs. Nancy Mott, aged 80 years and 8 months; on the 19th inst., Mr. Stephen Mott, aged 66 years and 8 months.

The above lived together 63 years, and were buried together on Wednesday last.

Poetry.

For the Patriot
The Young Volunteer.

Air—THE WOUNDED HUSBAND.

The following lines are a verification of portions of several letters written by the comrades of Walter Scott Adlington, a member of Co. F., Mass. 11th Regiment, who died at Camp Hooker, near Budd's Ferry, Dec. 7th, 1861.

Far, far, from his home, near Potomac's fam'd river,
Young Adlington slumbers—the friend we held dear;
His soul has gone forth to the Ark of the Giver;
He cares for our comrade—the young volunteer.

No kindred were near, yet kind friends were around him,
Who over his relics restrain'd not the tear;
Where honor'd we've laid him the Angels have found him.
They watch o'er the grave of the young volunteer.

So faithful in duty, so kind and engaging,
In friendship so generous, so warm and sincere,
So firm when around him the battle was raging,
Was Walter, our comrade—the young volunteer.

Farwell to our friend, tho' so early departed,
His mem'ry shall live in our hearts ever near;
Farwell to thee, Walter—the brave and true-hearted;
Farwell to our comrade, the young volunteer.

*Battle of Bull Run. F. M. A. Weymouth.

For the Patriot.
Heavenly Country

There is a country pure above,
Its joys cannot be told,
Its walls are made of Jasper stone,
Its streets are paved with gold.

None but the holy enter there,
To dwell with Christ above;
Away from earth and toil and care,
In Heaven their home above.

It is a place of Wisdom, too,
For God will there unfold
The mystery of His Providence,
Which here are dark and cold.

We then shall see a reason why
The little children die,
And why the old and feeble man,
Death passes so long by.

It is a place of action, too,
For all employed will be;
The soul of man sleeps never there
To all eternity.

It is a place of worship, too,
For all with one accord,
Will bow before Jehovah's throne
And own their sov'reign Lord.

There ascribing halallelujah
For his redeeming love,
That brought them all happily through
To heaven their home above.

Anecdotes.

An Irish woman called at the grocer's the other day, and asked for a quart of vinegar. It was measured out and put into a gallon jug; she then asked for another quart to be put in the same vessel.

And why not ask for a half gallon and have done with it? said the grocer.

Oh! bless your little bit of a soul, answered she, it's for two persons!

A person who had been freely indulging in a grog shop, fell down in the street soon after he left the door. A little boy, who noticed the accident, ran in, exclaiming:

Mr. Mr., you must come out of your shop immediately.

What is the matter? exclaimed the astonished rum-seller.

Why, sir, continued the boy, your sign's blown down!

Did you mean that remark for me?

No; who in the deuce are you? I never saw nor heard of you before, and never wish to see nor hear of you again.

I am satisfied with your explanation, sir.

THE SPECIFIC PILL

A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness,
and Genital Irritability in either sex.

This Malady, the terrible consequences of
which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and sinks the unhappy victim into insensibility, and a permanent grave. From one to six boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most aggravated Cases, where Constitutional, or arising from Abuse
or Excesses.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Sperm-
atorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine
can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]
I have found them all that could be desired.—
Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used
them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years.
I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E.
P. DICKEE, M. D.
This is not a Homeopathic Remedy, nor does it contain any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.

PRICE.—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5,
by mail, prepaid. For sale by all respectable

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRA-
VINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, bluishness, defective memory, indiges-
tion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling
interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College
Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c., &c.
It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which
every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with
weakness, generally caused by a bad habit
in youth, the effects of which are dizziness,
pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in
the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy may be cured by
the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON
TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our
time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the
knowledge and researches of the most skilled Physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of
the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS
REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may
rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SE-CRECY and attention being paid to their
cases, which has so successfully distinguished
us heretofore, as a Physician in our PECE-LIAR department of professional Practice,
for the past twenty-five years.

to be observed is, ladies should not take them
if they have reason to believe they are in
certain situations (the particulars of which
will be found on the wrapper accompanying
each box), though always safe and healthy,
so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

Angel Whispers.

Angel whispers! will they never Came to tell of golden realms;
Isles of beauty, smiling ever
In mystic sea of dreams!
Land of flowers and gems of spices,
And an atmosphere of love,
Where the dark-eyed girls entice us
In the fairy lands to rove.

Angel whispers, softly bringing,
From beyond the star-lit skies;
Echoes of the sweet songs ringing,
Through the vales of paradise;
Visions of bright fountains gushing
Nectar, washing golden sands,
And the red wine rivers rushing
By the pearl and amber strands.

Loving spirits hover near us,
Clothed in silent robes of light,
And with seraph voices woo us
To the regions of delight;
Voices of exquisite sweetness;
I would clasp your visionless forms,
But your wings of fairy loveliness,
Still elude my outstretched arms.

Angel whispers, gently stealing
Where the hush of death surrounds,
With their holy hush of healing
For the bruised spirit's wounds;
Breathing a delightful story
Of bright immortality,
And a land of love and glory,
Far beyond life's troubled sea.

Scraps.

The true felicity of life is to be free from anxiety, to understand our duties towards God and man, and to enjoy the present without too much concern about the future.

History resembles a tree, which gradually loses its foliage and limbs, and in time becomes a shapeless trunk.

Our young ladies are the sweetest and most truthful in the world; at least there are none other who are so candidly.

Although men are accused for not knowing their own weakness, yet, perhaps, as few know their own strength. It is in men as in soils, where sometimes there is a vein of gold which the owner knows not of.

Your poverty will never prove a disgrace to you, unless you hasten to be rich by any illegal proceedings.

It is no misfortune for a nice young lady to lose her good name if a nice young gentleman gives her a better.

The Chinese do some things more sensibly than we, who are reputed to be a higher civilized class. For instance, the family physician is paid a small stipulated sum per month, and the pay stops during all the time that any of the family are sick. Law and justice are dispensed gratis. A poor man may sue his rich neighbor without costing him a cent, while the rich are not allowed counsel, but each one tells his own story to the Mandarin, who decides the dispute summarily.

No man can leave a better legacy to the world than a well-educated family.

Great thoughts are not produced amid noise and mirth; the mind's thunderbolts, like the clouds, are formed in silence and darkness.

Men like animals, are too apt to be frightened by sound—mere sound.

Submission is the footprint of faith in the pathway of sorrow.

If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be such that none will believe him.

That of which proud people are often the proudest is their pride.

Never eat brown bread when you can get white, unless indeed you like the brown best.

Flowers. If you don't love flowers yourself, don't quarrel with those who do. It is a defect in your nature which you ought to be sorry for, rather than abuse those who are more gifted. Of what possible "use" is the rainbow, we should like to know? and yet a wiser than you did not think the earth complete without it.

In mixed company be readier to hear than to speak, and put people upon talking of what is their own way; for then you will both oblige them, and be most likely to improve their conversation.

Thirty-seven words, and perhaps more, can be formed from the letters composing the word Melodion.

Miscellaneous.

Playing the Vixen.

Captain Goddard was a retired sea captain, who, having accumulated a very respectable share of this world's goods, and having moreover, a pretty daughter to look after, decided to pass the remnant of his days quietly, on land.

His daughter, I have said, was pretty. I will add, that she was very pretty. When she came to the age of eighteen, there was more than one young gentleman in town who would have willingly relieved her of her name, and counted it no sacrifice.

Young ladies are apt to have their preferences, however; Emma Goddard had hers. It happened that she encountered more than once, a young lawyer named Henry Foster, who had just commenced practice in the town, and the intimacy was so far established, that the latter had ventured to propose.

Emma accepted him for her own part, but suggested that it would be well not to mention the subject to her father just yet, as he had a temper of his own, and might very possibly refuse at once. She counselled her lover to wait till they should have time to become acquainted, and her father favorably impressed.

Meanwhile Captain Goddard had plans of his own for his daughter. In early life he had been very intimate with a school companion, who had now been dead for some years and left a son, now a young man.

Captain Goddard had never seen this young man, but had, with his usual impetuosity, decided that, as his daughter was now of a marriageable age, the son of his friend should become her husband.

Having resolved upon a thing, he was always impatient until it was carried out. He accordingly dispatched a note to the young man, inviting him to his house; and, receiving a prompt acceptance, with the day of his arrival fixed, he condescended to mention the fact to his daughter.

Emma soon made her appearance. What is it father? she asked.

How old are you? asked her father, abruptly.

Going on for nineteen, she answered playfully.

So I thought. Well, Emma, I've come to the conclusion that it is time for you to be married.

Have you? said Emma, suddenly interested. How long are you going to give me to hunt up a husband?

No trouble on that point. I've got one in my eye.

You have, exclaimed Emma, in dismay.

Yes. Would you like to know who it is? Yes—yes.

It's Hamilton Jones, son of my old friend John Jones—used to go to school with me.

What—Hamilton.

No, of course not, his father. Well, I've sent for him. He will be here—let me see; to-day's Tuesday—he'll be here day after to-morrow.

Does he know he's to marry me? inquired Emma, demurely.

Not yet, but I shall tell him.

Did you ever see him?

No.

Perhaps he's homely.

What if he is? The homeliest men make the best husbands.

Hush you jade! I do believe you're laughing at me. Yes, I was a good husband, but then I don't mean to deny that some who are not homely are capable of being such. That's all I wanted to say to you. You must prepare to receive Hamilton Jones as your future husband. So look your prettiest by Thursday.

But father, said Emma, changing her tone. I really don't want to be married.

Don't want to be married? That's all bosh; I never knew a young girl yet that didn't want to be married.

But I really don't.

Then you shall. Do you think I am going to have any old maids in my family?

But, suggested Emma, with a sudden thought, perhaps he won't have me?

No fear of that. You're good looking—inherited all my good looks—he'll be glad of the chance.

But suppose he shouldn't? persisted Emma. There's no supposing such a case. However, if he shouldn't choose to marry my daughter when I have taken the trouble to send for him, I'll—I'll—

You'll let me marry whom I please.

What a peremptory old father I've got, thought Emma. Now I must devise means to make myself disagreeable. I must see Henry this very evening.

The meeting was held, and a plan of operations decided upon. What this was will appear in the sequel.

Hamilton Jones made his appearance at the residence of Captain Goddard, on the day which had been fixed.

He was a timid man, with features just passable, but wearing a timid, irresolute expression. He certainly had none of that superabundant irritability, which, in the case of Captain Goddard, found vent in ways not always orthodox.

I won't say anything to him at first, thought Captain Goddard. I'll let him see Emma, and see what impression is made upon him.

They met first at the dinner table. Young Jones was evidently quite struck with the beauty of the young lady, as her father did not fail to observe with satisfaction; Emma observed the same thing, but not with the same degree of pleasure.

He isn't in the least agreeable, she thought. He's as homely as he can be, and looks as if he had not the courage to say his soul is his own. I'm very much afraid he'll fall into father's snare, and offer himself to me. I must try to impress him with the idea that I am a virago. That will be sure to frighten one of his temperament.

Meanwhile Captain Goddard had summoned young Jones to a private conference. How do you like my daughter? he asked.

She is charming, said the young man warily.

Eh! glad to hear you say so. But perhaps you only say it to gratify me.

No sir; not at all. How can I help saying so of one so beautiful?

Well, I am glad to hear it, as I said—Shall I tell you why I sent for you.

If you please.

Yes, you see your father was an old friend of mine—an old schoolmate, in fact—and I've been thinking (as it is about time for Emma to be married) there's no one that I would sooner trust her to than the son of my old friend.

Indeed, sir, I feel highly flattered by this mark of preference.

Oh, no thanks. As I was going to say, you can tell at the end of a fortnight, whether you like her well enough to propose.

But, sir, she may not be favorably impressed.

Oh, I'll take care that she interposes no obstacles. There, that's enough. You can go. Remember that I give you a fortnight to study her character in.

Young Jones left the room, feeling that he had a most delightful mission to execute. He had been much struck with Emma's beauty and graceful bearing at the table, and rather exulted at the thought of how much envy he would excite among the young men. Then, too, his vanity was excited by the Captain's communication; and he thought that it only depended upon his own will to win and wear the beautiful rose.

Absorbed in an agreeable train of reflections, he walked out into the garden. There were two walks, separated by a hedge, but running parallel with each other.

As he was walking slowly along, he heard the sound of a voice, evidently excited.

Looking through the hedge, what was his surprise to recognize in the speaker the beautiful Emma, of whom he had just been dreaming.

She was scolding violently a little girl of about twelve.

You little wretch! screamed Emma, didn't I tell you never to touch this rose bush? Didn't you know it was mine, and I was saving the roses for a particular purpose?

I forgot, said the girl putting the apron to her eyes.

Don't tell me! said Emma sharply. Come here, you jade. There, take that! and that! and that! administering at each word a blow.

Oh! oh! oh! exclaimed the little girl. Don't scream so, they'll hear you at the house. And don't you take another rose from the bush, or I'll best you to a jelly.

Good heavens! thought Hamilton, who had been a concealed witness of the scene; he would imagine that one outwardly so beautiful could have such a temper. She looked like a fury, I declare.

Emma, meanwhile, had got into the house. The little girl sat down on the grass, and covered her eyes with her apron.

Oh, what a temper Miss Emma has! she soliloquized. That's the third licking she has given me this week.

The third in one week! repeated Hamilton in dismay; who would have thought it?

He pursued his walk with his idea of Emma somewhat changed—for the worse.

He could hardly identify her when he saw her at the dinner table; gentle, self-possessed, and to appearance, amiable—as the virago of the morning.

I must have been dreaming, he thought.

But the next day another scene transpired which convinced him that it had been only too real.

The two parlors connected with each other by folding doors.

In the front parlor sat young Jones with a book in his hand. The folding doors were so nearly closed that, while all that was said in one room could be heard in the other, scarcely anything could be seen.

Hamilton heard the door of the back parlor open, and some one enter. From what afterwards happened, he conjectured that it was Emma and the little girl before alluded to.

Where is Mr. Jones, Clara? asked Emma, in her usual voice.

He's gone out, Miss Emma.

He is, is he? Then, Miss, I'd like to know what you meant by not watering my flowers this morning?

I did, Miss Emma.

Don't tell me that, you trollop. You're telling me a falsehood. Bring me that stick.

Oh don't beat me, Miss Emma.

Then don't deserve it.

I—I didn't mean to.

Here followed several sounding slaps, accompanied by shrieks from Clara.

Quite disgusted, young Jones took his hat and silently left the house.

Before I'd marry such a virago I'd—I'd shoot myself. One might as well commit suicide as to admit such a fury in the house.

No wonder her father wished to get her married off. He was very kind, upon my word, to offer her to me. I'll tell him this very night that I cannot marry her.

Must go! exclaimed Captain Goddard. And my daughter?

I—I don't think, sir, that we should be suited to each other.

Not suited to each other! exclaimed the Captain, angrily. What objections do you bring to her; isn't she beautiful?

Yes, sir; but—

But what?

Her temper, sir.

Well, what can you say against her temper? It's as fine a temper as—as mine, sir. She was never known to be angry.

Young Jones looked incredulous, which enraged the Captain still more.

I see what you mean, sir. You've insulted my family. Out of my house in ten minutes or my servants shall put you out.

The young man took the hint.

Now, call Emma, vociferated the Captain.

That young gentleman has refused your hand, said he, irritated. What do you think he says of you?

I don't know, said Emma, demurely.

He says that he objects to your temper.

And what did you say, father?

I ordered him out of the house. But you shall be married in a week. I've determined it and it shall be. Is there any body you think of that's likely to have you?

Henry Foster proposed to me last night, said Emma.

And what did you tell him?

That you wished me to marry Mr. Jones.

Well, that's all over, and you shall marry Foster in a week. Here, bring me my pen and paper.

The young lawyer in the course of the next day, received the following note:

DEAR SIR: My daughter informs me that you have proposed for her hand. I give my consent, provided you will marry in one week. I had other views for her, but found out the man to be a rascal. Yours in haste, LEWEL GODDARD.

The young lawyer answered this note in person, and on that day week Emma had a grand wedding. It is needless to say that the roughish girl was handsomely recompensed for the unpleasant part she took in the little deception which terminated so happily.

New Items of Taxation.

In consequence of the opposition manifested by the different trades and manufacturing interests to the taxation of their particular branches, the Committee of the House resolved, some time ago, to suppress all new features and items that might in future be added to the bill. A correspondent of the Sunday Mercury, who is fond of a "goak," sends to that paper the following list of suppressed items:

For smoking a 3 cent cigar, 6 cents; other Havanas in proportion.

Smoking a meerschaum pipe, 8 cents; if colored, 16 cents.

For every quid of tobacco, 3 cents; if begged from a friend, 6 cents.

Jersey Champagne, 10 cents a bottle, (that being its full value); other foreign wines in proportion.

Calling for a drink, 5 cents; with peppermint in it, 3 cents extra.

Riding in a city railroad car, 8 cents; if compelled to stand, 10 cents.

For wearing dollar-jewelry, $2 each article.

Boot blacks, 5 cents for each job.

Reading the speech of a Congressman, 10 cents a line, and 3 months imprisonment.

Attending church, 50 cents an hour; if a member, 25 cents. At Beecher's, the prices are to be the same as at first class theatres.

On ministers attending billiard matches,

$2; if enthusiastically received, twice that sum, and drinks for the party.

For smiling on the Sabbath day, 25 cents for the first one, and 50 cents for each following one.

For bowing to a lady in the street, 10 cents.

All unmarried ladies $25 per year; California widows, $50 per year.

For being poor, $10 a month.

White shirts, 20 cents a month; colored ones, $1.

Buckwheat cakes are to pay a tax of three cents per dozen; with molasses on, 6 cents per dozen.

For using an augur, 30 cents a month.

For using a corkscrew, 45 cents a month.

For looking over the fence, 10 cents.

License to drive your cow to pasture, 50 cents; if over a mile, 75 cents.

For licking your wife, 10 cents each time; spanking the baby, 10 cents; wallowing any child over ten years of age, 25 cents.

License to boil the tea kettle, 25 cents.

For scolding the servant girl, 50 cents.

For license to catch bullheads, $25; to catch eels, $6; shad, salmon and sturgeon, $8.

To open oysters, $5; clams, $3 50.

For privilege to sit on the dock and catch shiners, $1 per month; if you lean against a pole, $1 50.

Salt mackerel, if caught in fresh water streams, 3 cents each.

To sit on the curb stone and peddle apples, $8 a month.

For the privilege of gathering peach-pits, $5 a month.

and in which I can never share. Relief from great responsibilities, and contentment with humble clothing, humble fare, humble society, humble aims and ambitions, humble means and humble labors—ah! how many weary, overloaded men—how many disappointed hearts—have sighed for such a boon, and sighed knowing they could never receive it.—Timothy Tildcomb.

POCKET PICKED. Mr. J. P. Newcomb, of this town had his pocket picked of a wallet, containing a considerable amount of bills, notes, &c., on Thursday evening, 23d inst., while going on board of the cars at the Old Colony Depot, on Kneeland street, Boston. The same game was played that has before been so successful in that vicinity, of crowding around the unwary passenger as he was about entering the cars.

PROMOTION. Joseph Wm. Morton, of this place, has been commissioned by the Governor, as 2d Lieutenant in the Second Cavalry, Captain McGee, now, or lately, stationed at Ship Island.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN BROAD STREET.—About seven o'clock on Saturday evening last, as two new cars for the Quincy railroad were being taken over the Dorchester Horse Railroad track in Broad Street, a boy, ten years old, named John Carroll, attempted to jump upon one of them, but made a misstep and fell upon the track. The car wheels passed over his head, crushing the skull and killing him instantly. The body was removed to the residence of the boy's parents at 202 Broad street, where a Coroner's inquest was held. No blame was attached to any one connected with the cars.

A DAGUERRETYPE. The Hingham Journal of the 23d instant publishes a letter from a member of the 23d Regiment, (Barnard's Division,) in which honorable mention is made of our townsman, Alonzo Jones. The writer, after giving a graphic description of the scene presented at Newbern, since their occupation, says, the fine arts are about to be revived here; Mr. Jones, of Quincy, will, in a few days open a daguerreotype saloon, and gradually we shall gather round us many of the refinements to be found in older communities.

JACK FROST. On Saturday and Sunday evenings, the low lands in this vicinity were visited by frost. The tender plants in some localities suffered severely; but the fruit trees, it is thought, escaped injury.

MEMORANDUMS. We have had the pleasure of examining a large number of curiosities, brought from Virginia by our townsman, John O. Holden, which he gathered while on a visit to that sacred soil, now one vast battlefield, among which were:

A large Colt's pistol, size used by cavalry, picked up between Fairfax Court House and Centreville; pieces of Fairfax Court House and Church; piece of shell thrown by the rebels at the Mass 13th, at the fight near Bolivar; a wooden spoon taken from one of the rebel huts near Winchester; human bone, bullets and buttons from Bull Run battle ground; bugle and buttons taken from clothing of prisoners captured at Winchester.

ACCIDENT. Charles White, a young and active youth employed in Mr. Joseph Arcey, Jr.'s store, in this village, cracked his collar bone on the 23d inst., while playing with some of his companions.

HON. JOSIAH QUINCY. The Boston Transcript announces that the venerable Josiah Quincy, now upwards of ninety years of age, having been confined to his house many months in consequence of a fractured limb, has so far recovered that he rode out on Monday of last week, and stopped to greet his friends on "Change."

He has since changed his locality; he is now a resident of Quincy—and occupies his summer resort, in the picturesque spot, which overlooks Squantum bay.

CARPETS FOR THE PEOPLE. See the advertisement in our paper of the New England Carpet Company.

WASHINGTON SAFE. Last Monday morning the citizens of this place were greatly excited owing to a proclamation from Gov. Andrew stating that the rebels had attacked and repulsed Gen. Banks' division, and were about to take possession of the National Capital, and called upon the Militia to rush to its rescue. The Hancock Light Guard, of this town, which constitutes a part of the Fourth Regiment, with their usual promptness, were soon formed into line, and left for Boston, from whence they expected to proceed to Washington immediately. The troops started with the intention of serving for three months, but being a very effective body of men they made quick work, and, after a three days' campaign in which they secured Washington from all future danger, were, we believe, nearly all restored to their homes in safety. Dulce est decorum est pro patria mori.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MAY 28, 1862.

What a pretty time we had here on Monday. Out came the Governor's Proclamation, that the rebels menace again the National Capital. They have attacked and routed Major General Banks, are advancing on Harper's Ferry, and are marching on Washington. The President calls on Massachusetts to rise once more for its rescue and defence. No wonder that the alarm bells were rung in our country towns, and the tocsin of war sounded every where. To the honor of the Old Bay State Boys, they responded with alacrity, and soon nearly four thousand men reported here to the call of the Governor. Now it turns out that it was a false alarm, and that the militia of Massachusetts have been rallied under a false pretense. But who is to blame for this blunder? The Governor certainly acted under orders. The Journal of last evening says that the Secretary of War was the alarmist, and upon him rests the responsibility of the deception. We shall see. The popularity of Mr. Secretary Stanton is on the wane. He has put a censorship upon the newspaper press; that was wrong. Freedom of the press is the palladium of our liberties. General Banks' defeat is laid to his charge; that remains to be demonstrated.

The anniversary meetings held this week in Boston are well attended, judging from the crowded state of the city—all the world and the rest of mankind appears to be here. Wendell Phillips let off his big guns before the New England anti-Slavery Society at the Melodeon this forenoon. In his remarks, alluding to the various acts of the Government since the rebellion commenced, he spoke of the act of General Hunter, and thought that twenty-five per cent. of the chances of preserving this Union had been lost by President Lincoln's Message rescinding General Hunter's Proclamation. He was severe on Governor Banks because he was not thoroughly anti-Slavery. He contended that all the reliable information that our armies have received of the rebel forces and movements were from contrabands. This kind of information he contended saved the remnant of Banks' army and enabled him to retreat in good order—which he certainly did, giving him a high place among our military chiefs. Mr. Phillips contends that neither confiscation nor emancipation will save the Union—another discouraging remark. He is for having McClellan removed from the head of the army forthwith and a General put in his place who can fight. He wishes a change of Generals in the Western army, contending that Sigel should be put in Halleck's place, because the latter shuts contrabands out of his lines. Butler—he honored him—half brutal, was just the man to rule New Orleans. In Massachusetts he did not amount to just the man, and the Government should take a leaf from his book. The President and the Cabinet he said were reasonable in their delay—and that they should be impeached, for allowing the French Minister to go down to Richmond with their consent to confer with rebels. That Minister had no right for any purpose to hold conference with rebels in arms. He wanted the Government to stand where Governor Andrew did in response to Stanton's letter. He was very severe upon General McClellan for his masterly inactivity, and upon the President, for putting back into slavery one million of negroes that General Hunter had a few days before declared free. I noticed at the meeting men of all shades of political opinion, and they seemed attentive listeners.

The startling news of Monday gave a downward pressure upon the stock and money market, and business generally was collapsed—but the false alarm having passed over, and our gallant troops returned to their peaceful homes, matters are all right again. Soon we shall hear of the evacuation of Richmond, which will be glory enough for one day.

Parson Brownlow has made a decided hit in our modern Athens and is much lionized here. He is said to possess high moral and intellectual qualities—singularly pure in personal habits—but in his addresses will bring the thunder down upon the heads of scoundrels and secessionists, at the expense of epithets of a profane odor.

THE HOMESTEAD BILL. The following synopsis of the Homestead Bill, recently passed in Congress, is by Speaker Grow:

All the lands owned by the Government are open to settlement under it in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to each person. Any person who is a citizen of the United States, or has declared intention to become such, who is 21 years old, or the head of a family, or has served in the military or naval service of the country during this rebellion, can make the entry on the payment of ten dollars and the fees of the Register and Receiver of the Land Office. That is all the settler has to pay at any time. The act takes effect the first of January next, and requires a residence and cultivation of five years to perfect the title. Any person can enter, under this act, land on which he has a pre-emption claim.

For the Patriot.

Ship Island.

The following letter addressed to Mr. Peter B. Turner, has been handed us for publication. Mr. Morton was a Student at Law in Cambridge College; but feeling a deep interest in the success of the Government in suppressing the rebellion, he laid aside his books and enlisted as a private in the Mounted Rifle Rangers, a company of Cavalry, attached to Gen. Butler's Division. It will be seen in another part of our paper, that he has been promoted to a Second Lieutenantcy, an appointment made upon the recommendation of his superior officers.

SHIP ISLAND, MAY 4, 1862: SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

DEAR PETER: Your letter was gladly received—some two weeks ago. I have delayed writing you for want of something that would be news. This barren island is fast becoming quite a place. The fort that the rebels destroyed when they left for the main land is being rebuilt. Buildings of all descriptions have been erected. Great quantities of army stores, wagons, shot, powder and cannon are landed every day, from a score of ships that are floating in the harbor. This is intended to be a great military depot for operations in the Gulf. A little more than a week ago, Gen. Butler left the Island for Fort Jackson, on the Mississippi River, with a force of ten thousand men. Yesterday we heard that with the aid of Porter's Mortar Fleet they have taken Fort Jackson and landed some of the troops on the levees; and I think I can safely say that the Crescent City is now our own. To-morrow an additional force of five thousand men will leave. Our Company with the horses go the last part of the week. The victories at Corinth and Winchester sent a thrill of joy through the camp—and although we mourn the loss of so many brave comrades, the glorious results of the victory to our country dried up all our tears. History will record their names and we will transmit their noble deeds from father to son to all succeeding generations. We have shown to the world our ability to be soldiers; how we can submit to discipline; how we can suffer; how we love our country and its laws; how we can fight, and how we can die. If we pass successfully through this last ordeal, I know that liberty in the future, in every clime, must always triumph. In the words of another, "Therefore shall the Republic go on increasing in goodness and power until her borders shall end only in the remotest corners of the world, and the whole earth shall, beneath her shadowing wings, become a universal republic." Such a glorious uprising of a free people against wicked men, bent upon the destruction of the best government upon earth, will make the tyrants of the Old World tremble on their rotten and decaying thrones.

The Emancipation Message is just what I have long looked for. You know that my ideas of emancipation are somewhat stronger and more decided than those set forth in the Message; but the President knows better the minds of the people than I do; yet I do know that if we neglect the opportunity to break the chains from four million of bondmen, the execration of heaven will be upon us.

The weather here is exceedingly fine. Throughout the whole day a gentle breeze sweeps across the Island, and the sun is not so intense as to be uncomfortable. It is on the mainland, where the climate is so dangerous and contagious of fever, and it is here we are going; but we all hope that our stay will be short, and that the order, march, will soon come and peace be declared. Never for a moment have I regretted the step I have taken, and although sometimes I have suffered, it will be a consolation to me in after years, that I did not refuse to serve my country in her hour of need.

The mail goes in a short time and I must stop. May Heaven crown with success your efforts, whatever they may be, to the cause of freedom. Remember me to your parents and sister. Respectfully yours,

J. W. MORTON.

P. S. The ship that was to take this has been delayed until to-day, (Wednesday, May 7.) Last night a large fleet came in from New Orleans, which we think in a few days will be used against Mobile. The strong arm of Uncle Sam, with his two thousand cannon loaded with hot shot and shell, was more than the New Orleans people could stand. Mobile will fall in the same way.

Take this to my father, for it is the latest date that I have written under. When you write direct to J. W. M., Captain McGee's Cavalry—Shepley's Brigade, Ship Island. It will then go where we are.

A CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION. Mrs. Nahum Whipple of South Braintree, celebrated her one hundred birthday last week, when many of her children and a large number of friends and neighbors called to congratulate her.

RELIGIOUS NOTICE. KE-WA-NE-ZHO, the son of a Chippewa Chief, will speak in the Universalist Church next Sunday afternoon at half-past two, upon the customs, religion and needs of the Indian.

Leonard B. Harrington.

The following letter which brings the sad news of the sudden death of one of the brave and true sons of Quincy, who belonged to Co. K., Mass. 18th, was received by Wyman Abercrombie, Esq., from his brother-in-law, and has been kindly handed to us for publication. Mr. Harrington died on New Bridge road, near Kidd's Mills, (twelve miles from Richmond, Va.) May 23d, 1862:—

MAY 23d, 1862.

Brother Wyman:—In the hour of sadness our hearts and thoughts turn towards home for that kind sympathy and consolation that we all feel the want of in this life, and more abundantly feel the need of in the trials we are called upon to pass through, in this our country's cause. Danger and privations we forget when we walk the more pleasant paths and in the quiet, cool shade of peace and plenty. But when we are called upon to pay the last tribute and sad rights to one who has been our constant companion for nearly a year, one whose touch of the elbow you could always feel in the time of danger, one whose social intercourse was pleasant to every one who felt its influence, we cannot but feel that there is a place made blank—one that cannot be filled.

Such was our loss last night when our friend and brother, Corporal Leonard B. Harrington, breathed his last. He died like a true soldier, with his face towards Richmond, but his strength was not equal to his fidelity and ambition. The fatigue and exposures of the field were too much for him to endure.

The first that came to my notice of his illness was on the march from West Point to Cumberland Landing, May 13th. This was a long and hard march. He was not able to make the whole distance in one day, but came into Camp the next morning looking very much worn down. Since that time he has not been in the ranks but has come along with the baggage train; this he has been able to do till yesterday morning when we were obliged to put him in the ambulance; when he arrived here yesterday afternoon he was very much fatigued, not being able to stand alone. I will here say that the Doctors advised him to stop the morning we left Cumberland, but he did not like the idea of being sent to the Hospital and thought he would recover if he could come along in the rear. This was a great mistake, for our marches were hard and the weather bad. He was one who made but few complaints, but we all could see he was on the decline. The Doctors did not think him in any immediate danger till last night about dark, when he began to fail rapidly till he expired—twenty minutes past nine o'clock. Daniel French, Peter Marque and myself were present at the time; most of the Company was off on picket duty. He did not seem inclined to make any conversation in his last hours. He died as he lived—quietly and peacefully.

As there is no possibility of sending his remains home we shall bury him near this place, and shall mark the spot where he rests. The distance is so short from Richmond, we may have a chance to remove him to that place and from there home. His funeral will take place this afternoon with appropriate services. You will probably receive this letter before the sad news reaches his family, as I think no letter will be sent them by this mail. I would suggest that you bear the sad tidings to his wife or family, and in doing so assure her that she has the heartfelt sympathy of his brothers in arms. Knowing she has lost a true and loving husband, and our country a true soldier, the loss we mutually mourn.

We shall leave him here with our hearts filled with sadness, and try to emulate him in courage and rectitude.

With this I enclose a lock of his hair, knowing it would be kindly received by his wife and friends.

Truly, your brother,
in haste,
LUTHER S. BENT.

The loss of the insurance companies of Hartford by the fire in Troy will not be much less than $100,000.

A wit says that the successes of our navy on the Southern coast will soon enable the President to be hospitable enough to open a little port almost every day after dinner.

Abington has voted to celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the incorporation of that town, which occurs on the 10th day of June next. The Selectmen with nine others are empowered to procure an orator and music, and to make all necessary arrangements.

The Nashville Union says that the streets of that city were full of drays and wagons, hauling cotton for a Northern market.

Fifteen hundred bushels of cotton seed, from Newbern, (N. C.) have arrived at Washington, consigned to the Agricultural Bureau of the Patent Office. The North Carolina seed has been selected as best fitted for the soil and climate of the Border and Western States.

The amount of salt manufactured on the Saginaw River is six hundred barrels daily.

Kossuth has lately lost his second daughter, aged eighteen.

It is ascertained from an authentic source that the expenditures of the Government, from April, 1861, to the present time, has not exceeded a million of dollars a day.

There are dangerous $1 counterfeiters in circulation, purporting to be issued by the Boylston Bank, Boston.

A vessel arrived at Boston from Bermuda one day last week, laden with a new crop of onions, potatoes and tomatoes.

The seal fishery of Newfoundland has this year been a complete failure.

Prentiss says, Wise, Floyd, Pillow and Price are the four-number of rebel defeat.

A German woman at Winsted, (Conn.) thinks, "we in this country don't know anything about war yet." During the existence of a war in Germany, she was compelled to work in a blacksmith's shop for three years, so scarce were men.

Minster Adams, at London, has presented a claim to the British Government for the restoration of the ship Emily St. Peters, the captain of which rose upon the prize crew and conveyed her to Liverpool after her capture by the United States fleet for violation of the blockade.

The cost of the new Ericsson iron-clad batteries is $400,000 each.

The Gardiner, (Me.) Journal says that in the town of Pittsfield a woman was seen plowing. She was holding the plow and driving the oxen herself, no man or boy assisting her, nor none in the field.

The crops in England are said to be very luxuriant and promising.

The number of emigrants from Ireland to this country has, notwithstanding the war, been much greater during the past three months than during the corresponding season last year.

A little girl named Addie Nutting, aged two and a half years, of Mason Village (N. H.) died on Saturday morning last from eating matches two days before. She had eaten nearly ninety matches.

Five hundred and fifty thousand hogs were packed in Chicago the past season.

When Mobile falls, the entire state of Alabama falls with it, for the rivers of the State—the Tombigbee, the Tensaw, the Alabama, &c.—traverse its whole surface from north to south, and are navigable by our invulnerable gunboats, not only to Montgomery, the first rebel capital, but to nearly all other points of value.

The Government pays the expenses of all sick and wounded soldiers sent home, until they are fully recovered and restored to active service, or discharged with a pension.

The Richmond Dispatch of May 2d states, that eggs were selling for seventy-five cents a dozen, and butter for a dollar and a half per pound.

The loss by the fire in the woods on Long Island is estimated at three quarters of a million of dollars.

There are about eight thousand rebel prisoners at Chicago.

We would call the attention of our readers to a change in the time of receiving and closing the Mail in this village. For particulars see advertisement.

For the Patriot.

Fresh Air.

BY F. CLARK.

Man acts strangely. Although a current of fresh air is the very life of his lungs, he seems indefatigable in the exercise of his inventive powers to deprive himself of this heavenly blessing. Thus, he carefully closes his bed chambers against its entrance, and he prefers that his lungs should receive the mixed effluvia from his cellar and larder—as also the impure air deprived of its oxygenated principles, by the repeated inhalation into the lungs. Why should man be so terrified at the admittance of night air into any of his apartments? It is Nature's ever flowing current, and never carries the destroying angel with it.

See how healthy the little lark springs from the twig at the dawn, having inhaled Nature's pure air for a night! no hoarseness in its lungs—its voice is ever clear. So with all instinctive beings that live in the open air. Take them from their native element, confine them to close apartments, and how soon they become sickly. Air pure and free, supports life, purifies the blood, and he that deprives himself of it, denies himself of one of Heaven's best blessings, and is in some sense a self-murderer.—He shortens his days, cuts off his usefulness, and deranges the plans of Nature, and thus commits a sin against the Creator. Do not be afraid to follow Nature's laws and be a partaker of her blessings.

The Second Regiment was the only one from this State with Banks, and it behaved in a most admirable manner.

GOODHUE'S

Drummer.

LADIES and Gents—if you are wise,
You'll study to economise;
Be careful when you "goods," shall buy,
You do not pay for them too high.

"A sixpence saved"—we all have learned,
"Is equal to a shilling earned;"
This "gentle hint" we give to you,
That you may patronize GOODHUE.

One thing we'd have you understand,
He deals in nothing "contraband";
Another thing we'd have you know—
No other man sells "goods" so low.

GOODHUE'S customers will "suit"
In best of style, from HEAD to FOOT;
And make them feel, when they want more,
The place to buy is at his STORE.

Some folks it very much surprises,
How 'tis he's selling at such prices;
Some think he some time will rue it,
But GOODHUE knows just how to do it.

GOODHUE is bound to make a racket,
Assisted by young HUNT and HACKETT;
And those who wish to make life sunny,
Should trade with them—and SAVE THEIR MONEY.

As Spring is coming on—and Summer—
He sends this forth instead of "drummer";
He wishes this, the understanding—
GOODHUE sells lowest—WEYMOUTH LANDING.

*It is a custom in some places for merchants to send out men—who, in business parlance, are called "drummers," to "drum up" customers; but, as we advise our patrons to study economy, by purchasing their goods OF US, we—wishing to practice what we teach—send out this MODEST little circular INSTEAD, as much less expensive.

DR. LA CROIX'S

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

ON THE

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only 75 cents. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, bluishings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling stories of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c. &c. It is a faithful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled Physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore, as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for Medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. DeLancy's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "MÉNSTRUO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE," for married ladies whose health, and the health of their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

THE SECRETS OF YOUTH UNVEILED. A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—A solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insidious progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and developing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.

It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent stamps.

Attendance daily, from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, and on Sundays from 10 till 5 P. M.

Medicines with full directions sent to any part of the United States or Canada, by patients communicating their symptoms by letter. Business correspondence strictly confidential.

THE LILACS.

That was a right joyous season!

Sang the thrush outside the room,

Crept the fragrance through the window,

For the lilacs were in bloom.

One could sit and read and listen,

Half in sunshine, half in gloom—

Sunlight sweetest, shadow softest,

Where the lilacs were in bloom.

As in some Italian grotto,

When one listens for the sea,

And there comes but sweet-breathed silence,

Let itself a melody:

So one waited for one's fancies,

There to murmur words of thought;

But the languid, loving brightness,

With no spirit-sound was fraught.

There was silence in the fragrance,

In the sunshine, in the gloom,

In the rest and in the gladness,

Where the lilacs were in bloom.

Sometimes in the garden trembled

Voices like a lullaby;

Sometimes village church-bells blended,

Nigh and far, and far and nigh;

But within that chamber's shadow,

In the book-disordered room,

There was sweet, untroubled silence

When the lilacs were in bloom.

The Two Beauties of the Camberwell Assemblies, 1778.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "AGGESDEN VICARAGE."

Aunt Margaret, it is too dark to see the embroidery any longer. Tell me a story.

The speaker looked somewhat too old to prefer such a request. But Isabella Redmayne Wentworth, at "sweet seventeen," a woman in many things, was in others still a child.

Papa is asleep—fast asleep, she continued,

following the glance of Mrs. Margaret Fordyce to the gentleman seated in the arm-

chair by the blazing fire.

My dear, I have told you all my stories

again and again.

But you must have some more, or make one.

Mrs. Margaret, who was not the girl's real aunt, but loved her dearly, looked long into her face.

Auntie! please be quick.

How like you are to your grandmother,

Elsie!

Not half so handsome as that portrait upstairs. I wish I were!

Child, I do not; said Mrs. Margaret, with her calm sweetness. Isabella Wentworth's beauty was a dower that she already feared

might spoil as good a heart and as generous

a temper as Herefordshire could boast. Favor is deceitful and beauty is vain, but the woman that feareth the Lord shall be praised.

Isabella was silent a minute, but from her gaze into the placid, softened face above her,

did not draw one inference, that beauty

might endure to the last years of the longest

life, and but then be at its sweetest.

Well, my love, but your story—I have thought of one.

When I was young—sixty years ago now—

we lived at Camberwell, a very different place then from now, my dear, added the old lady with something of a sigh, a gay place,

too, but we were happy and young enough to be gay. Well, my love, we had our monthly assemblies, now passed away or despised. At these assemblies often met two of the greatest beauties whom you could have found within ten miles of London then; now

I think you might search England through,

in vain, to equal one of them. My dear, I cannot give you their real names, so we will call them Augusta and Lucy.

How jealous they must have been of one another! Isabella interposed.

My love, said the old lady, much shocked,

they were the dearest friends. Augusta was a tall, fine girl of seventeen when I first knew her, with a handsome ingenious face, some what haughty, but very beautiful, nevertheless; it was her fine, upright figure and stately carriage that the gentlemen so admired. The old lady paused and sighed.

Lucy was only one year younger, and a little graceful thing with light hair and a fair complexion; her eyes I was told, were very lovely, blue and open. She loved Augusta with all her heart; they were companion

beauties, no rivals.

I should not like that!

My dear, may you ever find as dear a friend as Lucy did in Augusta; Lucy was poor, Augusta rich, yet she loved and sought

her. Well, month after month were these two girls admired, and many a husband given to either; and Mrs. Margaret smiled, but folks found they were mistaken: the year

came round and they still were Misses.—

Meantime, Lucy had been with her father—

poor thing she had no mother—to visit an uncle in—we will say, Berkshire. He was the Rector of a little country parish: the au-

turn was rainy; he had no wife—no children; and whilst her uncle and father were out shooting or fishing, Lucy was left alone

with the housekeeper, a tabby cat, and Robinson Crusoe.

I should have run home.

Mrs. Margaret smiled and paused.

My dear, they were the happiest days of her life; I was going to say the last happy days of her life, but that would have been

would have stood by herself, well displayed

by her hoop. Lucy watched her as she sailed up the aisle, and thought her the finest lady she had ever seen. My dear, she was also the cruelest.

Isabella looked up.

Mrs. Margaret smiled. But she was a very handsome woman for all that, my love,

and used her fan, and curtsied to the people with surpassing grace and dignity. Her wide skirts filled the little aisle, and so behind her walked the young Colonel. He—well my dear, he was the best looking man I ever saw; a better looking one than you can ever hope to see. He was dressed in a

Pompadour coat, laced with silver, and wore

one arm still in a sling. Well, and Lucy—

silly little Lucy—could not keep her eyes off

that fine, pleasant-looking gentleman. Yes,

his very looks were pleasant. Silly did I say she was? She was worse than silly—wrong. If she had that morning thought—

as she ought to have done—of man's Maker,

instead of man, and kept her eyes upon her book, almost all the trouble which she ever knew might have been spared. She and her father were to leave Berkshire the middle of that week. On the Tuesday young Col. Red-worth called to make his father's excuses; the poor old man could not leave the house, Well,

Lucy was sitting in the arbor working; silly

child—she longed to go in, but shame kept her out; she felt whose voice it was that she caught occasionally. Well, my dear, he and her uncle came out into the garden—

the Rector had in old times been the Colonel's

tutor—they came towards her, and Lucy

heard a frank, pleasant voice say:

Ah, do you remember that last lesson in the arbor, and how you said I would kill you before I'd done with it? I should be a more attentive pupil now, I hope; let us see it

again.

They turned towards the arbor; they came ship scampered over the floor. He hated rats intensely. Sober in a moment, and instantly upon killing the creature, he was instantly in hot pursuit with a boot-jack, breathing out threatnings and slaughter. While this was at its height, his friends used every argument to persuade him that the rat was a mere phantom of the brain—an illusion of the invisible spirit of wine—in short, one of the terrible hallucinations of delirium tremens. But he paid little heed to all this, until suddenly he missed the rat, one of his friends having dexterously let it escape from the door. Then turning slowly towards them, with a ghastly laugh swelling from his throat he jumped into bed, saying to his companions as he covered his head in the bed-clothes—“Fellows—don’t say anything about this—I only made believe I thought it was a rat—I knew better all the time!”

He never had another spree.

“Born to no Master, of no Sect are we.”

HORSE RAILROAD. By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen by their card, that the managers of this road have made some important changes in the time of running their cars. For instance—the trains which leave Boston, have been altered to 15 instead of 10 minutes past the regular running hours; and the Sunday arrangement, has, in compliance with the wishes of the traveling community, especially those desirous of attending church, either in or out of the city, had an additional train added, which leaves at 8 o’clock in the morning.

SOMETHING FOR THE LADIES. “Chase’s Patent Buckle Garters. Now—it is not an invention worthy of the age, which appeals directly to the necessities of the ladies, we are out in our calculations. The Chase Garter, for the humble office for which it is intended, is said to be without a rival. It is pleasant to wear, durable, and embraces so many excellent qualities, that our powers fail us to enumerate them, so we leave it to the public to make the discovery for themselves. Ladies are requested to hand in their measure to Miss French, Milliner, on the Square, who has them for sale.

OUR INVALIDS. Charles W. Carver, William O. Pope, and Luke Rideout, Jr. who were returned on the sick list, of the Potomac army, a short time since, we are gratified to learn, are convalescent, and in a fair way of soon being restored to their usual good health. Mr. Carver’s complaint was rheumatic fever, which reduced him very low; Messrs. Pope and Rideout, intermittent, or slow fever, which is very prevalent in many localities in Virginia. A change of air and home scenes, will do much towards effecting a cure.

PRISONER’S TAKEN. This caption, which heads the advertisement of Mr. Lombard, to be found in another column of our paper to-day, took us by surprise, for we naturally supposed it was a fresh arrival of contrabands, which had been committed to his care. But we were soon undeceived, and found out the drift of our friend, who merely meant by this startling announcement that he had recently taken in a large and superior lot of men and boys’ ready-made clothing, adapted to the season, of a superior make, and at prices to suit the times, to which he wished to call our attention. We acknowledged ourselves his prisoner.

COMMISSIONED. Dr. William L. Faxon of Quincy has been commissioned Assistant Surgeon of the 32d Regiment.

THE STORM on Tuesday and Wednesday was uncommon severe. There was much rain fell, with a strong wind from the north-east. Our lowlands were inundated, and the streams swollen to their utmost bounds.

FROM SHIP ISLAND—NIMS’ BATTERY. A private letter, from a member of the Second Massachusetts, Nims’ Battery, dated Ship Island, May 15th, states that the Battery arrived on that day after a pleasant passage of twenty-two days from Port Monroe, in ship De Witt Clinton. Four of the one hundred and thirty-four horses attached to the Battery died on the passage. The men are all well, with one exception, and his illness is not serious. They were to remain at the Island for a time, to recruit the horses and men, but are under orders to report to Gen. Butler. The men are ready and anxious for active service. Colonel Neal Dow was in command at the Island.

APPLE BLOSSOMS. It was remarked two years ago, that there would be plenty of apples because the blossoms were of a deep pink color, that being a sure indication of fruit. The blossoms this year are abundant, but as white as snow; and if “signs” are to be relied on, there will be few apples, notwithstanding the splendid show of blossoms.

UNITED STATES SENATOR. Governor William Sprague, of Rhode Island, was on the 25th ult., elected United States Senator for the term of six years from the 4th of March next, to succeed Hon. James F. Simons.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JUNE 4, 1862.

The war, that solemn drama for the preservation of our National existence still goes on. Aside from all partisan feeling the duty of every loyal citizen is plain: to stand by the Union, and if need be, to fight and die for the Union. There is no half way course in the fearful contest before us. He that is not for the Union is against it. Ours, is a struggle against rebellion as high in proportions as huge Olympus—a contest of despotism against civil and religious liberty. It is not a war on the part of the North for conquest and dominion, but to preserve the Constitution, by suppressing treason of the deepest dye. In our defensive operations with the rebels, the time has past for forbearance and wide spread humanity. These are not the weapons to contend with a foe more merciless as belligerents, than the North American savage. The lex talionis is the well established principle of resort in ancient and modern warfare. The war to be successful for freedom needs a more vigorous prosecution than now practised, if we hope and expect success. To preserve the Constitution in all its purity should be the highest ambition of every citizen. Side issues may spring up, such as slavery, confiscation, taxation or even Mormonism. Abuses, or grave mistakes may grow out of the administration of the Federal Government. To err is human. Surely we have not reached the ne plus ultra in National measures. Some in the exuberance of their philanthropy desire the immediate emancipation of all the slaves; others, with no less generous hearts, are for gradual emancipation. This is not a war for abolition, or the aggrandizement of party, but to sustain National life. If faithful to our allegiance, we are “All Democrats all Federalists”—all friends of the General Government to defend, protect and preserve the Federal Constitution. We are advocates for equality of the States, and for the equal rights of all citizens, whether native or adopted. Honesty, integrity and fidelity should shine in the acts of our public men, and should be the only test for fitness to office and power.

To the moment of my writing the capture of Richmond is in abeyance; but the event must follow. The series of success by our armies in the South West are cheering indications. Every day brings some good news of our progress on the Mississippi River. Corinth has fallen, and the rebels are fast losing their strong holds on the Father of our Waters; a passage from the borders of Kentucky to the Gulf by the Federal forces, must soon follow as a logical sequence.

The celebration of the 224th anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company on Monday last, passed off very pleasantly. The Company made a fine appearance and had a good time. We noticed Governor Andrew in the procession in citizen’s dress. Although well posted in military matters, he appeared with the “Ancients” more like a minister than a soldier; his Aids were richly dressed in full uniform. Our highly respected friend, the editor of the Boston Herald, Edwin C. Bailey, Esq., was chosen Commander for the ensuing year; a better selection could not have been made, as he is every inch a soldier as well as a gentleman. By the way, he is talked of strongly as a candidate for Governor of the Old Bay State at the election in November. The ability and success of the Herald are evidences of his fitness for any public office. A more fearless advocate for civil and religious liberty—for the Union and Constitution, as it is, we have not among us.

Business operations continue cheerful, and prospects are good for the season. The commerce of Boston in May, judging from the imports, was double that of the corresponding month of last year; and mechanical pursuits now meet with a fair compensation. In Pennsylvania and some of the North Western States, business was never better than at the present.

For the Patriot.
Complimentary.

The friends of Mr. Caleb Murdock will be glad to learn that he has been recently elected Sub-Master of the Winthrop School, Charlestown, (Mass.) with a salary of eight hundred dollars per annum.

For eight years Mr. Murdock has been master of the Washington Grammar School, in this place—where his untiring industry, thorough scholarship, and strict integrity, have always won for him the commendations of the various School Committees, and of a large majority of the parents of the pupils of the school.

On account of opposition which arose in a great degree from misrepresentation, Mr. Murdock was not re-engaged for the present year, much to the disappointment of many of the best friends of the school.

Mr. Murdock goes to his new position in the full ripeness of his manhood, with a large experience, and a clear comprehension of the duties of the position. He has the good wishes and kindly sympathy of his old fellow-teachers, and will be eminently successful at his new post of labor and usefulness.

HOSPITAL FLEET IN THE SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES SANITARY COMMISSION. There are now in the service of the United States Sanitary Commission, for employment in the transportation of the sick and wounded in the army of the Potomac, the following vessels, viz: The ocean steamers Daniel Webster, No 1, and the S. R. Spaulding, the steamers Elm City, Knickerbocker and Daniel Webster No. 2, and the tenders Elizabeth and Wisnuckton. In addition to the above steam fleet, a large sailing vessel, (the St. Mark’s 1,870 tons) is now being fitted up as a permanent stationary hospital for York River. The Western fleet of the Commission is not included in the above list. About 4000 sick and wounded soldiers have already been transferred from the seat of war near Yorktown, to hospitals at other points by transports managed by the Commission.

TRAGIC SCHOOL EXHIBITION. In Cazenovia, (N. Y.) recently, a district school gave an exhibition, embracing a dramatic scene in which a deserter was to be shot. The act was performed, and the lad who acted the part, (a son of Rev. E. Swan) fell dead upon the stage. It was found that in loading the gun, a brass ferrule on the ramrod had slipped from its place and remained in the barrel. The aim was but too true, and the ferrule struck him in the side, fracturing two ribs and coming out through the back.

NICK COMPUTATION. A bar of iron worth $5 dollars may be manufactured into horse-shoes worth $10 50; into needles worth $55 into pen knife blades worth $3,285; into shirt buttons worth $29,480; and into balance springs for watches worth the sum of $250,000—a balance spring of a watch being more, weight for weight, than gold.

CHINESE ON THE INCREASE IN CALIFORNIA. Some of the California papers are becoming alarmed by the renewal of a heavy immigration from China since the commencement of the present year. The tables show an increase of arrivals over departures of 58,020, and as something like a dozen vessels were on the berths in Chinese ports at last accounts, there will soon be still larger acquisitions of this class of population.

A SWARM OF BEES ON A MAN’S HEAD. A most singular incident occurred in Bridge-water a few days since, illustrating the peculiar habits of bees. Mr. A. P. Benson, noticing an unusual stir among his hives, proceeded to examine into the cause, whereupon an entire swarm withdrew from their old hive, and settled upon his head and shoulders. Mr. B., without any serious inconvenience, succeeded in transferring the swarm safely to a new hive.

INDIAN INSURRECTION IN CALIFORNIA. The California papers relate that a formidable insurrection of Indians has broken out in the Owens River valley, in the southeastern part of that State. In two fights they are reported to have defeated the force of regular troops sent against them, numbering one hundred, besides seventy-five volunteers. An express was sent to Los Angeles for aid from Gen. Wright, who dispatched prompt assistance. The old dispute about cattle stealing, encroachments, &c., is at the bottom.

AID TO THE FAMILIES OF VOLUNTEERS. The following rules of construction of certain statutes relating to aid furnished to the families of volunteers, have been adopted by the Auditor of the Commonwealth:

1st. The law of 1861, chapter 222, and the law of 1862, chapter 66, are not to be understood to furnish aid in the nature of a bounty to the volunteer, but only as “aid to the families of volunteers” when there is a necessity for it. These Acts only authorize relief for present want and therefore do not apply to past time. The State will only reimburse for relief of want now existing, and cannot allow for a necessity that has already past.

2d. Aid to families of volunteers in regiments of other States, will be reimbursed from the State treasury: provided, satisfactory evidence is furnished the Auditor, that the volunteer was a part of the quota of some other State during the time for which reimbursement is claimed; that he was an inhabitant of the city or town at the time of his enlistment, and that he did not receive aid from the State in which he enlisted.

3d. The father and mother of a volunteer are not entitled to aid from the State, unless they are in want, and have been substantially supported by the son before he entered the service.

4th. The family of a commissioned officer is not entitled to aid.

5th. Aid to widows or children of volunteers already deceased, must date from the passage of the Act, April 20, 1862.

REMARKABLE LONGEVITY.—Three of the passengers on board of the last ship which left Massachusetts with British colors, before the American Revolution, are now living! The vessel was the Minerva, and sailed from Marblehead eighty-seven years ago, May 27th, 1775. These surviving passengers are Miss Copley, Mrs. Gardener Green, and Lord Lyndhurst—all children of Copley, the great artist—Boston Transcript.

ASPARAGUS was selling in Boston market the other day for 16 cents a bunch, and green peas for 63 cents per peck. Strawberries 35 cents per box.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The greatest catch of shad within the memory of old fishermen—25,000 in one night—was made at Saybrook, Conn., on the 14th. The men were obliged to stop fishing and go on shore to assist in dressing the shad caught, to save them from spoiling.

The Barnstable Patriot says that Rosell Randall, conductor on the Old Colony Railroad, has recently had a stock dividend of two hundred per cent. in the shape of two fine boys. A man with so many double letters in his name, must expect double blessings in this world.

The appraisers of the estate of the late Col. Samuel Colt, of Hartford, Conn., have valued the value of his property at upwards of $3,000,000, exclusive of lands in the Western States, and gold and lead mines in South America, which, it is believed will amount to a million more.

From all parts of the State we hear of fine prospects for the fruit crop. The peach orchards especially are said to present the most prolific appearance that has been noticed for many years.

The grandfather of Gen. Halleck is still living, and is one hundred years old. He resides near Utica, N. Y.

At the World’s Fair there will be two “big things” to see. One is the “Vienna Child,” who is nineteen years old, seven feet high, and as the Kolnische Zeitung takes care to inform us, requires forty-two ells for a silk dress. The other is a negress from Hayti who left in the Etna from New York last week, who has white hair seventeen feet long, which is as fine as silk.

The great elephant, Hannibal, of Van Amburgh & Co.’s menagerie, recently got himself into a swamp near Freehold, N. J., and it took over two hours to rescue him.

Mr. Holbrook, in the United States Mail, says there are 411 female postmasters in the United States. No female postmaster has ever proved a defaulter.

STRAWBERRIES are selling in the Baltimore market at from five to twelve cents per quart.

The President has fully assumed the functions of Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy. No movement is made in either branch of the service without his knowledge.

The Jonesboro (Tenn.) Express learns that a fearful disease has made its appearance in Carter county, Tenn. The symptoms of the disease are similar to those of congestive fever or cold plague. In a few hours its victim is dead.

Provision has been made for paying the bounty money and pensions directed to be secured to our brave volunteers and families by the act of July last. There are now on file at the War Department upward of ten thousand applications for relief under that act; and by the neglect of Congress hundreds of widows and orphans throughout the loyal States are reduced to actual suffering.

Barnum proposes to hold a National Dog Show, at the Boston Aquarial Gardens, from Monday, June 10th, to June 21st. Cash premiums to the amount of $1000 will be awarded. A similar exhibition in New York last month was visited by ninety-three thousand ladies and gentlemen in twelve days.

It is reported that as many as five thousand contrabands have reached the government quarters in Washington, and that from twenty to thirty now arrive daily.

Late Pensacola advices state that the residents welcomed our troops with joy.

The Cincinnati Gazette of the 28th ult., says that at Putnam, Ohio, every unmarried man in the town under thirty—with three exceptions—volunteered on Monday, at Zanesville, over three hundred recruits were raised in a few hours.

At Norfolk, the oath of allegiance has been administered to nearly 2000 persons. They offer themselves in large numbers daily to take it voluntarily.

The officers of the Monitor have stated that, with the improvement of her smoke-stack, they were willing to go to sea in her, and therefore it is presumable that the others of her pattern are intended for sea-going.

The stock of the O. C. & F. R. Railroad gained $2 1-2 per share last month. Its value on Saturday was $107 1-2.

Nine thousand 13-inch shells, costing $20 apiece, were thrown by our fleets in the bombardment of Fort Jackson.

Notice is given by the War Department that the further exhumation of the bodies of deceased soldiers, in cases where public means of transportation would have to be relied on, cannot be permitted, and has been prohibited.

An army correspondent with the advance of Gen. McClellan’s army writes that he is within hearing of the Richmond bells. He adds, however, that the bells have been recast into cannon.

PROVINCIAL POSTAGE.—On and after the 1st of June, the postage on all letters directed to the Provincial of Nova Scotia must be prepaid with United States stamps at the rate of ten cents for a single letter. Letters not thus prepaid will be sent to the Dead Letter Office at Washington.

Rev. T. W. SILLOWAY, of the Hanover street Church, Boston, will preach in the Universalist Church to-morrow, at the usual hours.

CROP PROSPECTS.—There is good promise of an excellent harvest throughout the North and West, and the yield will be as abundant as that of last year, if storms and droughts do not interfere.

REBELLION IN HAYTI.—Another revolt broke out in Aux Cayes late in April, headed by the old General Salomon, one of Souleuvre’s favorites. At latest dates the commune of Torbeck was infected by the rebellious spirit, and the people of that district were allowed forty-eight hours to return to their allegiance. The people of the loyal provinces have all been called to take up arms in defence of the Government and for the suppression of the rebellion.

ENLISTMENT.—The Secretary of War, in notifying Gov. Andrew that enlistments will be made only for three or during the war adds, “This I think will, practically, not be, longer than a year.”

The Homestead Bill has passed both Houses of Congress, signed by the President, and is now the law of the land.

In Bradford, (N. H.), on the 14th ult., of consumption, Mrs. Nancy, wife of Mr. Ambrose S. Brackett formerly of this town, aged 45 years.

We copy the following obituary notice from the “Independent Democrat,” Concord, (N. H.) As its subject was originally an inhabitant of this town, it may be of interest to many of our readers.

“In Bradford, May 14th, of consumption, Mrs. Nancy Brown, wife of Ambrose S. Brackett. A loved one has fallen. Cut down ere the sun of life had scarcely passed the meridian of its glory, she has been called away. Though her form is no longer with us, yet she believed that she should be ever near and watch over her friends as though yet alive. Not often do we meet with one in whom was blended so perfectly all that is lovely, and whose whole life appeared to be devoted to the welfare and happiness of all. Such a one we believe her to be. Her mission was love. Always joyous and happy. She was ever ready to assist the poor and needy with a kind word and a liberal hand—a ministering angel to the prosperity of all. With even more than a tender mother’s care, did she watch over the interests of her family, leading them beside the sweet stream of affection and love. In all the moral reforms of the day she took a lively interest, and always, although strong in feeling for freedom, and pleading with an earnestness rarely equalled, for the breaking of the chains of slavery and letting the oppressed go free, she yet presented her opinions in so kind and inoffensive a manner as to retain the strong personal attachment of those opposed to her in principle. Though not a member of the visible church, yet she was an ardent admirer and lover of the works of nature, seeing the hand of God in all his creative works, from the tiny flower, to the mighty oak of the forest. Often in her rambles over hill and dale, through woodland and forest, or beside the silent stream, in company with her affectionate husband and son, she gazed upon the beauties of nature, and through these looked up to Nature’s God. The disease was consumption, which she bore with heroic fortitude, and as her departure drew near, she calmly passed away, as fades the light of day.”

“None knew her but to love her None named her but to praise.”

NOTICE is hereby given, that the subscriber has been duly appointed Executor of the last will and testament of

NANCY PORTER,
late of Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk, Widow, deceased, and has taken upon himself that trust, by giving bonds as the law directs.

And all persons having demands upon the Estate of the said deceased are required to exhibit the same, and all persons indebted to said Estate are called upon to make payment to

JACOB FRENCH, Executor.
Weymouth, May 24th, 1862. 3w

Commonwealth of Massachusetts,
Norfolk, ss. Probate Court.

TO the Heirs-at-Law, and others interested in the Estate of

SOLOMON WILLARD,
late of Quincy, in said County, deceased, Greeting:

WHEREAS—CEPHAS WILLARD, Administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented to said Court his petition for license to sell the whole of the real estate of said deceased, for the payment of debts and charges of administration, and for other reasons set forth in said petition—

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Taunton, in said County of Norfolk, on the First Tuesday of June next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against granting the same.

And said Administrator is ordered to serve this citation by publishing the same once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Quincy Patriot, printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days, at least, before said Court.

Witness, George White, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this SIXTH day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two.

GOODHUE'S
Drummer.

Ladies and Gents—if you are wise, You'll study to economize; Be careful when you "goods," shall buy, You do not pay for them too high.

"A sixpence saved"—we all have learned,—"Is equal to a shilling earned;" This "gentle hint" we give to you, That you may patronize GOODHUE.

One thing we'd have you understand, He deals in nothing "contraband"; Another thing we'd have you know—No other man sells "goods" so low.

GOODHUE'S customers will "sue" In best of style, from head to foot; And make them feel, when they want more, The place to buy is at his Store.

Some folks it very much surprises, How 'tis he's selling at such prices; Some think he some time will rue it, But GOODHUE knows just how to do it.

GOODHUE is bound to make a racket, Assisted by young HUNT and HACKETT; And those who wish to make life sunny, Should trade with them—and SAVE THEIR MONEY.

As Spring is coming on—and Summer—He sends this forth instead of "drummer"; He wishes this, the understanding—GOODHUE sells lowest—WEYMOUTH LANDING.

"It is a custom in some places for merchants to send out men—who, in business parlance, are called "drummers," to "drum up" customers; but, as we advise our patrons to study economy, by purchasing their goods OF US, we—wishing to practice what we teach—send out this MODEST little circular INSTEAD, as much less expensive.

REMEMBER
—THAT—
NO ONE CAN UNDERSELL GOODHUE.

Portry.

An Auction Sale of Single Gentlemen.

BY SENA SMITH.

I dreamed a dream in the midst of my slumbers,
And as fast as I dreamed it was coined into numbers;
It appeared that a law had lately been made
That a tax on old bachelors' purses should be laid,
And in order to make them all willing to marry,
The tax was as heavy as a man could well carry.
But the bachelors grumbled and said 'twas no use,
'Twas monstrous injustice and horrid abuse;
And swore that to save their own hearts' blood
From spilling,
On such a vile tax they would ne'er pay a shilling.
But the rulers determined their zeal to pursue,
So they set all the bachelors up at vendue.
A cry was sent through the town to and fro,
To rattle his drum and his trumpet to blow,
And to cry out to all that he met in his way—
"Ho! forty old bachelors sold here to-day!"
And presently all the maids in the town,
Each dressed in her very best bonnet and gown,
From thirty to sixty, white, red, fair and pale,
Of every description, all flocked to the sale.
The auctioneer then with his labors began,
And cried out aloud as he held up a man—
"How much for a bachelor? who wants to buy?"
And the chorus of maidens responded: "I, I!"
And in short, at a very extravagant price,
The bachelors all were sold off in a trice;
And forty glad maidens—some younger, some older,
Each lugged an old bachelor home on her shoulder.

I like an Open, Honest Heart.

I like an open, honest heart,
Where frankness loves to dwell,
Which has no place for base deceit,
Nor hollow words can tell.
But in whose throbbings plain are seen,
The import of the mind,
Whose gentle breathings utter nought,
But accents true and kind.

I scorn that one whose empty act,
And honied words of art,
Betray the feelings of the soul,
With perfidy's keen dart;
No more kind friends in such confide,
Nor in their kindness trust,
For black ingratitude but turns
Pure friendship to disgust.

Contempt is but a gentle word,
A feeling far too mild,
For one who confidence betrays,
And guilt has sore beguiled.
That hate which belcheth forth in evince,
When dark torments toss'd,
Is not more loathsome to the soul,
Than one to honor lost.

Then give me one with heart as free,
And gen'rous as the air,
Whose ready hand and greeting kind,
Give proof that truth is there.
Whose smiling countenance well shows,
Affection warm is found,
And springs pure as snail's, whose notes
Through Heaven's vaults resound.

Woman's Mission.

What highest prize hath woman won
In science or in art?
What mightiest work, by woman done,
Boasts city, field or mart?
"She hath no Raphael! Painting saith;
"No Newton! Learning cries;
Show us her Steamship! Hark! Macbeth!
Her thought-won victories!"

Wait, baneful Man! though worthy are Thy deeds, when thou art true,
Things worthier still, and holier far,
Our sister yet will do;
For this the worth of woman shows,
On every peopled shore,
That still as man in wisdom grows,
He honors her the more.

O, not for wealth, or fame, or power,
Hath man's meek angel striven,
But silent as the growing flower,
To make of Earth a Heaven!
And in the garden of the sun
Heaven's brightest rose shall bloom;
For woman's best is unobscured,
Her advent yet to come!

Anecdotes.

A young woman meeting a former fellow servant, was asked how she liked her new place?
Very well.
Then you've nothing to complain of?
Nothing, only my master and misses talks such very bad grammar.

Curran, cross-examining a horse-jockey's servant asked his master's age?
I never put my hand to his mouth to try, answered the witness.

The laugh was against the counsel, until he retorted: You are perfectly right friend, for your master is said to be a great bite.

Sambo, what you tink of the future state? I tink him berry long one!
But I mean do you tink de wicked will be condigned to eberlastin' misery?
I don't tink no such ting. I tink Gabriel minister de out and let em go.

Hallo! ejaculated an anxious guardian, as he entered the parlor and saw his lovely niece blushing in the arms of a swain who had just poured the question, and resented it with a smack, what's the time of day now?
I should think it was about half-past twelve was the complacent reply, for you see we was almost one!

Why, said a witty and a worthy divine, the other day, in conversing with an American, why do you not give the rights of citizenship to your black population?
The American replied, because a disagreeable effluvia arises from them!
Oh, then, retorted —, it seems that your legislators are led by the nose and make laws as they count in their cash, by cents.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH SECURED,
by the use of the
Great Spring and Summer Medicine,
DR. LANGLEY'S Root and Herb Bitters,
Composed of Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Yellow Dock, Prickly Ash, Thoroughwort, Rhubarb, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., all of which are so compounded as to act in concert, and assist Nature in eradicating disease.
The effect of this medicine is most wonderful—it acts directly upon the bowels and blood, by removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating them into healthy action, renovating the fountains of life, purifying the blood, cleansing it from all humors, and causing it to course anew through every part of the body; restoring the invalid to health and usefulness. They cure and eradicate from the system, Liver Complaint, that main-spring of so many diseases; Jaundice in its worst forms, all Bilious Diseases and foul stomachs, dyspepsia, constipation, all kinds of humors, indigestion, headache, dizziness, piles, heartburn, weakness, pains in the sides and liver, a disordered stomach, or bad blood, to which all are more or less subject in Spring and Summer.
More than 2,000,000 persons have been cured by this medicine. It is highly recommended by Physicians everywhere. Try it, and you will never regret it.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicine everywhere at only 25 and 35 cents per bottle.

FOR THE PREVENTION AND CURE OF
Consumption, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Marasmus, Loss of Appetite, Neuralgia, Female Complaints, and all Disorders of the Nervous and Blood Systems.
This Remedy has obtained a great reputation for most EXTRAORDINARY CURES in ALL STAGES OF CONSUMPTION. It is recommended by many thousand Physicians in the United States and Europe—having been used with RESULTS UNPARALLELED in the ANNALS of MEDICINE.
The Hypophosphites have a two-fold and specific action on the one hand, increasing the principle which CONSTITUTES NERVOUS ENERGY, and on the other, being the most POWERFUL BLOOD GENERATING AGENTS KNOWN. In cases of Nervous Debility, or Prostration of the Vital Powers, from any cause, this Remedy has no superior.

Winchester's Genuine Preparation" is the only reliable form of the Hypophosphites, made after the Original Formula of Dr. Churchill.
INQUIRE FOR AND USE NO OTHER!
A Fair Trial is a Certain Cure.—Six Bottles for $5. In 10 or 12 Bottles, $8. Three for $5. Circulars gratis. Sold by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.

A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, and Genital Irritability in either sex.
This Malady, the terrible consequences of which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of Life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and makes the unhappy victim into indolence and permanent grave! From one to six boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most Aggravated Cases, whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse or Excesses.

WE believe it to be, in the treatment of Spermatorrhoea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]
I have found them all that could be desired— Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used them in a case of Spermatorrhoea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years. I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E. P. DICKER, M. D.
This is not a Homoeopathic Remedy, nor is there any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.
PRICE—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5, by mail, prepaid. For sale by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.

Jack Downing Dreams Some Poetry.

In our last issue, we inadvertently published a base imitation of this little poetical effusion of Charles A. Davis, Esq.—the original Jack Downing. Below we give the genuine article.

In his prefatory remarks, Mr. Downing explains the reason, why, on this occasion, his ideas flowed in poetical numbers. He says:

"Last night I was in the Legislature and they set out to make a law to tax old bachelors. They tried pretty hard to make it, and I thought one spell they'd get it. I felt kind of bad about it because I knew it would bear so hard upon some folks. Well, I went home and went to bed, and I don't know what the matter was, but I had a kind of a queer night of it; and when I got up in the morning there was a soft sort of sickness stuff kept running off of my tongue, just like a stream of chalk. Pray tell me what you think of it; here it is:

I dreamed a dream in the midst of my slumbers, And as fast as I dreamed, it was coined into numbers;

My thoughts ran along in such beautiful metre, I'm sure I ne'er saw any poetry sweeter.

It seem'd that a law had been recently made, That a tax on old bachelors' pates should be laid, And in order to make them all willing to marry, The tax was as large as a man could well carry.

The bachelors grumbled and said 'twas no use, 'Twas cruel injustice and horrid abuse; And declar'd that to save their own hearts' blood from spilling,

Of such vile tax they would ne'er pay a shilling. But the rulers determined their scheme to pursue, So they set all the bachelors up at vendue.

A cry was sent thro' the town to and fro, To rattle his bell, and his trumpet to blow, And to bawl out to all he might meet in the way, "Ho! forty old bachelors sold here to-day!"

And presently all the maids in the town, Each in her very best bonnet and gown,

From thirty to sixty, fair, plain, red, and pale, Of every description, all flocked to the sale.

The auctioneer then in his labors began, And called out aloud as he held up a man:

"How much for a bachelor? who wants to buy?" In a twink every maiden responded: "H! I!"

And in short, at a hugely extravagant price, The bachelors all were sold off in a trice; And forty old maidens—some younger, some older,

Each lodged an old bachelor home on her shoulder.

Miscellaneous.

The Innocent Thief.

I don't know whether you know it or not, but in a certain part of the Second Avenue in the city of New York, there is a long row of houses, each exactly like the other, so far as external appearance goes.

Ten years ago, when I was a mere boy—just old enough to think I knew every thing, to make myself ill by trying to smoke, and to purchase my first razor, in a secret and furtive manner—I was an inhabitant of one of those houses.

My cousin, Jarvis, a well-to-do leather merchant in Jacob street, lived there; and in a moment of cousinly weakness and good feeling, he invited me to spend a couple of months with him.

I accepted the invitation.

How my cousin and his family enjoyed the visit, I cannot say; but I know that I had a grand time. It was my first glimpse of metropolitan life, and I improved my time. I learned the rudiments of social deportment, billiards, savoir faire, extravagance, Bohemianism, individuality, and love, during that brief but blissful period. It was my induction to the Comedy of Social Life.

It was in the Autumn, I remember. I came to town about the first of September, and was surprised at the vacancy of the streets, the hotels, the places of amusement. As the month wore away, the influx of people equally surprised me.

Next door to cousin Jarvis' house lived a rather elegant family. This I judged from the exquisite taste exhibited in the plan and cultivation of a large garden in the rear, which my chamber window partially overlooked; as, also, from the perfect order and neatness that reigned about the establishment, although the family were absent.

At about the end of September, they returned to the city; a fact that I discovered by the apparition of a beautiful young girl gathering flowers in the garden, three mornings in succession.

I don't think any corner of this wide world produces more pretty women than New York. There is no prevailing type to weary one's eyes with its external sameness, but blondes, brunettes, and chataines are mixed up in a splendid kaleidoscope of feminine beauty, fit to drive any susceptible youth raving crazy.

In fact, somewhat habitué, though I am, I cannot promenade Broadway on a fine day, even now, without a sort of ecstasy of admiration seizing upon me. I have a strong appreciation of the beautiful in humanity; and when I find myself surrounded by a crowd of magnificent forms and faces, hurrying hither and thither, with flashing eyes, smiling lips, glittering teeth, floating ringlets, and flushing cheeks, further set off by the exquisite dress that the New York women make a fine art of, I confess to a species of harmless delirium, that gives me an immense joy at the time, and renders me a wildly agreeable idiot for the rest of the day.

Fancy, then, the gentle and romantic thoughts that began to possess my mind on seeing, for three consecutive days, a lovely brunette, charming in her flowered morning gown and slippers, with her black hair drawn plainly and loosely back, and tied in a massive knot upon her neck, behind, wandering carelessly up and down the gravelled walks, and gathering the latest-blooming treasures of the faded summer.

I stood at my window, concealed by the blinds, which I arranged in a peculiar manner well known to girls in country villages, by which one can see out distinctly, without being seen one's self, and watched this gorgeous vision until I began to build the most extraordinary and impossible chateaux en Espagne, about her.

I made her the heroine of a wondrous romance, which, had it been written, would have been quite worthy of some of those talented Southern ladies, who turn out ten novels in ten years without missing once. Of course I was the hero. Of course, there was an obdurate father. Of course, there was much trouble, infinite affection, and the dekens to pay generally; and, of course, it all wound up with a marriage, like the Southern ladies' novels.

The only question was, how should I become acquainted with my heroine? I found somewhat to my surprise, that in the city one rarely knows anything about his next door neighbors, and Cousin Jarvis was totally ignorant of his. I longed for a configuration wherein the obdurate father should lose his property, and I should gallantly save his daughter from an awful fate.

But there was no fire, and if there had been, two fire-engines were located at a convenient distance. Doubtless these red shirted servants would have rescued the lady much more promptly than I could, and very likely they would have had to take care of me also.

This sort of a thing went on for a week or two. The beautiful brunette played and sang exquisitely, with the back parlor windows open, and I could hear every note as plainly as if I were in the same house. She romped with a little greyhound in the garden of an afternoon, occasionally, and drove me wild with her graceful poses, her delicious vivacity, her affectionate utterances—all wasted upon an unappreciative dog, which became an object of horrid jealousy to me.

In a word, with the green and tender imagination of unsophisticated youth, I fell into a morbid condition of "love at a distance," and became very wretched over it.

It was on a dismal, drizzly day that my downfall came. I had to go somewhere on a little business, and as the rain kept falling and stopping intermittently, I was fain to wear my worst garments, surmounted by an old spring overcoat belonging to my Cousin. In this rig I presented certainly a very seedy, if not suspicious, appearance. I braved the storm and public opinion together, however, accomplished my errand, and returned just as dusk began to creep over the naked trees and wet roofs of the avenue.

As I approached the house the rain increased, and made me hurry smartly to get under shelter. At the same moment a trim, figured woman, with the daintiest imaginable feet and ankles, attracted my attention to the opposite side of the street. Looking at her, I stumbled up the steps, thrust my night key into the keyhole, and entered as rapidly as possible.

"Throwing off my ancient overcoat in the hall, I started up stairs to my chamber, when I perceived something unusual. In a niche at the head of the stairs, which I remembered to have observed often, stood a statue of Bacchus, crowned with grapes and ivy. Concluding that my Cousin had been suddenly taken with a love of Art, I passed on. The door of a little extension chamber leading off the landing where my aunt slept, was open, and within I saw an eagle, supporting an unfinished painting, some rare old furniture of great beauty, several musical instruments, pots of flowers, two large bird-cages, and a host of other things indicative of culture and refinement.

That the old lady should have blossomed out, at fifty-nine, into a high condition of esthetic taste, I could not believe. I paused, surveyed the paper on the walls, the carpet on the stairs, the surroundings generally, and the awkwardness of my position dawned upon me. I was in the wrong house.

To regain the hall with speed and silence, to seize my great coat and depart, before any body saw me, was my great object. But unluckily as I slipped rapidly down stairs, somebody ascended from the basement to the hall.

I reached the hat-rack just as the new comer reached the head of the basement stairs, and, turning my head, while I sought my coat with trembling hands, my eyes met.

It was an aged and portly gentleman, with dressing gown and slippers, with a cigar in one hand and an evening paper in the other. He looked at me, first with a glance of surprise, and then with a stare of alarm.

"Help!" shouted he. "Police! thieves!"

Instinct made me bound toward the front door, and the old gentleman followed, with an alacrity beyond his years. He clutched me by the collar as my hand was upon the door knob, and, with a wrench, threw me to the wall, where he had me at an advantage, and easily held me, loudly vociferating, "Help! thieves!" etc., at the top of his still powerful voice.

Let me go, sir, said I, angry at being thus maltreated; let me go, I tell you! I am not a thief, sir—I have made a mistake—Let me go.

Yes, you have made a mistake, if you thought you could rob me, you young rascal. I suppose it was you who stole my coat and hat last spring, wasn't it? You have a key to my door, I think. Here, Thomas! John! help! thieves!

By this time there was a general gathering of the servants and others from all parts of the house, and among others who came—oh horrors!—was the lovely brunette with whom I had fallen so desperately in love!

O, papa! said she, be careful! He will kill you!

I could have killed myself with infinite pleasure.

Here, Thomas, hold him, said the old gentleman, while I get a policeman.

Rage, grief and shame, made me speechless until two stout serving men had grasped me tightly by the arms, and the frightened paterfamilias was starting off to find an officer. Then I found a tongue.

Stop a minute, sir, said I beseechingly: I can explain all this. I live next door with Mr. Jarvis, and came in here by mistake; the same key fits both doors.

This stopped the old gentleman.

Why did you try to run away then?

To avoid just such a scene as this, sir.

Bah! said one of the servants; Jarvis is a respectable man. This fellow don't belong to this house. Look at him!

I have said that my outer man was not prepossessing on that occasion. I felt that my clothes would criminate me, and blushed scarlet.

I'm afraid you are lying young man, said the old gentleman. Hadn't I better look you up, think?

No, sir. Send in next door, and ask Mr. Jarvis to come here.

But about this coat? What were you going to do with that?

He pointed to a handsome, new coat, heavily quilted and lined with silk, that lay on the floor, where I had dropped it when he caught me. I had taken it, in my confusion, instead of my old one, which still hung on the rack.

The servants laughed, as they saw my confusion.

He looks a regular knuck, said one.

No, I am sure he does not, said the young girl, fixing her darkly brilliant eyes upon me; I don't see anything thievish in his face at all—he looks to me like a country boy. If he steals, it is not an old offence with him, I'm sure, and sending him to prison will only make a confirmed thief of him. Better tell him the wrong he does himself and others, and let him go. He will remember it longer than he would a month in prison.

Where now was my romance? What kind of hero was I, now? Oh, the crushing shame of that apology, dictated by softness of heart in her, and offered for one whom she firmly believed to have been caught in the act of stealing.

Well, well, said the father, with a glance of kindly pride toward his daughter, I dare say you are right. Boy, continued he, to me, you may go; but you have had a narrow escape. I might have sent you to the Island for two months. Take your old coat, that you wanted to exchange for my new one, and never let me see you again. The next time I catch you in a crime, you will not get off so easily. Thank this young lady, now, for her intercession, and leave.

My throat was swelled and my tongue dry. My brain throbbled with a fearful pain, and my heart seemed trying to burst through my ribs. I wished to explain, to vindicate myself before her, to assert my honesty and position as a gentleman; but not a word could I utter. I only croaked out a few incoherent sentences, broke down ignominiously, and departed, anathematizing Fate in a fearful way.

The next day, I prevailed upon my Cousin to explain the matter for me. He was a timid sort of man, and hated a scene worse than anything else in life; so he wrote an elaborate note to the old gentleman next door, telling the whole truth. Paterfamilias saw that he had made an awkward blunder; and, avoiding a scene, also, by apologizing amply in a written reply.

As for me, I dare not even pass the house, but always went the other way, around the corner, dodging away from my Cousin's door, as if I were really a thief and the police were after me. This sort of thing soon became irksome, and I cut my visit short—returning to the tranquility of the rural district within a few days after my adventure. There, new romances obliterated the old one; and I soon learned to laugh at my first and last appearance as an INNOCENT THIEF.

Revenge by Mail.

Years ago, Lewis Holt kept a railroad refreshment-stand at the station at Attica, on the road running West. He had a way which men of his persuasion have not altogether abandoned, of taking the money of passengers, sweeping it into his draw, and fumbling after the change till the cars were off, when the passenger would have to run and leave his money. Charlie Dean stepped out of the cars there one day, took a ginger pop, price six cents, laid down a quarter, which Holt dropped into his till, and went hunting to get out the change. Away went the cars, and Charlie jumped on without his change; but he had time to read the name of Lewis Holt over the door, and making a note of it, rode on.

Postage was high in those days, and was not required in advance. From Buffalo he wrote to Holt. "Sell Foam at 25 cents on glass, will you?" Holt paid 10 cents on this letter, and 10 more on one from Detroit, and 25 on another from St. Louis, and for 2 or 3 years kept getting letters from his unknown customer, and would have got more to this day, but for the law requiring postage to be paid in advance.—He had to pay two or three dollars in postage before the letters ceased to come; and as they were always directed in different hand-writing, he hoped each one was of more importance than the one before. If he of Attica reads this, he will find for the first time why he was punished, and by whom.

The Yankee in the Museum.

Years ago, when the Siamese Twins were on exhibition, a tall son of "Down East" stepped up to the ticket office of the museum.

After "dickering" some time with the long-legged door-keeper, he disbursed,—"swindle" as he called it—a quarter of a dollar—and entered to see the "curiosity."

He surveyed the unique pair for the space of five minutes, without saying a word. At length he broke out:

How long you fellows been in this kind of a hitch?

Forty-two years, replied Eng.

Dew tell! Getting kind of use to it, I expect?

We ought to be by this time, said the twins together.

Yes—"xactly;" should say so tew, myself. B'long to the same church, shouldn't wonder?

Yes, said Chang, we do.

Want to know? continued the Yankee. Wal, he added, examining the ligature, ef one of you dies, t'other will be in a fix, won't he?

It would be bad, said Eng, with something of sadness in the face at the thought.

Don't drink nothin', "expect?" pursued the interrogator. Ever go in to swim?

Sometimes, they answered.

After gazing and scrutinizing them a few moments longer, the indefatigable questioner again burst out with:

Look a here! s'posing one of you fellers should get into a scrape, and was about to be put into jail, how do you calculate you'd get along?

O, said Eng, laughing at the idea. I'd go Chang's bail.

Sartain—ye-e-e-s, yeou could do that, couldn't ye? And here closed the instructive colloquy—and the inquisitor, whistling Yankee Doodle, retired, and gave room for a fresh "lot" of examiners to interrogate anew the wonderful curiosities.

What We are Made Of.

The following is from an article by Oliver W. Holmes: "If the reader of this paper lives another year, his self-conscious principle will have migrated from his present tenement to another, the raw materials even of which are not yet put together. A portion of that body which is to be, will ripen in the corn of his next harvest. Another portion of his future person he will purchase, or others will purchase for him, headed up in form of several barrels of potatoes. A third fraction is yet to be gathered in the Southern rice field. The limbs with which he is then to walk will be clad with flesh borrowed from the tenants of many stalls and pastures, now unconscious of their doom. The very organs of speech with which he is to talk so wisely, plead so eloquently, or speak effectively, must first serve his humble brethren to bleat, to bellow, and for all the varied utterance of bristled or feathered barn yard life. His bones themselves are to a great extent, in posse and not esse. A bag of phosphate of lime, which he has ordered from Professor Mapes, for his grounds, contains a large part of what is to be his skeleton. And more than all this, and by far the greater part of his body, is nothing but water, the main substance of his scattered members is to be looked for in the reservoir, in the running streams, at the bottom of the well, in the clouds that float over his head, or diffused among them all."

Sudden Deaths.

Dr. Hall in his Journal of Health, says that a very few sudden deaths which are said to arise from disease of the heart do really arise from that cause. To ascertain the real origin of sudden deaths the doctor says the experiment has been tried in Europe, and reported to a scientific congress held at Strasbourg. 66 cases of sudden deaths were made the subjects of a people. Switzerland, secure in her mountain fastnesses, is now by common consent, left unmolested.

The governments of Asia are all absolute despotisms. Thibet has the name of being a hierarchy, but differs in no practical sense from a despotism.

In Africa, the Barbary States, and all the various negro tribes, of whatever name, are ruled despotically, except Liberia, which is republican.

MILTON ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.—The Two Hundredth celebration of the incorporation of this town, was celebrated on Wednesday last, in a formal manner, and drew together a large portion of the inhabitants, although few non-residents appeared to be present.

The exercises of the day consisted of appropriate services in the First Church, including an oration by Hon. James M. Robbins, and a Promenade Concert, Collation and Dance in a large tent and the Town Hall adjoining.

Shortly before 3 o'clock a procession of citizens, under the marshaling of Hon. J. M. Churchill, was formed at the Town Hall, and headed by the Germania Band, marched to the church near by, when the ceremonies at once commenced. These consisted of a voluntary by the Band, an anthem, prayer by Rev. J. H. Morrison, the pastor, a bi-centennial hymn, composed by Mrs. S. D. Whitney. An oration, which was entirely historical. After a short respite, the company repaired to the tent, where they partook of a collation. The decorations of the church, by the ladies, designed and arranged by Mr. Williams, were chaste and appropriate.

There was one circumstance attending the celebration, not considered in the arrangement. Mr. Samuel Babcock, while engaged in furnishing seats for the people in the aisles of the church, had his pocket book stolen from his person by some thief. It contained about $100 in money, with notes to the amount of $400, besides papers of much value. Another gentleman named Angier, lost $25 with his wallet—undoubtedly taken by the same parties.

THE LUNAR ECLIPSE. About half past eleven o'clock, Wednesday evening, the obscuration began, and from its commencement to its completion, although at times the sky was mottled with clouds, it was clearly seen by the naked eye.

By one o'clock, when the face of the orb was overshadowed completely, there was a pitchy darkness which lasted for nearly two hours. The gradual development of the face of Luna was in due time seen with satisfaction, and all who witnessed her disappearance and restoration to light were entirely satisfied that the exhibitions were not, in any respect "failures."

SUICIDE IN MILTON. A young man named Josiah L. Hunt, son of Mr. Josiah Hunt, a farmer of Milton, committed suicide at his father's house by shooting himself with a pistol, on Sunday last. His sister heard the report of the pistol, and upon going to his room found him dead. For some time he had been depressed in spirits. Deceased was about twenty-six years of age.

EVIDENCE OF A VIGOROUS OLD AGE. Two men, each seventy-eight years of age, have procured within the past two weeks, at the City Registrar's office, in Boston, licenses permitting them to get married. One was an American, and the other an Irishman.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION AT ARINGTON. The hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the incorporation of the town of Abington was celebrated at that place last Tuesday, with considerable enthusiasm. A procession was formed, consisting of the Abington Light Infantry, Lieut. Soule, Governor Andrew and other State officials; Pilgrim Royal Arch Chapter, and John Cotter Lodge of Free Masons, with a delegation of Free Masons from Boston, and the children of the public schools. An oration was delivered by Rev. E. Porter Dyer of Hingham, and a poem by J. Wilson Ward, Esq. A dinner followed at Island Pond Grove, at which, speeches were made by Gov. Andrew and other prominent gentlemen.

A BRAVE BOY. A lad of fifteen years of age, attached to the 5th Wisconsin Regiment, named Douglas, was in the battle of Williamsburg, (Va.) and got his gun wet so that it could not fire. During the hottest of the fight, and whilst the regiment was falling back, he deliberately sat down, took out his screw-driver, unscrewed the tube from the gun, dried it out, put it back, capped it, got up and put into the field as if nothing unusual was going on.

There will be a Free Lunch at the Mariposa Bowling and Oyster Saloon this evening.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, June 12, 1862.

The question for the extinction of domestic slavery, growing out of the rebellion, a great moral, philosophical problem, is assuming a formidable character in the public mind. President Lincoln in his recent special message, is in favor of the adoption of a national policy, looking to the gradual, not sudden, emancipation of slaves, with compensation to owners. This plan is not original—it was the scheme of Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe—all slaveholders; and it ever has been the doctrine of the best classes of Southern people. With Jefferson, slavery was deprecated as a social evil—planted with the first settlement of our colonies, and existing as a dire necessity; whose perpetuation and extension were mourned as political calamities. The ultraism, or slaveocracy of the South, with the violent abolition movement of the North, ever has been a fierce antagonism to the gradual emancipation system; and sorrowful have been the results to this, our best government on earth. The aim of union men, is the extinction of the rebellion, followed by the powerful and legitimate emancipation of slavery. The Border States would willingly come into the arrangement. The sentiment of emancipation, is the highest range of philanthropy, but the process of freedom to the slaves, like all good results growing out of great evil, must be gradual. Madness would rule the hour to free four million of blacks at once. The fountains of American civilization would be broken up, and chaos would supplant the place of order.

We cannot foresee the issue of the next Presidential election. It may, and probably will, turn on the simple question of gradual abolition of slavery, as recommended by the President, or, the advocacy of immediate emancipation without regard to compensation to slaveholders. We can well imagine the bitterness of party strife that must follow the agitation of these questions. That slavery must be abolished as a consequence of this wicked rebellion is a strong element of opinion in the Border and all the non-slaveholding States; and it will grow stronger. The phoenix of the sterling Democratic party will never rise to new and successful life by advocating the perpetuity of the "peculiar institution," by reason of the wholesale treason of the South. The Democratic platform still clinging to its principles of equal rights to the States and to all men, should be so revised as to advocate the removal of involuntary servitude from the land by Constitutional measures. Each State whose bright star shines in the galaxy of our National banner, should be encouraged to manumit its slaves by compensation paid from the United States Treasury. The task is stupendous—the amount enormous—but neither is impossible. The expense of freeing the slaves would hardly be the cost of the civil war. The evil once removed, the Union would be perpetual, and that, too, by the consent of the slaveholders. The President has inaugurated anew the peaceful and gradual abolition of slavery; principles which has laid dormant for many years; that Jefferson and the early Presidents wished to see consummated, but who died before they beheld the promised land. Each of these great men if living, is worthy to himself of the classic allusion: "Homo sum; humani nihil a me alienum puto."

The week has been somewhat exciting by reason of the daily record of war news. Victories crown the Federal armies every where, and the signs are auspicious that the rebellion is about "played out," and that the glorious flag of our Union will be soon recognized in every portion of our country. The rebellion is fast losing its terrors here. There is a steady increase of confidence in business operations. Ship building at East Boston has revived; many new and costly structures are going up in the city proper; commerce is growing active, and seamen are hard to be obtained at any wages. Monetary matters continue healthy. At business hours there is much bustle and activity on the wharves and in the streets. As an offset to these pleasant sights, we meet the sick and wounded soldiers in every part of the city, recently returned from the seat of war. A large number of them here are worthy of the warmest sympathy.

MR. BEECHER ON NEWSPAPERS. Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in the course of his sermon at the Plymouth church last night, made an eloquent plea for newspapers, speaking of them as one of the most potent elements of our civilization. "There is," said he, "a common vulgar objection about newspapers that 'they lie'; they don't lie any more than you do. Man is naturally a lying creature. Truth is a gift from Heaven, and very few of us possess it before we get there. The newspaper gives both facts and rumors, and they would be blamed if they did not do so. It is for the reader to judge of these rumors. The last economy should be in regard to newspapers. It is better to deprive the body of some ribbon or jewel or other garment, than to deprive the mind of its sustenance."—N. Y. Post.

For the Patriot.

Extracts from Judge Thomas' Speech.

DELIVERED IN CONGRESS, MAY 24TH, 1862. ON THE CONFISCATION OF REBEL PROPERTY.

No one can read this Speech without admiring its clear and forcible statement, its convincing arguments and bursts of genuine eloquence. It is a sound, high toned, admirable speech, such as has not often been heard in Congress of late, but every way worthy of its best days. We do not wonder at the immediate effect it is said to have had upon the House moving many to tears. Such is the just influence of true heartfelt patriotism, without affectation or any of the insincerities of selfish art.

We make room for the enthusiastic remarks of our correspondent, and the following extracts from the speech.

"MR. SPEAKER: No man can desire more earnestly than I do the suppression of this rebellion, and the restoration of order, unity and peace. But there are two things I cannot, I will not do. I will not tremble beneath my feet the Constitution I have sworn before God to support. I will not violate even against the rebels the law of nations as recognized and upheld by all civilized and Christian States. I believe I must do both, to vote for these bills, and at the same time do an act unwise and especially adapted to defeat the end in view, if that end be the restoration of the Union and the salvation of the Republic."

"Were you ever at Runnymede, Mr. Speaker? I remember going down, on a beautiful day in July, from Windsor Castle to the plain, and crossing the narrow channel of the Thames to that little island on which, more than six centuries ago, in the early gray of morning, those sturdy barons wrested from an unwilling king the first great charter of English freedom—the germ of life of the civil liberty we have to-day. I could hardly have been more moved had I stood by the manger in which was cradled 'the Son of Mary and the Son of God.' From the gray of that morning streamed the rays which, uplifting with the hours, coursing with the years, and keeping pace with the centuries, have encircled the whole earth with the glorious light of English Liberty—the Liberty for which our fathers planted these Commonwealths in the wilderness; for which they went through the baptism of fire and blood in the Revolution; which they imbedded and hoped to make immortal in the Constitution; without which the Constitution would not be worth the parchment on which it was written."

"That the Bills before the House are in violation of the law of nations and of the Constitution, I cannot—I say it with all deference to others—I cannot entertain a doubt. My path of duty is plain. The duty of obedience to that Constitution was never more imperative than now. I am not disposed to deny that I have for a long time past, reverently, I have worshipped it from my father's fathers. In the school of a rigid discipline by which we were prepared for it, in the struggles out of which it was born—the seven years of bitter conflict—and the seven darker years in which that conflict seemed to be fruitless of good, in the wisdom with which it was constructed, and first administered, and set in motion, in the beneficent Government it has secured for more than two generations, in the blessed influences it has exerted upon the cause of freedom and humanity the world over, I cannot fail to recognize the hand of a guiding and loving Providence. But not for the blessed memories of the past only do I cling to it. He must be blinded with excess of light, or with the want of it, who does not see that to this nation, trembling on the verge of dissolution, it is the only possible bond of unity."

"Mr. Speaker, upon no subject has there been more or longer declamation than on the causes of this rebellion. At one moment we are assured that slavery is the one great criminal, at the next, that it was brought about by the frauds, falsehood, and violence of a few unprincipled leaders."

"Passing this subject now with the remark that masses of men are not easily moved, that civil convulsions are fed by deeper fires, I ask your attention to two facts which seem to me clearly established. The first is, that when the acts of secession were passed, the majority of the people of the revolting States, with the exception of South Carolina, were loyal to the Union; and the second is, that to-day their feelings are changed—their loyalty turned to treason and love to hate—Passion is eloquent; but do not content yourselves with bitter denunciation. Pause, I beseech and adjure you, and inquire what is the cause."

"The war brought to their homes and firesides will account for much; but do you not believe that a conviction has been settling down into the minds of men, who at the beginning of our troubles were loyal, that these measures point to some other end than the restoration of the Union with the rights of the States preserved; that they mean subjugation and reconstruction 'by permission of the military power, and not before!' Once committed to this policy,—once aflame at that sea of revolution, neither you nor I may live to reach the haven of union and peace."

"If these measures shall be finally adopted, I pray God I may prove a false prophet, and that out of this nettle danger, we may pluck the flower safety; that His strength may be manifested in our weakness, and that He may overrule all our errors and shortcomings for the good of our beloved country."—X.

A SUREWY REPLY. Why do you advertise in these dull times? asked a gentleman of one who is shrewd, and he received this reply: "I advertise because it pays in two ways. It attracts new customers, and what is still better, it retains old ones, who don't think I am dead while they see my name in the paper and know I am ready to serve them."

SCARCITY OF SEAMEN. The Beverly fishing fleet numbers, this season, 38 vessels. Five schooners are now lying at the wharves owing to the scarcity of hands.

Correspondence.

CONCORD, (N. H.) June 11th, 1862.

To the Publisher of the Patriot: Having left your village some ten days ago to rusticate a little in this vicinity, I thought a few lines from this city might be interesting to your many readers.

Concord is a beautiful city, situated on the Merrimac river, about the centre of the State, and seventy-three miles from Boston. Its main street presents a busy aspect most of the day; stages and four-wheeled open vehicles are quite numerous; covered carriages are seldom seen. The State Legislature has been in session one week, and the city appears livelier than usual.

Grass in the country towns in this vicinity is beginning to look well, owing to the recent rains, but was rather scanty the first of June. Fruit trees blossomed full and there appears to be a good prospect of a large crop. Vegetation is some six to ten days behind that in your own village. The farmers generally have finished planting, and some have commenced hoeing.

In the neighboring towns hay is selling at ten dollars a ton; potatoes, twenty to thirty cents per bushel; eggs, ten cents a dozen; butter, twelve and a half cents a pound; and other country produce equally as low.

In the eastern part of Chichester, about eleven miles from the Capital, your correspondent had the pleasure of seeing a "young giant"—Joseph True Lake, son of Mr. Joseph Lake, who is now but ten years of age, and weighs two hundred and sixty-six pounds; and is gaining at the rapid rate of one pound per week. He attends school regularly, and is quite intelligent. Among his schoolmates he presents a wonderful and laughable appearance. In walking he leans first one side then the other in order to move easily. His parents are of a usually size, and are unable to account for this curious "freak of Nature."

Yours, &c. GEORGE.

For the Patriot.

Retort—Courteous.

To the Publisher of the Patriot: Noticing in your paper of the 31st ult., an article reflecting on the character of the Volunteer Militia of this State, I wish to state a few facts with particular reference to Company H of this town, against which organization the writer's sneers are more particularly directed. At nine, a. m., Monday, 26th, Captain Spear received orders to report with his command, in Boston, at the earliest possible moment. A call so urgent and unexpected, demanded a prompt reply; and nobly was it responded to. The men left their offices and stores, their shops and their farms at the summons, and at 1 p. m., same day, the Company numbering fifty men, left Quincy; a striking contrast to the conduct of the Company a year previous, with two months consideration of the case then made, only nine of the original members responded. No time was given for the arrangement of business; indeed, many of the men left without even an opportunity to bid farewell to their families and friends. Under these circumstances, it is then to be wondered at, that they were not prepared to be sworn in under a law, of which they had never heard, and which required of them an indefinite period of service—three months perhaps, and perhaps thirty. On Tuesday, the 4th Regiment numbered over six hundred and fifty men; and when at noon, General Schouler came down, and read the law to the officers, and ordered reports to be made by two o'clock, there were then only about three hundred and fifty men in the hall, including officers. Through the exertions of Colonel Walker, who addressed the Regiment, and in whose praise, as an officer, too much cannot be said, one hundred and thirty-five of this number volunteered to go at any rate. In the Quincy Company, out of sixty-three men present, thirty-five, including officers, volunteered for the full term of service. Company H, therefore, is the banner company of the Regiment, and we do not believe that any corps of equal numbers, did better—or can show a fairer record. In conclusion, I would suggest the opinion, that it would be well for those persons, whose positions as supernumeraries in certain military, or civil stations, which prevent the country from enjoying their services in the field, to refrain from judgment on brave men who have never yet shrunk from the call of duty—but who, in the hour of danger, to uphold the honor of their town, and country, filled the gaps made by those very cowards, who now, with malignant sneers vainly strive to tarnish their hard earned fame."

A MEMBER.

NATIONAL EXPENSES. It is estimated that the "Pension Bill," recently passed by the House, will draw from the Treasury not less than $40,000,000 annually. It will be reported by the Committee of the Senate materially modified.

WELL PUT. The Boston Journal hits the nail on the head, when it says: "Not a tenth part of all the local news which transpires in any country town finds its way into the city papers, and he who takes the latter to the exclusion of his own town or county paper does not fulfil his duty as a citizen. Such a person is unworthy to fill a town office, for he most lacks local pride."

EGGS VS. PORK. A writer in the Newburyport Herald has given the relative profit of keeping hens over that of keeping hogs. The clear profit of fifteen hens and one turkey for one year he foots up at $50.70. The profit of raising 810 pounds of pork (two hogs) for a like length of time, was only 96 cents.

WESTON EARL. Of Dighton, Mass., has a calf which has only three legs, and is without any tail. The foreleg comes down in about the centre of the breast, instead of one side as in the case of two legs. It is now about eight weeks old, healthy and remarkably sprightly, having jumped out of the pen nearly four feet high.

THE WEED. Mr. Joseph W. Lombard, who occupies the same floor with us, has received from his brother, Lieutenant Lombard, now at Norfolk, (Va.) a sample of Virginia tobacco, gathered from a plantation, where it is said, whole fields remain unharvested.

FROST VS. FRUIT. The following very comforting theory we find recorded in the Oxford (Me.) Democrat of the 6th instant:

"While exchanges predict much damage to fruit, from the late frosts, we put on record the assertion of one of the settlers of Paris, Capt. Abner Rawson, that a hard frost, while the trees were in blossom, always gave a good crop of fruit. When a frost occurs, a large quantity of apples set, which the trees cannot sustain. These drop off in June. A frost kills a portion of the blossoms, but leaves a sufficient number to set, which come forward and make a vigorous growth."

DIMENSIONS OF THE NATIONAL CAPITOL. The dimensions of the Capitol at Washington are thus officially stated: Whole length of building, 751 feet 4 inches; length of wings, including steps, 324 feet; width of wing, 142 feet 8 inches; width of old Capitol, 352 feet 4 inches; height of dome above the basement floor, 264 feet; ground actually covered, 153,112 square feet, or more than three and a half acres.

THE SEVENTEENTH OF JUNE comes on Tuesday next. The 87th anniversary of that memorable event which led to American Independence.

CALIFORNIA. A bill has passed the House of Representatives, giving to California another Representative for the 37th Congress, making three from that State.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

John A. Hedrick has been appointed collector of Beaufort, North Carolina. Now the tar will come.

Five whalers arrived at New Bedford on Tuesday, bringing an aggregate of 7430 barrels of oil and 15,000 pounds of whalebone.

On and after the 1st of June, all letters for Nova Scotia will be required to be paid in United States postage stamps, at the rate of 10 cents for less than 3000 miles from the frontier line, and 15 cents for over that distance. All letters from Nova Scotia after that date will be prepaid.

In a gentleman's front yard at Peacham, April 13, there was on one side a snow bank three feet deep, while on the other the grass was springing up green and beautiful. On the road from West Danville to Cabot, at one place, at the above date, there was a drift five feet in depth on each side of the wagon track.

The people of Sweden, with a proper sense of the great services to civilization rendered by their distinguished countryman, Ericsson, are having a medal struck in his honor, in reference to the Monitor affair.

A letter dated at Port Royal, S. C., May 10th, says:—"We are in the midst of the berry season, and the most delicious blackberries can be bought for five cents a quart."

During the past year, the Catholics of the United States have dedicated ninety-five churches, many of them very costly and magnificent.

There has been raised in New York for the sufferers by the Troy fire, the sum of $11,500.

At last accounts from Pensacola, Col. Billy Wilson was occupying the house of the former senator from Florida, Hon. S. R. Mallory.

The Boston Lancers, Capt. Slade, have been accepted as escort for the Governor and Council on commencement day at Cambridge.

A tack manufacturer in Taunton, Mass., has sent, within a few weeks, no less than six tons of tacks to New Orleans, and has received an order for two tons more.

Queen Victoria intends this summer to move to the castle of Rosenau, in the Duchy of Coburg, the birthplace of Prince Albert.

Gov. Sprague will be the youngest man in the United States Senate. We are not aware that a younger man ever has been honored with a seat in that august body.

The First Congregational (Unitarian) church, of New Bedford, are now having erected in their house of worship, the largest church organ in New England, having forty-five draw stops, three blank slides, two composition pedals, and a total of 2303 pipes.

Jenny Lind is giving Charity Oratorios in London to immense houses, at a guinea a ticket.

The Russian government has established a magnetic and meteorological observatory at Pekin.

FIRST FRUIT OF THE SEASON. We were made the recipient, a few days since, of a fine box of strawberries, by Mr. C. W. Perry, on Hancock street. They were raised, we were told, at the Neck—and are selling at twenty-five cents a box. He has our best wishes.

Here, we would call public attention to the new Grocery and General Finding Store, recently opened by Mr. P. on Hancock street. The shop, formerly occupied by Joshua Jones, Saddle and Harness Maker, on Hancock street has been fitted up—a prime assortment of goods taken in, which are offered at the lowest market prices. Also, in the season, fruits of all kinds—foreign and domestic.—Read his advertisement to be found in another column of our paper to-day.

HARPER'S FAMILY MAGAZINE for June, is out. It is a prime number. There is a story in it for every body. Get it, and enjoy a mental feast. It may be had at the Quincy Bookstore.

THE GREAT SHOWMAN, Barnum, has found somewhere in Ohio, a remarkable infant male dwarf, which, although eight months old, weighs but one pound and seven ounces. A man's finger ring will go over its hand to the elbow or over its foot to the knee. The mother of the child is a healthy woman, and has other children of the ordinary size. The new comer will be exhibited at the baby show next week.

—OF—
REAL ESTATE.

FIRST FRUIT OF THE SEASON. We were made the recipient, a few days since, of a fine box of strawberries, by Mr. C. W. Perry, on Hancock street. They were raised, we were told, at the Neck—and are selling at twenty-five cents a box. He has our best wishes.

Here, we would call public attention to the new Grocery and General Finding Store, recently opened by Mr. P. on Hancock street. The shop, formerly occupied by Joshua Jones, Saddle and Harness Maker, on Hancock street has been fitted up—a prime assortment of goods taken in, which are offered at the lowest market prices. Also, in the season, fruits of all kinds—foreign and domestic.—Read his advertisement to be found in another column of our paper to-day.

HARPER'S FAMILY MAGAZINE for June, is out. It is a prime number. There is a story in it for every body. Get it, and enjoy a mental feast. It may be had at the Quincy Bookstore.

THE GREAT SHOWMAN, BARNUM, has found somewhere in Ohio, a remarkable infant male dwarf, which, although eight months old, weighs but one pound and seven ounces. A man's finger ring will go over its hand to the elbow or over its foot to the knee. The mother of the child is a healthy woman, and has other children of the ordinary size. The new comer will be exhibited at the baby show next week.

GOODHUE'S Drummer.

LADIES and Gents—if you are wise, You'll study to economize; Be careful when you "goods," shall buy, You do not pay for them too high.

"A sixpence saved"—we all have learned,— "Is equal to a shilling earned;" This "gentle hint" we give to you, That you may patronize GOODHUE.

One thing we'd have you understand, He deals in nothing "contraband"; Another thing we'd have you know— No other man sells "goods" so low.

GOODHUE'S customers will "suit" In best of style, from HEAD to FOOT; And make them feel, when they want more, The place to buy is at his STORE.

Some folks it very much surprises, How 'tis he's selling at such prices; Some think he some time will rue it, But GOODHUE knows just how to do it.

GOODHUE is bound to make a racket, Assisted by young HUNT and HACKETT; And those who wish to make life sunny, Should trade with them—and SAVE THEIR MONEY.

As Spring is coming on—and Summer— He sends this forth instead of "drummer"; He wishes this, the understanding— GOODHUE sells lowest— WEYMOUTH LANDING.

"It is a custom in some places for merchants to send out men—who, in business parlance, are called "drummers," to "drum up" customers; but, as we advise our patrons to study economy, by purchasing their goods OF US, we—wishing to practice what we teach—send out this modest little circular INSTEAD, as much less expensive.

Poetry.

Battle of Bull Run.

The following lines descriptive of the Battle of Bull Run, were lately handed for publication by our young friend, John H. Whitcher, who returned, wounded, from Virginia a few weeks since.

'Twas the holy Sabbath morning,
Yet along each wooded dell
The tramp of war-clad legions
On the peaceful stillness fell;
For our glorious star-gemmed banner
Had been trampled in the dust,
And the children of the pine,
To support their sacred trust.

There was silence brooding o'er them
As they formed in battle line,
The sons of brave Rhode Island,
And the children of the pine,
And unwavering as the legend,
Written in the book of fate,
Stood the soldiers of New Hampshire
For the dear old Granite State.

From each loyal State they gathered,
Willing with their hearts' best honor
For their country's pride and honor
Should dye deep the Southern flood;
And they fell like sheaves in Autumn,
Smitten in the deadly fight,
With their last cry for the Union,
And their last blow for the right.

Fought they well, and fought they bravely,
Till the setting of the sun,
Fateful omen—but twenty thousand—
'Gainst a force of ninety-one;
Yet they swept the traitor legions
As the reaper sweeps the grain,
And charged down upon the foe,
Midst a storm of leaden rain.

Not in vain their lives were given
In unequal, hopeless fray—
For from out the sacred soil on which
Our noble soldiers lay,
Shall spring up a font of freedom,
Strengthened by their patriot blood,
Which shall cleanse our nation's treason
In its onward sweeping flood.

Sleep they in the Old Dominion—
Our brave and loyal dead—
Can they ever be forgotten?
Not while heaven's tears are shed
On New Hampshire's granite mountains,
Or the waves shall watch their way,
And break upon the boulders
In old Massachusetts bay.

They have learned the South a lesson,
Though the day may have been won;
Yet their traitor hearts must tremble,
When they think of Bloody Run;
And the glory resteth on us
When unequal forces meet.
And the cause of right has gathered
A victory in defeat.

Few more battles would be needed
Like that fight to sink their cause,
And to bow each traitor spirit
To our just and holy laws.
They may boast them of their triumph,
But each voice is hushed and still,
As the British boast of victory
On the day of Bunker's Hill.

Fling out once again our banner,
Let its stars float on the air—
Safe-guard of a nation's glory,
Hallowed by a nation's prayer;
Rally 'neath its holy shadow,
Till its influence reaching far,
Shall encircle with its orbis,
Every lost and wandering star.

Camp Sullivan, Washington, July 29, 1861.

*Maine.
A captive secession officer states that on the morning of the battle, rations were given out for ninety-one thousand men.

Saturday.

In glowing terms I would this day indite—
Its morn, its noon, its afternoon and night;
The busiest day throughout the week—the latter day;
A day wherein odd matters are made even:
The dirtiest—cleanest too—of all the seven;
The scowling pal, pan, plate and platter day!
A day of general note and notability;
A plague to gentlefolks
And prime gentility,
E'en to the highest ranks—nobility;
And yet a day (barring all jokes)
Of great utility,
Both to the rich as well as the nobility!
A day of din—of clack—a clatter day;
For all, how'er they mince the matter, say
This day they dread;
A day with hippish, feverish frenzy fed,
Is that grand day of fuss and bustle—Saturday.

Anecdotes.

Frank, said an affectionate lady to a promising youngster, if you don't stop smoking and reading so much, you will get, after a while, so that you won't care anything about work.
Mother, replied the young hopeful, leisurely removing a very long cigar, I've got so now!
A bothering fellow meeting a coal merchant, inquired what a chaldron of coal would come to?
The coal merchant began to consider, and knowing that the question was put to him for mere idle curiosity, deliberately answered:
Sir, if they are well burnt they'll come to ashes.

A man was sitting in his study at work, when one of his neighbors came running to tell him that the back part of his house must be on fire, as it smoked excessively.
Oh! answered the man, be so good as to tell my wife, for I do not concern myself at all with house-keeping.

How long did Adam remain in Paradise before he sinned? asked an amiable "cara sposa" to her loving husband.
Till he got a wife, answered the husband calmly.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH SECURED,
by the use of the
Great Spring and Summer Medicine,
DR. LANGLEY'S
Root and Herb Bitters,
Composed of Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Yellow Dock, Frankly Ash, Thoroughwort, Rhubarb, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., all of which are so compounded as to act in concert, and assist Nature in eradicating disease.
The effect of this medicine is most wonderful—it acts directly upon the bowels and blood, by removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating them into healthy action, renovating the fountain of life, purifying the blood, cleansing it from all humors, and causing it to course anew through every part of the body; restoring the invalid to health and usefulness.
These cure and eradicate from the system, Liver Complaint, that main-spring of so many diseases; Jaundice in its worst forms, all Bilious Diseases and foul stomach, dyspepsia, costiveness, all kinds of humors, indigestion, headache, dizziness, piles, heartburn, weakness, pain in the sides and liver, a disordered stomach, or bad blood, to which all are more or less subject in Spring and Summer.
More than 2,000,000 persons have been cured by this medicine. It is highly recommended by Physicians everywhere. Try it, and you will never regret it.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicine everywhere at only 25 and 35 cents per bottle.

HYPOPHOSPHITES
FOR THE PREVENTION AND CURE OF
Consumption, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Marasmus, Loss of Appetite, Neuralgia, Female Complaints, and all Disorders of the Nervous and Blood Systems.

This Remedy has obtained a great reputation for curing EXTRAORDINARY CURES in ALL STAGES OF CONSUMPTION. It is recommended by many thousand Physicians in the United States and Europe—having been used with RESULTS UNPARALLELED IN THE ANNALS OF MEDICINE.
The Hypophosphites have a two-fold and specific action on the one hand, increasing the principle which CONSTITUTES VERY VIGOROUS ENERGY, and on the other, being the most POWERFUL BLOOD GENERATING AGENTS KNOWN. In cases of Nervous Debility, or Prostration of the Vital Powers, from any cause, this Remedy has no superior.

"Winchester's Genuine Preparation"

Is the only reliable form of the Hypophosphites, made after the Original Formula of Dr. Churchill.

THE SPECIFIC PILL.

A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, and Genital Irritability in either sex.
This Malady, the terrible consequences of which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of Life, and therefore undermines the constitution, and sinks the unhappy victim into imbecility and a permanent grave! From one to six boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most aggravated cases, whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse or Excesses.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Spermatorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science].
I have found them all that could be desired.—Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years. I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E. P. DICKER, M. D.
This is not a Homeopathic Remedy, nor is there any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.
PRICE—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5, by mail, prepaid. For sale by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.

DR. LA CROIX'S

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES
ON THE
Physiological View of Marriage.
250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushing, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Man, each for $4, 9c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled Physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore, as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for Medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. DeLaney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.
TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC INDUCTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

Coming Home.

O brothers and sisters, growing old,

Do you all remember yet

That home in the shade of the rustling tree,

Where once our household met?

Do you know how we used to come from school,

Through the summer's pleasant heat;

With the yellow fennel's golden dust

On our tired little feet?

And sometimes in an idle mood

We loitered by the way;

And stopped in the woods to gather flowers,

And in the fields to play;

Till warned by the deepening shadows' fall

That told of the coming night.

We climbed to the top of the last long hill,

And saw our home in sight!

And, brothers and sisters, older now

Than she whose life is o'er,

Do you think of the mother's loving face,

That looked from the open door?

Alas, for the changing things of time;

That home in the first is low!

And that loving smile was hid from us,

In the darkness, long ago!

And we have come to life's last hill,

From which our weary eyes

Can almost look on that home that shines

Eternal in the skies.

So brothers and sisters as we go,

Still let us move as o'er,

Always together keeping step,

Till the march of life is done:

For that mother who waited for us here,

Wearing a smile so sweet,

Now waits on the hills of paradise

For her children's coming feet!

Scraps.

It is not wisdom, but ignorance, which teaches men presumption. Genius may be sometimes arrogant, but nothing is diffident as knowledge.

It is curious to note the old sea-margins of human thought! Each subsiding century yields some new mystery; we build where monsters used to hide themselves.

A French writer says, "Love and matrimony are two ladders. Upon the ladder of love man climbs from earth to heaven; upon the ladder of marriage he descends again to earth."

Dickens says of a mother who died with her babe on her bosom: "Clasping that light spar with her arms, she drifted out upon the dark and unknown sea that rolls around the world."

A grocer in Portland, (Me.), informs the public by a placard in his window that he has "cast steel soap" for sale.

Robins are most abundant in the country; larks in the city.

To make your coat last, avoid using it; to make your virtues endure, use them continually.

The "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

Poverty—A Legend.

One day we were so fortunate as to discover an old traditionary relic of great beauty; the legend and its title running as follows:

The new and pleasant history of Goodman Poverty; showing what Poverty was, where he had his origin, in what fashion he dealt with Death, and when he will come to an end in the world.

Saint Peter and Saint Paul, overtaken suddenly by a great storm, once upon a time, when they were journeying together, came to the outskirts of a village, where, at first sight, they perceived only a rich man's house, so grand that they hesitated to enter it.

It seems to me, in my poor judgment, said Saint Peter, that it would be well, before knocking at the gate of this grand house, to try and learn in the neighborhood what manner of person the master may be; and whether he be really a man of substance, and well to do in the world; for this is a point upon which one is often mistaken. No matter how handsome the houses we see by the wayside, we generally find that their owners are over head and ears in debt; owing their fine dwellings, and all they contain to their creditors, and not possessing, in reality, a farthing of their own to bless themselves with.

Saint Paul fully agreed in this prudent view of the case; but he was hungry, and cast his eyes about in every direction, seeking some one of whom to make the necessary inquiries. At length he exclaimed, joyfully, I see a woman washing linen in yonder pool; I will go and ask her if she knows anything of the master of the house.

So saying, he approached the washerwoman, and accosted her very politely.—Good day to you, dame, said he; this is a heavy rain we are having to-day.

Sooth, and ye may well say so, master, replied the woman, without stopping her work, and, 'tis lucky for me 'tis only water, for if it were wine, it would hardly suit my washing; but then, to be sure, we might have a brave drinking bout, and after that lay up a good store in the cellar.

Ye are merry, methinks, good dame! replied Saint Paul.

And wherefore not? quoth the washerwoman. Thank God, I lack nothing that woman need wish for, except, to be sure, now and then a little money.

Money! cried the Saint; ah, you are very fortunate in having no money, and being able to do without it.

Ay, ay, that's all very well to say, returned the washerwoman; but for all the harm that money has ever done to me, I may say that I shouldn't mind seeing a little more of it.

I see you like to have your joke, my good dame, continued the Saint; but I assure you that money causes the ruin of a vast number of souls; and that it were to be wished, for the good of very many people, that they might never behold a coin all the days of their life.

As for me, said the washerwoman, I am too busy to do much wishing; and a crown so seldom comes in my way that I never had the chance to look at one long enough to make out the pictures upon it.

Saint Peter, who had been standing all this time under an oak, where he had taken refuge from the rain, grew impatient at hearing this long conversation, and begged Saint Paul to come away at once, and seek some better shelter. So they went up to the gate of the mansion, and lifted the knocker; but the master of the house put his head out of the window and bade them begone.

This is no inn, fellows, cried he roughly, off with you this moment, and look for lodgings elsewhere! And with this he shut the window, and turned scornfully away.

But the poor travellers were now drenched to the skin, and their forlorn plight touched the washerwoman's heart with pity.

I wish I could take ye home with me, said she, I would do so with right good will; for ye seem to be decent, honest folk; but I dare not ask ye in, for I am a widow, and the neighbors would talk. But if ye will have patience a bit, while I finish my washing, I will presently take ye to the house of one of the town's people, Poverty by name, who lives at the further end of the village, and will gladly give ye a night's lodging.

Accordingly, as soon as the washing was done, the woman led Saint Peter and Saint Paul to Poverty's cottage as she had promised to do.

It was but a little past sundown, and yet the Goodman was already gone to bed.

Hallo, Poverty! cried the washerwoman, going close up to the window, here are two poor travellers who have been caught in the storm, and who know not where to lay their heads.

Goodman Poverty had no sooner heard that these poor people wanted a night's lodging than he lifted the latch, and bade them come in. Light the lamp, neighbor, said he to the washerwoman, as she stepped across the threshold.

Saint Peter and Saint Paul now entered the cottage. Every thing in the house was topsy-turvy; one could distinguish nothing for the confusion; and the master himself, tall, thin, withered and pale, looked as though he had just come out of a sepulchre.

God be praised for the shelter of this roof, and may his blessing descend upon it! said Saint Peter.

Amen! responded Poverty, so mote it be! In sooth, my masters, I should have great need of his blessing, to be able to offer you any supper; for I have not so much as a morsel of bread in the house.

But the washerwoman, who had expected as much, now opened a basket which she had brought with her, and produced four fine large whittings, ready fried, a great brown loaf, and a pitcher of wine.

Ah, Lord! bread and fish as I live! cried Saint Paul, greatly delighted.

Thank ye kindly, dame, said Saint Peter, we only asked for a roof to cover us, and you give us also this good supper! The Lord reward you for all the trouble you have taken.

Bah! cried the washerwoman, setting out the food on the rickety table, a morsel before sleeping never yet did harm to anybody; and, for my part, I am well paid in being able to offer your friend something to his mind.

They now seated themselves at the table, and began to eat with good appetites; all but Poverty, who was sad because of something that had happened to him that very afternoon. The poor man possessed nothing in the world but his cottage, and the little paddock, about as long as your arm, that lay behind it, and in which grew a fine pear tree; but the hedge round this paddock was not much harder to get through than a spider's web, and certain marauders, from the neighborhood had taken advantage of this bad state of the hedge to get through into the paddock and rob the pear tree, whose fruit formed the Goodman's sole revenue. This was why he had gone to bed—appetizer, vexed to the heart at seeing the half of his crop stolen from him; and his trouble was still so great that he could not touch a mouthful of the four large whittings, ready fried, the great loaf, and the pitcher of wine, with which his guests were regaling themselves. When the supper was over, Saint Peter, looking at Saint Paul, said to him, in a low voice, this poor man's sorrow really excites my compassion; we must pray for him.

Indeed, sirs, said Poverty, who had overheard what was said, I should be very much obliged to you if you would do so; as for me, it is plain that my prayers have very little credit with Heaven, seeing I cannot find any way of bettering the miserable condition in which you find me.

The Lord sometimes tries the just for their good, said Saint Peter; it may be that He is thus trying you; but have you any particular favor to ask of Him?

The rogues who have robbed me of my pears, have made me so angry, replied the Goodman, that, if I might have my way, I would ask that all those who climb up into my pear tree might be forced to stay there as long as I choose to keep them.

That is certainly contenting yourself with very little, replied Saint Peter.

Not so little as you may think, rejoined Poverty; what joy for me to see a rogue stuck up there on a branch, unable to budge and begging for mercy.

Well, replied Saint Peter, if the Lord condescends to listen to the voice of his servants (which he does,) you may be sure that your wish will be granted; for we shall do our very best for you, in the way of praying.

All that night did Saint Peter and Saint Paul remain on their knees in prayer: they would not take a moment's repose, notwithstanding the good offers of Poverty, who, in order to furnish them each with a couch, had divided into three parts the bundle of straw that formed his bed. But when the morning was come, Saint Peter and Saint Paul informed their charitable host that his wish was granted; and then, Poverty having shaken them heartily by the hand, (although he could not help fearing that they were only making game of him,) they left the cottage, and went on their way.

But lo and behold! next morning, when Poverty was coming back with his pitcher from the well, he espied a good-for-nothing varlet, from his village, stuck fast in the pear tree, working his arms and legs about with might and main, and looking for all the world like a bird caught fast in the lime.

Ah! villain! I have thee! cried Poverty; but, good Heaven, what manner of men were they who came to me last night! As for thee, thou rascally thief, I shall keep thee up there, and treat thee as thou deservest. In the first place I shall call the whole village together, and then I shall kindle a good fire of straw, and roast thee like a sucking pig!

Thereupon, the thief begged hard for mercy, offering to pay, at the very lowest, the worth of ten crops of pears.

No, no; don't trouble thyself to offer me money, answered Poverty; I am poor enough. Heaven knows; but, nevertheless, I prefer to pay myself after my own fashion. Wait just the least little half-quarter of an hour; I shall soon have gathered faggots enough to give thee a good singeing! Ah! thou lovest fine juicy pears! I'll cure thee of thy thirst, for them, thou rascal.

Away went Poverty to gather straw and sticks for his fire; and when he was gone, the thief cried for help with all the force he could muster, and so lustily that he drew to the spot two wood-cutters, who were going home from the forest.

Why, what art doing up there, Nicholas? inquired the men.

That wicked old wizard, Poverty—for he is a wizard—has put a spell on me, replied the thief; here I am glued fast to the tree, and all because of a few miserable pears, forsooth, that I had eaten, being very thirsty.

Thereupon the wood-cutters began to amuse themselves at the catiff's expense; joking him for the fright he was in, and declaring that Poverty was but a sorry sort of wizard, after all; for otherwise, said they, he would have had wit to mend his own fortune, and kept himself from starving long ago.

Having delivered themselves of this piece of reasoning, and wishing to help Nicholas down from his perch, they climbed up to the tree, thinking to set the vagabond at liberty; but they would sooner have torn his arms from his body than have got him loose from the bough.

Faith, lad, there's no help for it, said the wood-cutters; all we can do for thee is, to go to the squire.

But when they would have got down from off the tree, they found themselves caught just as fast as Nicholas; so that Poverty, on coming back a few minutes after, with a great bundle of brushwood and faggots, found, as he thought, three near-thieves in his tree, instead of one.

Ah! cried he with a chuckle; the fair goes on bravely, I see; there's no lack of traders; very good, my fine fellows; just stay where you are; in two minutes I shall smoke you all like so many herrings.

Excellent Poverty, began both the wood-cutters together, while their tears trickled down to the very foot of the tree, look at us, we are good neighbors of yours; indeed, and in truth, we only got up into this cursed tree to help Nicholas down.

Don't tell me, cried Poverty; no, no; you wanted to steal my pears.

But, good Poverty, we never passed for thieves in all the country-side; we have pear trees in our own gardens, that bear pears quite as fine as these. And even had we neither pear trees nor pears, had we wanted any, the market is not far off, and we could get our fill of them for a few farthings.

If what you say is true, replied Poverty, you may come down; and the punishment is only meant for thieves.

And, in sooth, the two wood-cutters found themselves suddenly let loose, and were able to jump down to the ground; whereupon the first thing they did was to intercede for the rascal who remained in the tree, as frightened and weary as a toad in a wine vat.

It's no use begging for him, cried Poverty, no, no; he shall stay up there a year for every pear he has stolen.

But the wood-cutters, nothing daunted, pleaded so well, that the poor man's heart was so rich in charity, that, at last, he consented to forgive the thief on condition that for the future he should never come within a hundred paces of the garden; but the vagabond swore that he would never again be seen within a league of the cottage, so terrible did the very sight of the pear tree now seem to him.

Moreover, the noise of this adventure soon spread abroad in the village, and frightened the people so much that no one ever again sought to rob Poverty of his pears; the very children, bold as they generally are and greedy of fruit, would on no account have even thrown a stone up into the tree, for they were still more afraid of this pear tree than the wolf that ate up Little Red Riding Hood.

For a long space, Poverty lived merrily, and his heart rejoiced within him whenever he looked at his pear tree, so green, and so thriving, laden with red and yellow fruit, that stood him in place of every thing else; but the years passed on, and the Goodman's head was covered with snow. From time to time sickness took hold of him.

One day there was a tap at the cottage door, and Poverty opened it to see who was there. It was Death.

Now many people are troubled on beholding the King of the country of Clatter-bones; but Poverty was not a whit afraid of him, for he had nothing amiss on his conscience, and had always lived an honest man, though a poor one.

What! art thou not afraid of me? cried Death, very much astonished, before whom popes, kings and emperors tremble?

You do not frighten me the least in the world, answered Poverty. What pleasure have I in this life, that I should not also quit it with pleasure? I have neither wife nor children; in sooth, I have had trouble enough without that sort of fry to take care of; I have not the worth of a farthing, except my cottage and my pear tree, which is, as I may say, a nursing mother to me, through the fine fruit it gives me every year. See! it is now covered with pears, and the only sorrow I have in setting eyes on you is the thought of being obliged to leave it without having first eaten this year's crop. Unluckily, you are one of those gentry with whom it is no use talking, otherwise I should be quite ready to follow you.

What thou sayest seems to me to be very reasonable, said Death; go and gather the fruit for thyself.

Hereupon Poverty, with Death following close to his heels, stepped out into the paddock, and walked round and round the tree, seeking out the finest pear.

I see one that looks very ripe and red, cried he, at last, but how high it hangs!—However, if I might make bold to borrow your worship's scythe for a moment, I think I should be able to get at the branch.

Oh, as to my scythe, replied Death, I never lend that to anybody; but it seems to me, it would be better to gather this pear by hand, lest it should get bruised in the falling.

You're certainly right, returned Poverty, it would be altogether better; but my poor old bones have grown stiff of late, and I cannot climb it as I could at fifteen.

Well, said Death, I'll go up myself, and gather for thee this fine pear, from which thou thinkest to have so much pleasure, and so saying, he clambered up into the pear tree.

Hallo! cried Death, but what is that is taking hold of me? Why, I cannot get down.

As to that, returned Poverty, very coolly, as to your affair not mine. Why did you come to my cottage? You have the whole world to now in, and yet must needs come looking into my miserable hovel, to take the life of one who never did you any harm.

Darest thou trifle with me thus? cried Death. Behinks thee to what thou exposest thyself?

I've bethought me of all that, already, replied Poverty, and I'm not in the least afraid of you. I have you fast in my pear tree, old gentleman, and there you shall stay.

I shall thus be doing a great service to a lot of other honest folk whom you meant to visit to-day.

Death, who never before had found himself in such a strait, saw at once there must be something unearthly about his tree.

I have deserved what has happened, said he to himself, by a piece of condescension quite out of my usual way. But let me tell thee, cried he, addressing himself to Poverty, thou wilt gain nothing by thus setting thyself against the will of Heaven. If it be the Lord's pleasure that thou quit this life, he will make thee quit it, in spite of all thou canst do; and besides, if thou dost not let me come down of thine own free will, I shall very soon have killed thy pear-tree with my scythe.

Pshaw! returned Poverty, whether my pear-tree be living or dead, you don't come out of it except at my pleasure, and that won't be very soon, I promise you.

Why did I ever set my foot in this plaguey dwelling? said Death to himself; I had plenty to do in the four corners of the earth, without coming here. Thou wilt repent of this day's business, cried he to Poverty, when it is too late.

I shall do no such thing, replied Poverty; he who is not afraid of dying is also above the fear of many other things. Your threats do not cause me the slightest alarm, and I am quite ready to start for the other world when the Master shall call me.

Thou mayst boast thyself, Goodman, to be the first who has ever vanquished Death.—Heaven orders me, with thy leave, to quit thee, and not to come back to thee until the day of doom, when I shall have finished my great work.

Is it not to cheat me that you speak to me thus? asked Poverty.

No, replied Death, I swear to thee that thou shalt see me no more until the desolation of all nature shall be accomplished; it is thou who shalt receive the last stroke of my scythe.

In that case, returned Poverty, you may come down from the tree.

Death did not wait to be told twice, but flew away through the air, and Poverty has never heard another word from him to this day. It is true that Death has often come back to the village, and has carried off even the most respectable people, but he flies past the Goodman's cottage, as though the pest were in it.

Poverty has lived on, ever since, in the same humble way, under the shadow of his beloved pear tree, and Poverty will still live on, in the world, as long as the world shall last.

Duties of Daily Life.

Life is not entirely made up of great evils or heavy trials; but the perpetual recurrence of petty evils and small trials is the ordinary and appointed exercise of the Christian graces. To bear with the failings of those about us—with their infirmities, their bad judgment, their ill-breeding, their perverse temper—to endure neglect when we feel that we have deserved attention, and ingratitude where we expected thanks—to bear with the company of disagreeable people whom Providence has placed in our way and whom He has provided or purposed for the trial of our virtues—these are the best exercises of patience and self-denial, and the better because not chosen by ourselves. To bear with vexation in business, with disappointment in our expectations, with interruptions of our retirement, with folly, intrusion, disturbance—in short, with whatever opposes our humor—this habitual acquiescence appears to be more of the essence of self-denial than any little rigors or afflictions of our own imposing. These constant, inevitable, but inferior evils, properly improved, furnish a good moral discipline, and might, in the days of ignorance, have superseded pilgrimage and penance.

Importance of Exercise.

For the preservation of health, exercise is of the utmost importance. Respiration, circulation, digestion, secretion, and all the bodily functions are assisted by it; causing at the same time clearness of mind and cheerfulness of heart. The evil results of the want or deficiency of exercise are seen in persons of indolent life or sedentary habits. Indigestion, costiveness, congestion, and a multitude of other ailments are produced, and the general derangement and discomfort of the whole system under which nervous and hypochondriacal patients suffer. The robust health commonly enjoyed by the working-classes, compared with those engaged in sedentary pursuits, is chiefly owing to their bodily labor. In every period and occupation of life, exercise is essential to health, but most of all in the young.

A Shrewd Irishman.

A priest was seen standing at the corner of one of the squares in London about the hour of dinner. One of his countrymen observing the worthy father in perplexity, addressed him:

"Oh, Father O'Leary, how is your rivrinee?"

"Mightily put out, Pat," was the reply.

"Put out! Who'd put out your rivrinee?"

"Ah! you don't understand; this is just it: I am invited to dine at one of the houses in this square, and I have forgotten the name, and I never looked at the number, and now it's seven o'clock."

"Oh is that all?" was the cry, "just now be easy your rivrinee, I'll settle that for you."

So saying, away flew the good-natured Irishman round the square, glancing at the kitchens, and when he discovered a fire that denoted hospitality, he thundered at the door and inquired, "Is Father O'Leary here?" As might be expected, again and again, he was repulsed. At length an angry footman exclaimed:

"No; bother on Father O'Leary, he is not here, but he was to dine here to-day, and the cook is in a rage, and says the dinner will be spoilt. All is waiting for Father O'Leary."

Paddy leaping from the door as if the steps had been on fire, rushed up to the astonished priest: "All right your honor's rivrinee; you dine at forty-three, and a mighty good dinner you'll get."

"Oh, Pat," said the grateful pastor, "the blessing of a hungry man be upon you."

"Long life and happiness to your rivrinee; I have got your malady, I wish I had your remedy."

A Noble Act.

A noble ship was bearing down on the English coast under a stiff breeze and a lowering sky. It was not many hours before she was in the teeth of a violent storm, rolling and plunging in the angry waters. The wind smacked through her cordage, and huge timbers groaned from stem to stern.—She at last struck and became unmanageable, and hoisted signals of distress. A crew of brave men from the shore put out to rescue her living freight. Among those on board was a negro with two orphan children under his charge. The boat was soon filled with the affrighted passengers, and there was room for but one more—room for the negro, or the two little ones. Who should be saved—who left behind to perish? The faithful negro did not hesitate. Over the ship's side he lowered the helpless children into the life-boat, and only called out, "Tell master, Coffee did his duty." Hannah More was asked to write a poem on this touching event but she declined, saying, "No art could embellish so noble an action."

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, June 21st, 1862.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we"

SUDDEN DEATH. Oh, how short and uncertain is the life of man! Never was it brought more vividly to our mind, than on Tuesday morning last, by the sudden death of Mr. Lewis Baxter, of this town. He rose early, as was his custom, and performed his morning chores in apparently good health and spirits; talking and joking with his neighbors about the lack of interest manifested by our citizens in not celebrating the day—the 17th of June—and then went to the house for his breakfast. After seating himself at the table he took upon his plate a roasted potatoe and some salt, and when in the act of partaking of the same, his knife and fork fell to the floor, and he who was—no more. Mr. Baxter, although sixty-eight years of age, was, from outward appearance, as well as the most of us, but like the morning dew, passed away in the twinkling of an eye. He leaves a wife and one son, with a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his sudden departure.

VERY ACCEPTABLE. We were agreeably surprised, a few days since, by a present, of a rich basket of strawberries, from the garden of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Whiting. They were far better, than the average run of this kind of fruit—uncommonly large and of a most excellent flavor. We say surprised, for the vines from which these berries were gathered, were in bearing order late in the fall of last year, and our ignorance in such matters, lead us to conclude that one yield in a season was as much as could reasonably be expected, and that time would be required for another crop. But in this we were mistaken. For we are assured by Mr. Whiting, that the vines were never more thrifty, and are loaded with the fairest kind of fruit, now which he is taking twenty to thirty boxes a day to meet the demands of his customers.

WALK UP AND GET SHAVED. Our citizens are once more to be favored by the presence of that skilful and agreeable barber—George Anderson—who uses the razor so neat and easily that it gives one pleasure to be in his "old chair."

A CHANGE. Mr. Congdon, who has so long been connected with one of our banks, as Cashier, has resigned that office, and been succeeded by Henry F. Barker, a worthy young man of this place, and eminently qualified to discharge the important duties of the office to which he has been called.

LARGE SHIPMENTS OF GRAIN. During last week the enormous amount of one million, four hundred and thirteen thousand, four hundred and eighty-four bushels of grain, and thirty-five thousand, four hundred and thirty-two barrels of flour were shipped from New York for Europe, the most of it going to Great Britain.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY. The regular monthly meeting of the New York Historical Society was held last week, at its rooms, at the corner of First Street and Second Avenue. President Luther Bradish occupied the chair.

Several valuable donations to the Society were announced by the Librarian, Miss Eliza L. Quincy, daughter of the venerable Josiah Quincy, was nominated as a corresponding member, in consideration of her editing a memoir of her mother.

THOSE HERRINGS. The editors of the Hingham Journal are making themselves happy over (as they express it) "a fine box of herring, received from friends at Weymouth." In an article which appeared in their paper of the 13th inst., they congratulate themselves and the public, on their good fortune, and say, that if nothing unusual happens, they shall now be able to hold out a little longer, or until a fresh supply comes in from other quarters. Happy fellows! But then, their pathway is not strewn with flowers. To conduct so able a paper on such a meagre diet, is no easy task. Doubts have already been expressed, and fears uttered, growing out of these circumstances, that their future essays will lack their usual spirit and vivacity and savor too strong of the fish market.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS. We have received the speech, in pamphlet form, of Hon. B. F. Thomas, delivered in the House of Representatives, April 10, 1862, on the Emancipation Bill. It is from the press of Wilson & Son, Boston, and is got up in their best style.

Congress has concluded to adjourn on the 30th inst.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, June 19, 1862.

There is some tremor here in the public mind from the rebellion news, as the telegram has spoken from day to day the present week, and the anxiety seems large as to the result of our army movements. The spirit of the Boston press evidently manifests some misgivings; and many of the editorials infer that the country has never comprehended until now, the task it had to perform—that our unbroken successes since the first of January have lulled the Federal government into the lap of mistaken security. With many we are likely to awake any morning in our quiet towns of New England from the sound of the tocsin of war, and our brave volunteer troops ordered to Washington instantly.

We are, however, much in the dark as to the true position, or the "situation" as it is termed, of military movements on the Potomac, more especially. The whole contest is likely to be in Virginia, about where it commenced, as the most reliable advices show—if we can believe anything—that the rebels are concentrating from all points on the "sacred soil," all gathering there like a flock of blackbirds, and very much like them as far as celerity is concerned. Nearly all of Beauregard's army having made good their escape from Halleck, ere this may be transferred to South Carolina or Virginia. It is even said that McClellan's column is outnumbered before Richmond, and that the valley of the Shenandoah, which is getting somewhat famous for fighting ground, is again in danger by the active movements of that arch rebel, Stonewall Jackson, and that our forces are decimating by the prevalence of disease peculiar to the Summer climate of Virginia. All of these reports must be taken with great allowance. If there are errors in our army movements it is not too late to correct them. The great mistake with Gen. McClellan and his invincible army to Yorktown, and from Yorktown to Richmond has been inactivity or delay. Napoleonic dashes on the rebel forces at Richmond and the city is ours, and a panic would be produced in rebellion that would put their traitorous troops everywhere hors de combat from terror, if nothing more.

The main armies of the rebels in Virginia being broken up no danger will follow as it is apprehended by many from guerrilla war, as it is only possible in a country where there are no railroads and no great rivers. Guerrillas are not so easily reached and a people not commercial.

The week has been quiet in a business view. Many of our well to do citizens are looking up their summer retreats in the rural districts.

The sick and wounded soldiers are coming North fast. They are worthy of the kindest attentions. Inquiries are making for hospital establishments near Boston, and the sea shore is more favorable for sanitary purposes than the interior. It would be well for the government to purchase Squantum or Hough's Neck in your pleasant town, as a permanent asylum for those who return disabled from the war. The locations are delightful and of easy access to Boston by water and land carriage.

Politically all is quiet here. The general impression exists that we are to have a new Governor next year. It is doubtful if Gov. Andrew is again a candidate for re-election. His day of popularity is past in the Old Bay State. Mr. Dawes, member of Congress from Berkshire, will probably be the candidate of the Republican party. If Sumner is beaten as United States Senator next winter, it will not be a miracle to see Judge Thomas in his place.

SHAMEFUL NEGLECT. The following is copied from the New York Evening Post, and is credited to a reliable source.

"We desire to call the attention of the entire North to the inhuman manner in which the wounded of our army at the battle of Hanover Court House and before Richmond have been treated. Hundreds of these poor soldiers were kept two or three days with their wounds festering in the hot sun, without care or attention. Many of the wounded in these battles were sent to despatch stations, where they lay without shelter and without care till their wounds became loathsome and filled with vermin. The cars and boats for the last week have presented sights which humanity would shudder to behold. Hundreds of wounded soldiers are now dying here for the want of proper attention and the means of promptly transporting them to their friends at the North. Cannot something be done to prevent like occurrences in the future?"

THE MORMONS. We shall now know whether the Mormons will give up their peculiar institution, or rebel. The Senate has passed the House Bill to suppress polygamy, and making the penalty for the violation of the law $500, and imprisonment not less than five years. It also provides that no church in any territory shall own more than $50,000 worth of property. Only the California Senators voted against the bill, and they only on the ground that it might lead to troubles which would interfere with overland communication with that State.

For the Patriot
A Different View.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

A writer in your last, thinks necessary to defend Company H, of the Fourth Regiment, because only thirty-five members were found willing to enlist under Gov. Andrew's call; it seems to me that this is sufficiently explained by the Governor's own letter of the week preceding, in which he says:—"Our young men are all pre-occupied with other views."

Our citizen soldiers are not like the serfs who form the armies of Europe, but educated and habituated to think for themselves, and they chose not to enlist in a war which, while managed by its present conductors, is fruitless of good, and only continually evil. They know that while under such accomplished officers as Col. Packard and Capt. Spear they will be called upon to do nothing repugnant to citizens and soldiers; but they know also, that even these officers are more likely to be subjected to Ban's, who would "let the Union slide," than to Burnside, whose motto is "the Union, the Constitution, and the supremacy of the Laws."

They may well hesitate to pour out their blood at the bidding of the men who now control our affairs, when it is admitted at Washington by those who stand around the burning crater, listening to the unholy fires raging within, that safety lies not in bristling bayonets, but in the ballot-box.

A new Congress is the only hope for this republic. Many of the present members, while listening to the eloquence and pure patriotism of such men as Judge Thomas, may have their better feelings stirred within them, and their cheeks moistened with the recollections of better days, yet when a vote is taken, shrink back again to the meanness and poverty of politicians.

Let Massachusetts become naturalized, and send to the Senate, in place of Sumner, one fit to represent her as she was when she shone among the brightest in our national constellation. Let her place in the Governor's chair some one with soul enough not to attempt to dictate to President Lincoln the terms upon which her soldiers will march to the music of the Union. Let her show her fealty to the principles of her early patriots, and the first and best step will have been taken to put a stop to this deplorable war and bring back the blessings of peace to our now distracted country.

Obituary.

CAMP NEAR NEW BRIDGE, (VA.)
JUNE 7TH, 1862.

LEONARD B. HARRINGTON, Corporal of Company H, 18th Massachusetts Regiment, Infantry, died in camp near Kidd's Mills, (Va.) May 23d, 1862, aged 28 years.

Brigham was a schoolmate of mine, and also, of others, to whom he endeared himself as a friend, always cheerful and kind; speaking loving words to all that knew him. School time passed, and we were separated, each one travelling his own separate pathway of life, until the horrors of civil war again united us in a little band, and we left our homes to fight for our country's flag and honor. We passed through the winter months, and entered upon our spring campaign—and he, although not in the best of health, marched with us, never murmuring or complaining, and often volunteering to perform duties which were not rightfully his.

In the middle of the month of May, he began to fail, and neither the anxiety or kindness of friends could save him; he sank away, and at twenty minutes past nine, on the evening of the 22d of May, the spirit took its flight, and all that was mortal of Brigham, was dead.

I was with him in his last hours, and calmly and peacefully as an infant sleeping, did he pass away, making not one murmur, neither uttering any complaint.

We buried him next day, between two large pines in the woods, near which he left us, and enclosed his grave with a neat rustic fence—and just as the setting sun threw its last beams upon us, we took leave of him, and his body was shut from our sight forever.

God bless him, and "temper the wind to the shorn lamb," who has lost the partner of her joys and sorrows, making life to her, as it were, a blank. May she be prepared to meet him, and be to him as he always said of her, "his nearest and dearest friend," and when the day of life is over, lay herself down quietly as he did, and journey on to meet him.

For the Patriot.
The Smelling Committee.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Please publish the following lines which were taken from a New Orleans paper printed in 1860, and oblige

Your humble servant,
KEEP SHADY.

Two Squires, one fool, and one more foolish still
Were chosen once, great offices to fill;
One Squire was portly, jolly, and could joke,
The other, short and surly, seldom spoke.

Now, these four officers were School Committee,
That two were fools was really a sad pity;
One fool had charge of all the schools up West,
Those at the Point were with the other blest.

The first knew just enough a lock to pick,
And often near the key hole used to stick,
To see if certain teacher kept a jug,
Or ate his dinner from a plate, or mug.

One day, when certain he had smelt bad rum,
He called the other three to quickly come;
They all smelt rum, but whose the breath could be,
Was more a mystery than the deep sea.

At length, the greater fool says, "I'll resign,
The whole of you drink either rum or wine,
My Christian sentiments are really shocked,
The wheels of Education whiskey locked."

THE STORY OF ONE REGIMENT. When the Maine Eleventh passed through Broadway, New York, last November, the "Hallelujah Chorus" chanted by eight hundred and fifty sturdy fellows, few persons who saw them could have anticipated that those tall lumbermen would, within a twelvemonth, be almost decimated. Arriving in Washington they built those famous barracks which were visited by so many strangers; but in spite of the fine shelter the typhoid was soon busy in their ranks, and when they went down with Casey's division they were only seven hundred and fifty strong; one eighth died of disease. When on the Peninsula they lived on hard biscuit and water for five weeks, owing to the inefficiency or rascality of some one, so that when they took up the double quick for Williamsburg the men fell on the road and died from sheer exhaustion. At the battle of Fair Oaks they numbered, fit for duty, only one hundred and eighty men. One half of this number were in action, and were nearly all killed and wounded.—New York Evening Post.

ADVERTISING. The man who undertakes to do business in this go-ahead age without advertising will make slow progress. It has become a matter of necessity for dealers to make public through the columns of some well conducted journal the articles they have for sale. Those who fail to do it stand in their own light in much the same way as the individual who refuses to patronize the modern mode of travel.

A NUISANCE. The bakery in the basement of the capitol at Washington has become a great nuisance. The smoke and soot from it are destructive of millinery. Fashionable summer bonnets are excluded by it from the capitol. The other day when a west wind prevailed, the smoke drove from the Congress Library all its visitors.

THE ARMY WORM. Some of these pests have been found in the Cemetery, and one tree there bears unmistakable signs of their greediness, in the loss of a large part of its verdure.—North Bridgewater Gazette.

Keep them there, brother Phiney.

RISE IN COAL. At a meeting of the coal dealers of Boston, recently, it was unanimously agreed to fix the price of coal at six dollars per ton, on account of the great freshets in Schuylkill County, and the consequent scarcity of coal in Philadelphia.

CROPS IN CALIFORNIA. The California papers say the grain crop in that State this year will not be more than half as large as it was last year. The recent floods had a disastrous effect upon the agriculture of the section of country submerged.

AUCTION. A lot of wharf stone and grass will be sold at Quincy Canal, on Monday afternoon. For particulars see advertisement.

Special Notices.

SPECIAL MEETING. The Members of Tiger Engine Company, No. 2, are requested to meet at their Engine House, this SATURDAY EVENING, June 21st, at 7 1-2 o'clock, as business of importance is to be transacted.

Per order of the Captain,
F. HARDWICK, Clerk.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Nine Spanish merino sheep were sheared at St. Johnsbury, (Vt.) a few days ago, the aggregate fleeces weighing 99 pounds and two ounces. The fleece of one of the above—a two year old—weighed sixteen and one-half pounds. A yearling sheared thirteen and three-fourths pounds.

There is some talk in Congress of appropriating Gen. Lee's Arlington estate, and erecting buildings there for a Hotel des Invalides, for the use of soldiers mutilated by the rebels.

The drought in Canada East is so severe that the pastures are drying up and the farmers are talking of shooting their cattle rather than see them starve.

A movement is being made in Nashua, (N. H.) to repeal their city charter and go back into the town system.

Benjamin Whidden, of New Hampshire, has been nominated for Minister to Hayti; Gustavus Koerner for Minister to Spain, and E. D. Colver, of Brooklyn, (N. Y.) for Minister to Venezuela.

During the late flood in the Lehigh river, the water actually rose fifteen feet in ten minutes.

There are no Union men so strong as those who have been tried as by fire, in the border States.

Capt. Schultz arrived at Washington on the 13th inst., with the treaty with Great Britain for the suppression of the slave trade, signed by the Queen. Ratifications having been exchanged, the treaty is now a law.

Thus far 615 petitions have been filed for 1002 slaves in the District of Columbia. The total amount claimed for these slaves is $1,400,000.

The government is preparing to shelter our armies against the blazing sun of the South. Seventy-five thousand cotton or linen shelter tents have been ordered in New York alone, and will be ready for delivery early in July. They will be made on the French pattern, which is considered the best.

A tradesman in Wilmington, (N. C.) announces that he has just received some spool cotton, which he sells to ladies making soldiers' clothes for five dollars a dozen spools. "No person allowed to buy more than one package."

The Charleston Mercury says that Jeff Davis is an incubus upon the Southern cause and totally unfit to govern the affairs of the Confederacy.

The United States Senate has voted that, after the first of November next, spirit rations in the navy shall cease.

There are about eight thousand rebel prisoners at Chicago.

The tax bill has been referred to a committee of conference, and may pass Congress in the course of the week.

The French were defeated at Puebla by the Mexicans, with a loss of 500 killed.

The rebels wore white patches on their hats behind to prevent their comrades from firing into them, as regiments successively advanced at the battle of Fair Oaks.

During debate in Congress on Monday last, Senator Trumbull said that he expected to spend the Fourth of July in Richmond.

The Secretary of the Treasury has requested Congress to authorize a further issue of treasury notes to the amount of one hundred and fifty millions.

A home for discharged soldiers is to be established in Boston, where they may remain while waiting for pay or transportation, or are detained by other causes.

The secession Congressman, Vallindigham, has received a sharp rebuff from home. A petition has been forwarded to the House, from 633 loyal citizens of Cincinnati, asking for his expulsion from Congress as a traitor to his country and a disgrace to the State of Ohio.

The schooner Ocean Belle, Capt. Vinal, arrived at Cohasset on the 10th inst., with 100 barrels mackerel, being the first arrival for the season.

Rev. Luther Rice, of New York, will preach in the Universalist Church to-morrow.

THE WEATHER AT THE SOUTH. A small negro boy judiciously leaned up against the sunny side of a house and felt asleep. In a few minutes he began to soften, and in three quarters of an hour he ran all over the yard. His mother dipped him up and put him in a washtub.

Marriages.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 13th inst., Ida S., daughter of Mr. Nathan C. and Mrs. Salome Buck, aged 3 years and 2 months.

On the 14th inst., Mrs. Cynthia P., wife of Lieut. Samuel Baxter of Co. D, 19th Mass. Reg., of Newburyport, aged 25 years.

On the 16th inst., Mrs. Martha M., wife of Dr. David Edwards, aged 79 years and 9 months.

On the 17th inst., Mr. Lewis Baxter, aged 68 years and ten months.

In Boston, on the 12th inst., Mrs. Rebecca Roddan, (mother of the late Father Roddan) aged 69 years, formerly of this town.

At Newbern, (N. C.) on the 3d inst., Henry Trask of this town, corporal in Co. G, 24th Regiment Mass. Volunteers, aged 19 years and 18 days.

The last enemy, whom no sentinel can challenge, found him at the post of duty, his vigorous constitution struggled for a while with fever, but yielded at last to the final summons. A few extracts from a letter of Capt. Richardson, announcing the sad intelligence to his parents, is the best obituary.

"You must allow me to sympathize in your great affliction. I can do this sincerely for I have lost in him a steady, temperate, brave soldier; an honest, trustworthy, honorable man, and I know that you have bade adieu to a dutiful, faithful son."

"Feeling such perfect confidence in him I appointed him corporal, and I trust that his good behaviour, and the patriotic services he has rendered to his country, will in some degree lessen the sorrow this sad blow will cause."

"In expressing the true sympathy which I feel I must not forget the men of my command, who as well as myself feel his loss; they sat by his side night and day attending to his little wants, and will bury him to-morrow morning with military honors."

However grateful it would have been to have seen his remains placed with those of his relations, or in the "Soldiers' Rest" which has been considerably assigned to such in the Wollaston Cemetery, let us reconcile ourselves in the thought that they lie quietly beneath the sighing pines of the genial South, and that he himself is

"Where no sigh of memory sweeteth;
Where no tear of misery weetheth;
Hearts to bleed or break no more.
Past all the cold world's scolding,
Gone the night, and broke the morning,
With seraphic light adorning
Life's glad waves and golden shore."

I hear de Pres'dent, hab say,
De darkeys all mus' go;
He going to kolonize 'em all,
But where he doesn't know;
Oh what piece ob nonsense, Abe!
Now mind I tell you so.

What for you send de darkeys off,
D'you want de land to spoil?
You know dey wanted berry much
To cultivate de soil;
And dat he needed by de whiter,
Because he used to toil.

What for you send de darkeys off?
He nebbor do you harm;
He find you bread and butter, too,
And keep your babies warm;
For all de sadders hab, de owe
To toiling darkeys arm.

What for you send de darkeys off?
Why you no' make him free,
And pay him for his labor here?
Why you no' let him be?

You 'fraid he plague you, nonsense Abe,
He good as you or me.

Sweet June

Lo! from the lovely arms of May
The golden June appears,
Born in the early Summer's ray,
And Spring's departing tears;
She comes; her sister bade her live
To gladden us with blooms and cheers—
With tender love-light in her eye,
Sweet June!

She beareth on her bosom, flowers
More bright than those of Spring,
And round her golden head, fair hours,
Thine purest blessings bring—
For which the tenuous warblers sing
Rich praises with their vocal powers,
And insects hum upon the wing—
Sweet June!

She smileth on us all—sweet June!
The false—the pure and true—
And wreaths around us sweet perfume,
That flow the ether through;
And, softly smiling, doth declare,
In words that banish every gloom—
Our "God is love,"—and everywhere,
Sweet June!

The Wind and Leaf, or Elopement.

O listen, ladies, and I'll tell you brief
A touching tale, true as history,
The Wind and Leaf held dalliance—"Gentle Leaf,"
Began the Wind, "awake and fly with me!"
For then I pass'd the beds where roses are;
And though their whispers fragrant woo'd my sins,
And every little bud shone like a star,
I thought on thee; arise and come away!
Thy sisters dark are sleeping in the dew,
I would not rouse their coldness with a sigh;
But thou the beautiful, and I the true,
Were meant for common passion—let us fly!"

The Leaf complied, and ere a day was done
Was flung aside—a thing to tread upon.

Anecdotes.

You are the very person I wanted, said a lady at a ball to an officer; you must dance with Miss Clark. Come, I'll introduce you to her.

Excuse me, I am no dancer.
Oh, but you can't refuse now. She is a pretty girl, and has a fortune of thirty thousand dollars. Why, really, I am not a marrying man myself, but if your ladyship please, I will mention it to my mess.

A gentleman of New York speaking to another who attended the funeral of one of their acquaintances, was asked in the usual way of exclamation—Is he dead?

He replied, I don't know whether he is dead or not; but at all events, they have buried him on suspicion.

A native of the Emerald Isle was lately asked how he could tell that a man was drunk.
Faith, answered Pat, I'd never be after saying that a man was drunk at all, without I saw him attempt to light his pipe at a pump.

That was very greedy of you, Herby, to eat your little sister's share of cake?
You told me, I was always to take her part, said Herby.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH SECURED,

by the use of the

Great Spring and Summer Medicine,

DR. L. L. LANGLEY'S

Root and Herb Bitters,

Composed of Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Yellow Dock, Prickly Ash, Thoroughwort, Kalmuck, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., all of which are so compounded as to act in concert, and assist Nature in eradicating disease.

The effect of this medicine is most wonderful—it acts directly upon the bowels and blood, by removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating them into healthy action, renovating the fountains of life, purifying the blood, cleansing it from all humors, and causing it to course anew through every part of the body; restoring the invalid to health and usefulness.

They cure and eradicate from the system, Liver Complaint, that main-wheel of so many diseases; Jaundice in its worst forms, all Bilious Diseases and foul stomach, dyspepsia, costiveness, all kinds of humors, indigestion, headache, dizziness, piles, heartburn, weakness, pains in the sides and liver, a disordered stomach, or indigestion, to which all are more or less subject in Spring and Summer.

More than 2,000,000 persons have been cured by this medicine. It is highly recommended by Physicians everywhere. Try it, and you will never regret it.

Sold by all Dealers in Medicine everywhere at only 25 and 35 cents per bottle.

THE SPECIFIC PILL

A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR
Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness,
and Genital Irritability in either sex.

This Malady, the terrible consequences of
which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insiduous,
and therefore dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It is the very spring of Life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and sinks the unhappy victim into imbecility and a permanent grave! From one to six boxes of the SPECIFIC PILL will suffice to effect a permanent cure in the most Aggravated Cases,
whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse
or Excesses.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.
We believe it to be, in the treatment of Spermatorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine
can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]

I have found them all that could be desired.—
Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used
them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years.
I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E.

The Longing.

From out this dim and gloomy hollow,
Where hang the cold clouds heavily,
Could I but gain the clew to follow,
How blessed would the journey be!
Alas! I see a fair dominion,
Through time and change all vernal still;
But where the power, and what the pinion,
To gain the ever-blooming hill?

Afar I hear the music ringing—
The lulling sounds of heaven's repose,
And the light gales are downward bringing
The sweets of flowers the mountain knows.
I see the fruits, all golden glowing,
Beckon the blossoms leaves between,
And o'er the blossoms that are blowing,
Nor bright nor winter's wrath hath been.

To sons that shine forever, tender,
O'er fields that fade not, sweet to flee;
The very winds that there may wander,
How healing must their breathing be!
But lo! between us rolls a river,
O'er which the wrathful tempest raves;
I feel the soul within me shiver
To gaze upon the gloomy waves.

Straps.

Tell me angelic hosts, ye messengers of love, shall swindled printers here below, have no redress above?
The shining angel band replied:—
"To us is knowledge given, delinquents on the printers' books can never enter heaven!"

who would improve must have either faithful
or severe friends.

"Mother," said a little fellow four years old, "if a man is a mister, ain't a woman a mystery?"

Everybody sees the cloud on the horizon,
but who thinks of the clear sky above him?

"Sir, this horse you sold me can't be made to budge the first step." "Well, didn't I guarantee him as never starting?"

WOMAN'S RIGHTS. If she cannot be captain of a ship, may she always command a snack.

Miscellaneous.

The Closest Shave in My Life.

The prison at D. is, every way considered,
under a better organized and surer system of administration than any similar institution I have known. As we wandered through the chambers in the free part of the prison, we came to one, from the window of which a man was looking so anxiously that he did not hear us enter. When he turned round, his eyes were glistening with tears. The warden said he did nothing but stand at the window at all times when he was unoccupied.
He was a sailor we learned, whose offence
was that he had beaten almost to death a comrade for speaking slightly about his wife.
He was in for five years, six months of which had passed, and he was one of the best men in prison. They had found out that he was accomplished, that there was no better barber; so he was elevated above
his fellows, to the extent of a dignified position, and the responsibility of razors.

He has shaved me many a time better than I can shave myself. Would you like a prison shave, gentlemen? said the warden.

When my face was shining with the soap,
the warden said:
We will leave you for five minutes Mr.—,
is that time enough, Johnson?

Quite time enough, sir, answered Johnson.
The prisoner and I were left alone. My companions went away in another direction from that which we had been pursuing, and the warden swung the door wide as he passed through, leaving it unsecured. From my position I saw them walk along the top of the wall until they came to a corner, where they spoke with the officer in charge. Then they moved on, officer and all, out of sight.

Presently the prisoner spoke. It's a ticklish thing, this shaving, isn't it? said he.
But my hand is steady. I can do what I please. Be good enough to keep still just now. I am close to a large vein, as you may see, right in your neck. Keep very still, and don't stir. I know what would happen, and so do you, if you stirred or spoke a word.

Good God! These words were dubious words; but the glare of the man's eye, as he came round in front of me, was appalling.
I could not have uttered a syllable if I had died otherwise.

Now, said he, listen, but don't you move,
and he pressed the flat blade against my throat, as if by way of warning. I don't like this. I can't stand it. I'm going! And so, help me God, if you try to stop me, or make any noise, both of us shall have to die! I would rather not hurt you; but—remember!

He sprang away, caught up my coat and hat, which lay near, still keeping the razor in his hand. The moment its frightful contact was removed, my inertness vanished. I leaped up, seized a chair in which I had sat, and shouted lustily. He turned on me like a tiger.

Ah, you will have it, then? he cried, and rushed toward me.

I thrust him aside with the heavy chair,
and hitting it high in the air, brought it down
crashing upon him. He sank for a second, but quickly rose again. He was heavier than I, and twice as strong, I suppose. Persons who have thus been in positions of great danger will not be astonished to hear that I forgot, after my first cry, to call out at all.
I thought only of defending myself.

This state of things did not last more than a quarter of a minute, and in sheer desperation, I made use of a trick which I had once before seen successfully employed. I moved my eyes suddenly from him, and then stared wildly into the space behind him, pointing at the same time in the same direction with my arm. By a lucky chance I pointed to the window.

I think the movement saved my life.
He stopped, irresolute, glanced at the window, flung his hand over his head, gasped
as he was choking, and dashing the razor against the stone wall, fell trembling upon his knees. As I stepped swiftly across the floor he called out to me:

Don't go! he said. Stand there right at the door, if you choose, but wait a minute.
It's all over now; and perhaps, if you hear me you won't wonder that I was driven mad.

I hardly knew how to act; but as I involuntarily checked my steps he continued:

Look out of that window, sir, and you'll see, just over the road, a woman with a child in her arms standing in a doorway. That's my wife and baby. She doesn't know I am here—thank God for that. I came here under a wrong name, and she supposes I am far away at sea. I am sure it would break her heart to know the truth. Well, sir, that's my home. I've seen it, and I've seen her every day now, these three months. It used to make me crazy, but I bear it better now.
But this chance—this great chance—was too much for me. And to think that I came near losing all hope of ever seeing her again.

Could I doubt those struggling sobs and those tears? There was truth in every tone.
I looked through the window, and saw, as he told me, a woman standing on a threshold opposite, with a little child. She tossed it up laughingly once or twice and disappeared.
You won't trust me, I know, said the prisoner; but I beg you not to let the warden know of this. It's no use, I know, Well,
I swear that I'll be true to home after this.
Nothing but three years solitary now, and who can live through that? No, no, you'll let this go by won't you? You may believe me—you may indeed.

Feet shuffling along the passages announced the return of my companions. The prisoner endeavored to calm himself and I put on an air of unconcern which I think was very successful under the circumstances.

Not shaved yet? said the warden, astonished.

I have broken my razor, said Johnson, looking appealingly at me. See, sir! I must have another.

Very well, said the warden. Will you wait? he asked me.

I think not, said I. Another time will do for me.

So I wiped my face, and we went on our
way.

I could not resist visiting the wife of Johnson. I discovered that his story was true, and learned his real name. She was happy in her ignorance of his real condition.
I sought to ascertain whether she was able to sustain herself until he should rejoin her;
and then she told me that Mr.—, the warden
of the prison, had also come to her, shown interest in her behalf, for which favor
she could not well account, and assured her
of his aid and protection in any need that might come to her. She was most grateful,
but wondered why he had done so.

A few months ago the following newspaper paragraph appeared.

It is a custom at the prison of D. to permit
prisoners whose terms are within a few weeks of expiration, to work outside the walls under the supervision of an officer. A few weeks ago, however, it was declined by a man,
who, as his time of freedom drew near, appeared more restless under his confinement than any other. On enquiry it was found that this prisoner had a wife and child living directly within the view of the walls, and that for nearly three years he had seen her daily, she being all the while ignorant of his imprisonment, and very innocently supposing that her husband, who was a sailor, was at sea on a long voyage. He was unwilling that at the last moment the fact should be revealed to his wife; and at his own request,
he continued within the walls until his liberation, which took place last week.

A Plea for Beards.

I am for beards out and out, because I think the Maker of the beard was and is.
This is reason enough; but there are many others. The misery of shaving, its expense, its consumption of time—a very corporation
existing for no other purpose but to shave mankind. Campbell, the poet, who had always a bad razor, I suppose, and was late of rising, said he believed the man of civilization who lived to be sixty had suffered
more pain in litters every day in shaving,
than a woman with a large family had from her lyings-in. This would be hard to prove;
but it is a process that never gets pleasant
by practice; and then the waste of time and temper—the ugliness of being ill or unshaven.
Now, we can easily see advantages in it;
the masculine gender is intended to be more out of doors, and more in all weathers, than the smooth-skinned ones, and this protects him and his Adam's apple from harm. It acts as the best of all respirators to the monsoon and the east wind. Besides, it is a glory; and it must be delightful to have and to stroke a natural beard—not one like bean-stalks or a bottle-brush, but such a beard as Abraham's or Abed-el-Kader's. It is the beginning ever to cut, that makes all the difference. I hazard a theory, that no hair of the head or beard should ever be cut, or needs it, any more than the eyebrows or eyelashes. The finest head of hair I know, is one which was never cut. It is not too long;
it is soft and thick. If you cut it off, the poor hair does not know when to stop; and if our eyebrows were so cut, they might be made to hang over our eyes, and be wrought into a veil. Besides, think of the waste of substance of the body in hewing away so much hair every morning, and encouraging an endless rotation of crops! Well then, I go in for the beards of the next generation—
the unborn beings whose beards will be wagging when we are away! But of course they must be clean. But how are we to support our porridge and kail? Try it when young, when there is just a shadowy down on the upper lip, and no fears but they will do all this elegantly even. Nature is slow and gentle in her teaching, even the accomplishment of the spoon.—Dr. John Brown.

Aid to Families of Deceased Volunteers.

The following are the provisions of an act passed during the last session of the Legislature, giving aid to the widows and children of deceased volunteers. We publish them for the information of those interested, and because it is not generally known that such a law exists:

"Any town or city may raise money by taxation or otherwise, and if necessary apply
the same under the direction of its Selectmen, or Mayor and Aldermen, or City Council, for the aid of the widow or children who were dependent upon any one of the inhabitants of said town or city, who may have died while in the active service of the United States, and said inhabitant, were a volunteer duly enlisted and mustered into the service of the United States, whose wife or child might have received aid under the provisions of said chapter sixty-six of the laws of the present year.

"No sums shall be so applied to the wife
or children of any such deceased volunteer for a period of more than one year after the passage of this act, nor more than one month
after the passage of any further act of Congress allowing a pension or other provision to the widow or to the children of such deceased volunteer.

To Prolong the Beauty of Cut Flowers.

Mr. E. A. Maling states that for keeping flowers in water, finely powdered charcoal, in which the stalks can be stuck at the bottom of the vase, preserves them surprisingly, and renders the water free from any obnoxious qualities. When cut flowers have faded, either by being worn a whole evening in one's dress, or as a bouquet, by cutting half an inch from the end of the stem in the morning, and putting the freshly trimmed end instantly into quite boiling water, the petals may be seen to become smooth and resume their beauty, often in a few minutes. Colored flowers, carnations, azaleas, roses, and geraniums, may be treated in this way. White flowers turn yellow. The thickest textured flowers amend the most, although azaleas revive wonderfully. The writer has seen flowers that have lain a whole night on a table after having been worn for hours, which at the breakfast next morning were perfectly renovated by means of a cupful of hot water.

A Sensible Item.

The Portland papers now charge for the insertion of deaths and marriages. This is but a small item in the large amount gratitously done by the printer for the public.—
There are some who can be satisfied with nothing but a New York or Boston paper, while a more deserving paper, printed at their own door, laboring for the public interests in their locality, giving them importance in community, recording the marriages of themselves or their children, and faithfully telling when their nearest and dearest have been gathered to the common resting place
of mankind—gets no support from them.—
A man who despises a local paper, yes,
even he who refuses it support, while he devotes its price to any luxury, on the excuse that he "can't afford it," has no sense to realize its value, or is hardened enough to
— One day a paper publishes the death of a child; the next day, perhaps, the father comes into the office and stops his paper because he can get a Boston or New York paper fifty cents a year cheaper! How thoughtless persons are who refuse to sustain home newspapers. The first paper is, and always should be, the home paper.

How to Get Customers.

To the merchant or dealer who is sure of his ability to fill orders on the most favorable
terms, the attainment of an adequate publicity is the matter of primary concern. If his circle of trade is properly the county in which he lives, then he should take effectual measures to let every family in the county
know what he sells, and on what conditions.
It is idle to speak of the cost as an impediment. He might as well object to the cost of sheltering his goods from bad weather,
protecting them from thieves, or dealing them out to customers. All the other cost of his business is incurred without adequate motive or return, so long as the essential element of his business is neglected or scamped. If his location and his stock only entitle him to expect the custom of his own township and neighborhood, then he should incur the expense of fully informing that locality. Just so with the wholesale merchant who aspires to a custom co-extensive with his State, his section, or the whole Union. If he is prepared to satisfy so wide a demand on favorable terms, the expense of apprising those whom he desires for customers of the nature of his business, the character of his stock, the range of his prices, and the reasons why he should be dealt with, is one which he cannot refuse to incur without gross incompetency
and ruinous prodigality.

A Chapter for Men.

Very frequently do I wonder why there is so much said to women about making home
happy, and nothing said to the "lords of creation." Does any one suppose they are so perfect that they do not need advice? Are they always kind and cheerful, and do they never speak cross? A woman may try to make her home pleasant and comfortable, but
all is in vain if the husband comes in moody.
A sudden chill is thus thrown over all the merry group—the household is gloomy and silent, the cross man has cast his shadow.— Why did he allow that frown, to shade his brow as he entered? He did not need to speak cross to his wife, and snap at his children, they surely did not deserve it. Such action only tends to alienate the affections of his family, and there is nothing worse than to lose the affections of one's home friends. I do wish for the sake of my sex, that those who have so much good advice to give, would let the men have a little. I know of no class that needs more than these "rulers" of the household. Don't they fret and scold if the least thing is out of order, never noticing the thousand and ten things prepared expressly for their comfort? Don't they raise a row
among the children, scolding one, boxing
another, and whipping a third, making music that is anything but pleasant to hear? Don't they have the sulks a week on a stretch, when nobody, not even themselves, knows any cause for it? I tell you the men are anything but perfect. There are some noble exceptions, I admit, but they are few. I do not mean to condemn all for the faults of the majority. In more than half the families where there is discord and strife, men are the most to blame, and I hope we shall hear less scolding of the women for the errors of the "stern sex."—A. R., in Rural New Yorker.

A Shrewd Feminine.

A young man of much modesty, who was left alone in charge of a dry goods store in Pittsfield during dinner hour, received a visit from a very beautiful young lady, who after selecting several pieces of goods, expressed a desire to try on a hoop skirt. The blushing clerk was much embarrassed by the proposition, but as the lady insisted, and appeared to be inclined to carry out her intentions in the store, he begged her to walk into a private room at the back part of the store. This she did, taking the goods she had selected.
The clerk feeling great hesitation about hurrying a lady in so delicate an operation, left her some fifteen minutes undisturbed, but thinking at last that she must have had sufficient time to re-arrange her toilet, gently
opened the door, and found the window open,
and the handsome lady, the goods, and the hoop skirt gone.

Employed and Employers.

"Make yourself so useful to your employer that he cannot do without you," was the counsel of a father to his son when he left the old homestead to enter as an apprentice
to learn a mechanical trade.

Volumes have been written, lectures of hours in length have been spoken eloquently and earnestly, and sermons have been preached, on the duties of employed and employers, but the above quoted injunction comprises the whole duty of the employed, and if the employed enter upon his duties with a capacity adequate to acquiring a respectable proficiency in the business he has chosen, he will succeed, and must inevitably place himself in the position indicated by the father above quoted.

If the young man enter on his duties with the determination to succeed, he will use with care the tools placed in his hands; he will have a care that the material is not wasted;
he will be diligent at his work; he will give his whole mind, for the time being, to the interests of his employer; if he is required to do an unpleasant job, or work "over time," he will do it with alacrity; he will be respectful to his superiors and courteous to his equals; unfortunately, he will have to learn to apply a little patience and philosophy to stand against the ridicule of his fellow workmen, who are too apt to laugh at him for his faithfulness, but let those laugh who win,
which he is sure to do, and that speedily, if
he holds to the course marked out.

Now, we will suppose that the apprentice has followed the course above indicated. Can it be possible that he should not be known and marked by his employer? Will not an employer appreciate his faithfulness? Will he not give him employment in preference to an untried stranger, or an indifferent acquaintance? Depend upon it, he will. He may not appreciate your integrity and faithfulness
morally, but his pocket will, and your position is gained. He cannot, without a pecuniary sacrifice, do without you!—Waltham Sentinel.

Curious Phenomenon.

"How is it that you raise such large and nice onions?" I asked of an Iowa farmer, as I was sitting at table with him, and observing some on the table.

"Well," said he, "we sprout the seed with boiling water, and then plant it early and in good ground."

"Sprout the seed in boiling water?" I exclaimed, inquiringly. "What do you mean, sir by that? Won't boiling water kill the seed?"

"Not at all," he replied; "but it will sprout them, in one minute's time."

"It will? It looks incredible," I replied, with surprise.

"Well, you try it," he replied, "when the time comes to plant, and you'll find it just as I tell you."

And, sure enough, when spring came, and
my neighbor was planting his onion seed,
being present, I said: "Jewell, last winter,
there was a man in Iowa told me that to sprout in one minute. Suppose you try it?"

"Very well," said he. And taking the teakettle from the stove, he poured the boiling water on the seed, which he had in a saucepan. Looking closely at it for a moment, he exclaimed, "You have told rightly.—
Only look there."

I looked, and behold, the little sprouts
about as large as horse hairs were shooting out of the opened ends of the seeds! He did not retain the water on the seed above
three seconds, and in less than one-half minute after it was poured off, the sprouts were projecting from the seeds.

My Iowa friend assured me that this process would advance the growth of the onion
two or three weeks beyond the ordinary method of planting without sprouting.

Youth and Old Age.

If a tree does not blossom and bring forth fruit in the spring, it generally is dead all the year after; so if in the spring and morning
of your days you do not bring forth fruit to God, it is a hundred to one that you bring forth no fruit to him, when the evil days of old age shall overtake you, wherein you shall say, you have no pleasure; for, as the Son of Sirach observes: "If thou hast gathered nothing in thy youth, what canst thou find in thine old age?"

Washing Silk.

No person should ever wring or crush a piece of silk when it is wet, because the creases thus made will remain forever, if the silk is thick and hard. The way to wash silk is to spread it smoothly upon a clean board, rub white soap upon it and brush it with a clean hard brush. The silk must be rubbed until all the grease is extracted, then the soap should be brushed off with clean cold water, applied to both sides. The cleansing of silk is a very nice operation.—
Most of the colors are liable to be extracted with washing in hot suds, especially blue and green colors. A little alum dissolved in the last water that is brushed on the silk, tends to prevent the colors from running. Alcohol and camphene mixed together is used for removing grease from silk.—Scientific American.

Artificial Hoofs for Horses.

It is impossible to calculate the various useful purposes to which gutta percha may be applied.

One of the most ingenious applications recently made of this valuable substance, is that of making artificial hoofs for horses' feet.—
Many ingenious devices have been resorted to, to attain this result, but the adoption of gutta percha will, doubtless, supersede all others, as soon as its efficacy becomes recognized. What is required by the veterinary surgeon, is a substance possessing the consistence of horn, to retain the nails of the shoe; that will readily soften by heat, so

ner many, a horse may be rendered lame, otherwise, would only remain in the slaughter. On the score of humanity, also, this application of gutta serena is to be welcomed.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, June 28th, 1862.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE NEW DEPOT, of the Old Colony and Fall River Company, at the south part of this town, which has been in the course of erection during the winter and spring, has received the finishing touch of the artisans, and will be open for the accommodation of the public on Tuesday next. It is a heavy structure, substantially built of unhammered granite from our quarries; two stories high with cellar and attic, and fronts thirty-eight feet by twenty-eight in depth. The interior has a tasteful finish of grained wood, which corresponds with the massive beauty of the outside.

On the first floor is the ladies' and gentlemen's reception rooms, ticket office, and baggage room. The second story and attic have been fitted up with every convenience, as a dwelling for a small family, of not over a baker's dozen. From this point a fine view is obtained, of a greater part of the town.

Taken in all its parts, it is conceded to be a model Station House, which will outlast time; and one, we think, that the citizens of that vicinity will be pleased with, and consider their patience well rewarded by the accommodations now furnished them.

In the selection of a Depot Master, the Managers have been equally fortunate; we believe a better could not have been made; the appointment has been bestowed upon Mr. Charles E. Gay, favorably known to the community as Baggage Master at the Centre Depot. From his long connection with this road, Mr. Gay is thoroughly versed in the duties which will devolve upon him, added to which, his affable manners and kind disposition, we hazard nothing in saying, that he will make an efficient and popular officer—one in whom the public may confide.

THE FOURTH, this year, unfortunately comes on the wrong day of the week, to suit our convenience—the day preceding publication. In this case, as we have ever lived up to all the requirements of dutiful and loyal subjects; we must ask the indulgence of our correspondents, advertising friends, etc., to hand in their favors as early as Thursday morning, that we may close up our business at an early hour, in order that those in our employ may participate freely in the celebration of the anniversary of the Nation's birthday. "Independence now and Independence forever," was the dying sentiment of that venerable sage and patriot of the Revolution, the elder Adams. May his wish prove prophetic.

The day with us bids fair to be quiet. We hear, however, that the Fire Companies are to have a parade—and the Captain's "Mowing Match," no doubt, will come off as usual.

NEW STORE. We are pleased to learn that the store which was formerly occupied by Caleb Packard on Hancock street, is being fitted up and is shortly to be opened as a first class Boot and Shoe store, where the citizens of Quincy will have an opportunity of purchasing their boots and shoes from a large and well selected stock. We also understand that it will be under the gentlemanly management of Mr. George H. Cummings.

BARNUM'S AQUARIAL GARDENS. There is no public place of amusement in Boston where our readers can spend a few hours so pleasantly and agreeably as at the Aquarial Gardens. The great national dog show which closes this day has met with immense success. Extensive arrangements are now being made to give a grand entertainment on the Fourth of July. The regular genuine Tom Thumb will be present; also the wonderful Madagascarian Albino—including husband, wife and son—whose remarkable peculiarities are, perfectly pure white skin, abundant white silky hair and pink eyes—a remarkable curiosity, certainly; worth double the price of admission. The Great Baby show commences on the 14th of July. Over eighteen hundred dollars in premiums are offered.

THE President of the Horse Railroad, R. B. Leuchars, Esq., we regret to say, has been prostrated on a bed of sickness, by a severe attack of erysipelas. This morning, however, we learn that he is more comfortable, and considered out of danger.

STARS AND STRIPES. We learn that the Hook and Ladder Company, of this town, has purchased a splendid new flag, which it will throw to the breeze on Thursday afternoon next, from a staff erected on the Hook and Ladder House.

THE Fall River News learns, that two hundred of the 7th Mass. Regiment are on the sick list, but none of the number dangerously.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, June 27, 1862.

Among the strange mutations of the present day is the remarkable change of public sentiment, initiating with the Border States, on that vexed question of slavery. The ground taken by many of the leading men of the West, hostile to abolition, is that the negro before the eyes of secessionists, hides all the blessings of our Government—throwing a black shadow on the sun itself. General Rousseau, a Southern man, says that if this war continues one year longer, there will not be a slave on this Continent. Slavery or the Government must fall. He argues that upholding of slavery is not worth our Government—not the loss of life sacrificed every day for freedom. It is not worth the loss of the free navigation of the Mississippi. General Rousseau in his banquet speech at Louisville on Monday last, uses this strong language: "I am for the Government of our fathers against all things and every body. While the liberties of the people are secure under it as they ever have been, I would allow nothing but death to prevent my upholding it. I am ready for the responsibility. A Southern man as I am, born and brought up in the South, with all my sympathies for the South, I could not hesitate one moment when the issue is presented between the negro and the Government of our fathers. I am for the Government of the United States against all its enemies."

There is no mistaking the signs of the times, that as a dernier resort for ending the rebellion, a large portion of the Border State men, either slaveholders or those whose proclivities have heretofore been pro-slavery are coming out for emancipation. Well can we pause in considering this question of grave magnitude and await the action of more time before we decide. Rather than this Government of freedom, should be subverted by devotion to the ebony idol, we say hold on by the Union, but let the negroes slide. With the light we have now on this subject, gradual emancipation seems the most proper course for the Government to advocate.

It is reported that General Banks is to take the place of Mr. Stanton as Secretary of War. The appointment will be found a good one. General Banks is one of the remarkable men of the age. Of humble lineage, without the advantages of a collegiate education—highly gifted innately, whose characteristics embrace a high order of firmness and decision—he has occupied exalted positions in public life with distinguished ability.

As concerns the campaign, the week so far, has been very quiet, with profound interest in the public mind. Tidings of the engagement near Charleston, (S. C.) are too indefinite to be relied on. We are told our army in front of Richmond, lies stretching along a line of ten miles, patient, watching and confident. A fight any moment may be expected—and then—why then the Union arms will be victorious. The real strength of the rebel forces at Richmond, with Beauregard in second command, is unknown to the public mind. This makes General McClellan the more cautious, and ready with his large forces to change his plans of operations at any moment. But the fight must soon come, ending in a glorious victory for the Union and Constitution. The Government does not seem much enlightened on the movements of the rebel Jackson. The whereabouts of the old fox is not known to our armies. We are told that McClellan is calling for reinforcements under the belief that Jackson is in front of him, while Banks and Fremont are convinced that the rebel is largely reinforced, pressing upon them. General Banks having written in vain to this effect, has made a flying visit to Washington for more troops, and he should have them.

Great preparations are making here and in many other cities and towns of New England for the celebration of the Fourth of July. In Boston the demonstrations will be on a more grand scale, than for many previous years, and there will be a great time here. The attractions of the day will offer strong inducements for visitors from the suburban towns.

GRAFTING THE TOMATO. A correspondent of the Horticulturist states that he succeeded perfectly in grafting a scion of tomato, upon the potato vine. He cut about one third of the potato shoot off just above a leaf, taking care not to injure the bud at its base. The scion being shielded from the sun was every day sprinkled with a little water, and it took rapidly. In the fall the tomato was loaded with ripe and unripe fruit grown to a large size. The potato and tomato are allied botanically.

TRANSATLANTIC. The Dutch have decided to abolish slavery in all their colonies by progressive emancipation. All the slaves in the Dutch American possessions are to be free on the 1st of July, 1863, on the following conditions:

1st. An indemnity to be paid to the proprietors of each slave, man, woman or child, of three hundred guilders, or one hundred and twenty dollars of United States money.

2d. The slaves are to be subjected to a system of apprenticeship on the plantations for three years, and receive for their labor a certain amount of wages, one half of which is to be paid by the Government.

REFITTED. That old and favorite Hair-Dressing Saloon, corner of Hancock and Temple streets, has just been renovated by its energetic proprietor, T. G. Emerson, and is now in an excellent summer trim. Our citizens will find at this pleasant resort every thing as neat and convenient, as in its most balmy days. The rooms are cool and comfortable, and under the skilful hands of its popular manager, and his favorite assistant, Professor Layton, a shave can certainly be enjoyed.

A TORNADO AT SPRINGFIELD, MASS. A storm of wind and rain, very remarkable in its effects, passed over Springfield on Saturday evening, causing great damage in some places. On State street, and for some distance south, huge trees were torn up or twisted off, in some cases as cleanly as if cut down with an axe. Chimneys were blown down, and a blacksmith's shop demolished. At West Springfield large hail stones fell and considerable damage was done to trees.

AN INDIA RUBBER OMNIBUS! A Connecticut contemporary states that an ingenious Yankee (what Yankee is not ingenious?) has invented an india rubber omnibus which, when "jam full," will hold a couple more. The inventor has not yet secured his marvelous machine through our Patent Agency, but as soon as he does so, we shall hasten to interest our readers by describing his invention in our columns.

RECEIPTS OF COTTON. The receipts of cotton at New York, for the first three days of the present week, were 1701 bales, of which 794 were by railroad, 398 from Liverpool, 312 from New Orleans, 180 from Aspinwall, 17 from Beaufort, (S. C.) and 9 by the Hudson river.

THE MERRIMAC. A recent court of inquiry at Richmond decided that the destruction of the famous Merrimac by her officers, was unnecessary, and that she ought to have been used to prevent the passage of Federal vessels up James river.

SINGULAR CIRCUMSTANCE. Simon Hazen, now residing in New London county, Conn., twenty-two years of age, has lived under three national governments and in three different towns, and yet has never moved out of the house in which he was born, or changed his residence. Mr. Hazen lived under the monarchy of George III.; then under the Confederacy of the American Colonies; and lastly, under our Federal Constitution. He first resided in the town of Norwich, which was subsequently divided, and the town of Franklin was formed, which included his residence, and in 1861 that part of Franklin where he lived was included in the present town of Sprague.

NOT SO FAST, NEIGHBOR.—The publisher of the North Bridgewater Gazette, says, "a strawberry has been left at our office, four and a quarter inches in circumference," and thinks this will be hard to beat. Not so; we have seen a number of this kind of fruit in the garden of Mr. H. G. Whiting, of this town, which comes up to that mark, and the average run, is uncommonly fair and large. If our brother is credulous, let him make Mr. Whiting a visit, which will well repay him for his trouble, and he will then be convinced that Quincy, is not behind her neighbors in horticultural products.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. This valuable periodical, which is designed more particularly for artisans and mechanics, but recommends itself to all classes of readers, commenced a new volume, (the seventh) on the first instant.

Every number of the work contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

The subjects on which it treats, are the Mechanic Arts, Manufactures, Inventions, Agriculture, Commerce, and the industrial pursuits generally.

It is afforded at the low price of two dollars a year; to clubs a handsome reduction is made.

Munn & Co. publishers, New York City.

WELL PUT. Senator Wade in reply to some disparaging remarks of Senator Powell, of Kentucky, in regard to Massachusetts, uttered the following telling and truthful reply:

"I tell him Massachusetts was never more adorned; there never was more patriotism, there never was more efficiency to extricate the country from the difficulty into which it is plunged, than there is from Massachusetts to-day. How is it with old Kentucky? Did the Senator think that in the remarks he made? His former colleague stood here a year ago preaching the same doctrine of conciliation and anti-coercion, invoking the Constitution in favor of traitors, taking his pay out of the Treasury, holding up his hands to God and swearing he would be loyal to the Constitution, and then sneaking off to the rebel army to stab your Constitution to death. That is the successor of old Henry Clay, of glorious memory. Is not that degeneracy? The Senator himself confesses he has been suspected, at least. Should he, standing upon ground like that, have made this inquiry into the standing of present and past Senators?"

LAUGH AND BE WISE. The man that laughs is a doctor without a diploma. His face does more good in a sick room than a bushel of powders, or a gallon of bitter draughts. People are always glad to see him. Their hands instinctively go half-way to meet his grasp, while they turn involuntarily from the clammy touch of the dyspeptic who speaks in the groaning key. He laughs you out of your faults, while you never dream of being offended with him; and you never know what a pleasant world you are living in until he points out the sunny streaks on his pathway.

PROFITS OF THE WAR. The proprietors of the seven Boston daily newspapers, received, respectively, the following amounts from the State Military Fund for the year 1861. Per State Auditor's Report:

|---------------|------------|
| Boston Herald | $1,231.00 |
| " Journal | 935.38 |
| " Traveller | 736.62 |
| " Post | 685.35 |
| " Advertiser | 495.96 |
| " Transcript | 455.01 |
| " Courier | 277.25 |
| | $4,876.57 |

Of this amount, it will be seen, the Boston Herald received more than one quarter, showing conclusively, that this enterprising paper stands at the head of the list as an advertising medium.

RUSSELL'S HORSE RAILROAD GUIDE, FOR BOSTON AND VICINITY. This is a neat little volume, and, as its name imports, is a guide to those who have occasion to travel by this mode of conveyance. We think, the publisher has "met a want in the community," which, as the importance of Horse Railroads becomes better known, will be more and more appreciated.

EARLY POTATOES. We have seen some of this year's crop, raised in the garden of Mr. John Green, of this place; they are fair, and, if not ripe, are of a size suitable for the table.

NANTUCKET TELEGRAPH. The Nantucket Inquirer says that a letter from Mr. Bishop, dated during the present month he hopes and expects to get a cable laid for telegraphing not only between Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, but to the Continent. The ultimate destination of the cable is to the Light Vessel at the South Shoal, thereby taking off foreign news eighteen or twenty hours before the arrival of the steamer at the city of New York.

BUSINESS IN PHILADELPHIA. The Philadelphia North American says that shipbuilders in that city never enjoyed more prosperous times. The shipyards are as busy as well patronized tailors' shops on Saturday night.

TENTS. The Government is preparing to shelter our armies against the blazing sun of the South. Seventy-five thousand cotton or linen tents have been ordered in the city of New York, alone, and will be ready for delivery early in July. They will be made on the French pattern which is considered the best.

THE GERMAN OCEAN has recently overflowed ten thousand acres of fertile land in Norfolk County, England.

FROM THE FAR SOUTH. The Hartford Manufacturing Company of Plated Ware, received on the 29th ult., a large order from one of their old customers in New Orleans. This is the first order from that city since March 1861, when the secession frenzy broke out.

GLEASON'S LITERARY COMPANION. This is the best family paper extant. Its articles are all of a high moral order. The stories, although written to please, never fail to instruct. The poetry breathes the pure inspiration of the muse. The anecdotes and other readings are spicy and humorous, and the essays on household affairs, are what every good wife will understand and appreciate. Mr. Gleason is a prince among publishers, and he has done much to raise the standard of American periodical literature.

PROOF READING. Up to the present time, Boston undeniably has surpassed all other places, on this side of the Atlantic, in a tasteful and elegant manner of getting up books. The superiority of English publications has arisen from three concurring circumstances; perfect typography, good paper, and composition so correct that a literal error is very rare indeed. The readers in a first class English printing office are educated men. Oliver Goldsmith occupied such a position for a time. The reader on the London Times receives an editorial salary—but has to forfeit one guinea for every typographical error, even a turned letter, in each day's impression; if he marked the error on the proof, the compositor who neglected to correct it pays the forfeit.

TRUE GRIT. Not far from this city is a young woman whose husband is among the volunteers for the country and freedom, and who takes her place in the field, clears land, sows crops, and does all the work on a new piece of land. That is the true grit.—Augusta Journal.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The first three days of recruiting for Union troops in New Orleans brought 283 men into the different regiments.

The charge of sick and wounded Pennsylvania soldiers has been turned over to the United States authorities by the State officers.

An old lady recently died in Boston, aged ninety-six years, who in 1828, purchased an annuity of $200 by depositing in the Massachusetts hospital life insurance company $1,856. She lived to draw from the company $6,700.

There are now at West Point 174 cadets, twenty-eight of whom comprise the first class, twenty-six the second class, thirty-two the third class, and eighty-eight the fourth class. About ninety appointments have lately been made, but are not included in the above figures.

The proprietors of the Norfolk Day Book offer that paper for sale, affirming that it has annually paid a net profit of $5,000.

Many of the husbands in Aroostook county having gone to war, their wives are clearing lands and doing all sorts of hard work.

The Machias Union speaks discouragingly of the prospects of the hay crop in that county.

The great Harper's Ferry bridge was carried away by the recent freshet.

The Charleston Courier mentions a plot to depose Jeff. Davis and create a military dictator in his place. It will wait a little while the Federals will do the job for them.

The Soldiers' Home in Boston accommodates six hundred men with beds, and two thousand can be subsisted there daily.

The officers of the Sumter have arrived at Nassau, in a British vessel.

It is said that one hundred and seventy prizes in all, have been thus far captured by our navy, many of them of great value.

The city authorities of New York have appropriated $8,000 wherewith to celebrate the coming Fourth of July.

Among the petitions that have been recently presented in Congress, are, one for a ship canal from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi river, and one from certain merchants of New York praying for a bankrupt act.

General Halleck married a grand-daughter of Alexander Hamilton—the daughter of Schuyler Hamilton.

The Pacific Telegraph line has been broken in several places, but the principal trouble is the high water in Green River, where the line has been carried away, and there are no present means of crossing to repair it.

The morning train for Fall River, was detained about an hour last Saturday, in consequence of the engine and tender getting off the track by the displacement of a switch at the depot in Boston.

There are now twelve Massachusetts regiments attached to the army before Richmond, viz: the 1st, 7th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 15th, 16th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 23d, 29th.

It is asserted that every pound of cotton sent North from Hilton Head will cost the United States $2—such has been the expense of fancy abolition planting.

It is roughly estimated that the government will realize ten millions of dollars from the sale of prizes up to the last of August, and probably twenty-five millions up to the first of January next.

Mr. and Mrs. McFlimsy, and their daughter Flora, are going to Newport this summer, with as many of their friends as at any previous season. Seventy-seven furnished cottages have been taken, and seven have been sold, leaving the whole number, now actually for rent less than thirty. The prospects for a good summer's business was never more encouraging.

The engine Speedwell was drawing the train fired into by the rebel cavalry who made the raid around McClellan's army.

A young officer writing from Norfolk, says, after sleeping in brooks and ponds and swamps, it really seemed good to lie down on the paving stones.

About one hundred and fifty teachers attended their County Association at Duxbury, and were entertained with cordial hospitality.

The railroad bridge entering Newbern, (N. C.), which the rebels destroyed on the capture of that place, has been rebuilt, and in a few days the whistle of the locomotive will again be heard in that city.

Some specimens of a peculiar kind of bug, found preying on potato plants, have been left at the office, by Mr. Snell, of Campello. With their black wings closed, they resemble miniature turtles.

Rose Brown, a colored woman, died in Norwich, (Conn.) on Saturday last, aged 100 years and seven months. She was born in that town and passed her long life near where she was born and died.

Florida, at the time she succeeded, had in her treasury four dollars and fifty-five cents. We understand that the whole of this sum has been expended in defending the rights of the South.

Among the prizes secured by the recent capture of Norfolk, are the books of the navy and there while that was under rebel rule. They contain the names and services of all those who gave aid and comfort of any description to the rebel navy.

The Secretary of the Treasury has notice from Maryland that her quota of the war tax is ready. This is the second State that has met this obligation, Pennsylvania the first, Maryland second.

The American Print Works at Fall River will resume operations on Monday next.

Mr. William Everett, youngest son of Mr. Edward Everett, who has been for some time a member of Trinity College in Cambridge, England, has recently gained a scholarship after a severe examination in classics and mathematics.

A gentleman in Springfield sent his Hibernian man of all work into his garden to pick the strawberries the other day. After a long absence Patrick returned with about half a bushel, the majority of them being green ones. He had stripped the vines clean.

The Richmond Dispatch of the 18th inst., announces that Jeff. Davis was taken ill at Raleigh, (N. C.), whether he had gone to visit his sick child. Anticipations expressed he would return to the Confederate capital in a few days, but these hopes may prove fallacious.

A letter has been received in Taunton from a sergeant in the twenty-ninth Mass. regiment dated—"Near Norfolk, Va. Camp Misery, fifteen miles from the 'Knowledge of God,' May 23d, 1862."

On the 21st inst., of lung fever, after an illness of one week, George F., son of Mr. Joseph and Mrs. Nancy Ewell, aged 17 years and 11 months.

George was a very promising and exemplary young man. He was intelligent and industrious; an affectionate son, a kind hearted brother, and a pleasant companion.

He was endeared to all who knew him, by his mild and modest disposition and gentle manners. How greatly he will be missed by his afflicted parents and sorrowful brothers and sisters who mourn his loss.

Though taken from them in the early summer of the year, may they be comforted in their bereavement, by the memory of his virtues, and their own cheering faith, which assures them of a happy re-union in "That better land."

★ ★ ★ To Horse Owners.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT
For Horses is unrivaled by any, in all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Sprain and Rheumatism may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless, but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

NORFOLK, ss. Superior Court, Apr Term, 1862.

JOSEPH S. HEAL, President, Directors, and Company of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad, a Corporation duly established by Law, whose place of business is in Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, PLAINTIFF, vs. ALEXANDER S. SARONI, of the County of New York, in the State of New York, Defendant.

This is an action of Contract to recover Two Thousand Dollars alleged to be due to the Plaintiff by the Defendant on the Twenty-fourth day of January, A. D. 1862, as set forth in the Plaintiff's writ of that date. And it appearing to the Court, by the suggestion of the Plaintiff, that the Defendant is not an inhabitant of this Commonwealth, nor was resident therein at the time of the service of said writ—and that he has no last and usual place of abode, tenant, agent or attorney in this Commonwealth, known to the Plaintiff, or to said Officer—and that no personal service of said writ has been made upon the said Saroni—

It is ordered by the Court here, that the Plaintiff give notice to the Defendant of the pendency of this action, by causing an attested copy of this Order to be published in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, once in a week, three weeks successively, the last publication thereof to be thirty days, at least, before the Third Monday of September next.

EZRA W. SAMSON, Clerk.

GOODHUE'S Drummer.

LADIES and Gents—if you are wise,

You'll study to economize;

Be careful when you "goods," shall buy,

You do not pay for them too high.

"A sixpence saved"—we all have learned,—

"Is equal to a shilling earned;"

This "gentle hint" we give to you,

That you may patronize Goodhue.

One thing we'd have you understand,

He deals in nothing "contraband";

Another thing we'd have you know—

No other man sells "goods" so low.

Goodhue his customers will "suit"

In best of style, from head to foot;

And make them feel, when they want more,

The place to buy is at his Store.

Some folks it very much surprises,

How 'tis he's selling at such prices;

Some think he some time will rue it,

But Goodhue knows just how to do it.

Goodhue is bound to make a racket,

Assisted by young HUNT and HACKETT;

And those who wish to make life sunny,

Should trade with them—and SAVE THEIR MONEY.

As Spring is coming on—and Summer—

He sends this forth instead of "drummer";

He wishes this, the understanding—

GOODHUE sells lowest—WEYMOUTH LANDING.

"It is a custom in some places for merchants

to send out men—who, in business parlance,

are called "drummers," to "drum up" customers;

but, as we advise our patrons to study economy,

by purchasing their goods OF US, we—wishing to practice what we teach—send out this MODEST little circular INSTEAD, as much less expensive.

Poetry.

The Crooked Foot Path.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Ah! here it is, the sliding rail
That marks the old, remembered spot—
The gap that struck our school-boy trail,
The crooked path across the lot.

It left the road by school and church,
A penciled shadow, nothing more,
That parted from the silver birch,
And ended at the farm house door.

No line or compass placed its plan;
With frequent bends to left or right
In aimless, wayward curves it ran,
But always kept the door in sight.

The gabled porch, the woodbine green—
The broken millstone at the mill—
Though many a road may stretch between,
The truant child can see its still.

No rocks across the pathway lie—
No fallen trunk is o'er it thrown—
And yet it winds, we know not why,
And turns as if for tree or stone.

Perhaps some lover trod the way,
With shaking knee or leaping heart—
And so, it often runs astray
With sinuous sweep or sudden start.

Or one, perchance, with clouded brain,
From some unholy banquet reeled—
And since, our devious steps maintain
His track across the trodden field.

Nay, deem not thus—no earth-born woe
Could ever trace a faultless line;
Our truest steps are human still,
To walk unloving were divine!

Truants from love we dream of wrath;
O, rather let us trust the more!
Through all the wanderings of the path,
We still can see our Father's door.

The Respectable Man.

I'm a highly respectable man,
And own a magnificent store,
Where I make all the profit I can,
And say can a Christian do more?

I condemn all imprudence in trade,
Even tho' in my very best friend,
And should his prosperity fade,
That day our acquaintance must end.

For I'm firmly convinced of this fact,
If a storekeeper follow my plan,
From his first to his very last act,
He will be a respectable man.

He must never permit any weakness,
In his daily transaction to creep,
To the rich he must cringe in all weakness,
To the poor he a wolf among sheep—

Grind them down to the very last cent,
For the sake of their health work them thin,
All gain for the wealthy is meant,
The poor would but spend it in sin?

For gold is a dangerous snare,
For a poor man will die by its crime;
By taking his wife for fresh air,
And extravagance soon leads to crime;

I'm also a man of nice taste,
See the pictures that hang round my wall,
And really I don't think them waste,
Tho' the gilt frames cost far more than all.

To the opera my daughter and wife
All subscribe, and to concerts as well,
That's part of respectable life—
Ten per cent on the goods that I sell!

In the church I've the very best pew,
It is cushioned with velvet all round,
To my bounty the organ is due,
For it has a respectable sound!

So till my life's journey shall end,
I'll continue as I have begun,
I'll live every millionaire's friend,
And die a respectable man.

Growing Old.

We are growing old—how the thought will rise,
When a glance is backward cast
On some long remembered spot, that lies
In the silence of the past.

It may be the shrine of our early vows,
Or the tomb of early years;
But it seems like a far off isle to us,
In the stormy sea of years.

Anecdotes.

An elderly lady who handling a pair of artificial plates in a dentist's office, and admiring the fluency with which the dentist described them, asked him:

Can a body eat with these things?
My dear ma'am, mastication can be performed with a facility scarcely excelled by Nature herself, responded the dentist.

Yes, I know; but can a body eat with 'em? still queried the old lady.

Biddy, said a lady one evening, we must have sausages for tea, this evening; I expect company.

Yes, ma'am.
Tea-time arrived, and with it the company; the table was spread, and the tea was simmering, but no sausages appeared.

Where are your sausages, Biddy? the lady inquired.

And sure they're in the tay-pot, ma'am. Didn't you tell me we must have 'em for tea?

You are very handsome, said a gentleman to a lady.

Ah! said the lady, so you would say if you did not think so.

And so you would think, answered he, though I should not say so.

A wag passing by a house which had been almost consumed by fire, inquired where it was. Being told it was a baker's, said he: Ah! then the loss will be felt!

Last Sunday a little boy three years and a half old, went to church for the first time. His mother gave him a penny to put in the contribution box which he did, and sat quiet for a few moments, and then wanted to know how soon the man was coming with the candy.

FOR THE PREVENTION AND CURE OF Consumption, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Loss of Appetite, Neuralgia, Female Complaints, and all Disorders of the Nervous and Blood Systems.

This Remedy has obtained a great reputation for most EXTRAORDINARY CURES in ALL STAGES OF CONSUMPTION. It is recommended by many distinguished Physicians in GREAT BRITAIN AND EUROPE—having been used with RESULTS UNPARALLELED in the ANNALS OF MEDICINE.

Hypophosphites have a two-fold and specific action on the one hand, increasing the principle which CONSTITUTES NERVOUS ENERGY, and on the other, being the most POWERFUL BLOOD GENERATING AGENTS KNOWN. In cases of Nervous Debility, or Prostration of the Vital Powers, from any cause, this Remedy has no superior.

"Winchester's Genuine Preparation" is the only reliable form of the HYPOPHOSPHITES, made after the Original Formula of Dr. Churchill.

INQUIRE FOR AND USE NO OTHER! A Fair Trial will be a Cordial Cure. 63 PRICES—In 7 oz. Bottles, $1.—Six Bottles for $5. In 16 oz. Bottles, $2.—Three for $5. Circulars gratis. Sold by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.

THE SPECIFIC PILL.

A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, and Genital Irritability in either sex.

This Malady, the terrible consequences of which are too well known to require more than a bare allusion to them, is one of the most insidious, and therefore dangerous of all the long catalogue of human ills. It saps the very springs of life, rapidly undermines the constitution, and sinks the unhappy victim into imbecility and a permanent grave. From one to six boxes of THE SPECIFIC PILL are sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the most Aggravated Cases, whether Constitutional, or arising from Abuse or Excessive MEDICATION.

We believe it to be, in the treatment of Spermatorrhea, as near a SPECIFIC as any medicine can be.—B. Keith, M. D. [Am. Jour. of Medical Science.]

I have found them all that could be desired.— Their effect has been Truly Wonderful. I used them in a case of Spermatorrhea of long standing, which has been under treatment for years. I think three boxes will complete the cure.—E. P. DIERKE, M. D.

This is not a Homoeopathic Remedy, nor is there any mercury or other deleterious ingredient combined with it.

PRICE—$1 per Box. Six Boxes for $5, by mail, prepaid. For sale by all respectable Druggists, and at the Sole General Depot in the United States, by J. WINCHESTER, 36 John St., N. Y.
